

Pregnant With Twins: My CEO's Tricky Love

Chapter 401 The Truth in The Past

Georgia didn't look back. She just said while walking.

"I know how much you can do. You can investigate these cases, so can I. I just don't want to fight with you anymore. Just stay in prison for the rest of your life. I know much about you. You're afraid of being disdained. Now you will be arrested in prison, so everyone in this world will disdain and mock you. Those prisoners will also humiliate you. Oh, enjoy yourself in prison. I have experienced it once."

After Georgia said this, Sierra cursed her.

However, Georgia didn't say anything. Not so long after that, she asked the bodyguards to give her a sedative and made her pass out.

Then she asked Travis to take Sierra away.

For Robert's sake and with Travis's help, the police posted an announcement to stop the rumors on the internet.

It was a long announcement, but there were only a few points that netizens would care about.

Firstly, Sierra was just Emma. She just had plastic surgery.

Secondly, Sierra had planned to kill someone. Now with certain evidence, she was arrested and waiting for the sentence.

Of course, all the rumors on the internet were fake.

Netizens were talking about history. Emma had been Robert's fiancée, but later, the Lane family started fighting with Georgia. At that time, Emma had been leading the public opinion and spreading rumors to slander Georgia.

After that, Georgia and Robert showed the video about the car accident. Then Emma became the public enemy. She covered her brother's crime of murder, so the Lane family also had been infamous.

People all congratulated Georgia because the truth was finally discovered, and she could finally be Robert's wife. Then one year later, Robert came back with another woman who almost became his wife, but fortunately, he still married Georgia.

The poor woman who had been abandoned was just Sierra. If Sierra was really Emma, things would become more interesting.

What an interesting drama! The netizens were surprised by that.

"It will be popular if there is a show about the story among Georgia, Robert, and Emma."

"I think so. What a dramatic reversal! To be honest, Georgia and Emma are even not like sisters, but like enemies."

"I think both Georgia and Emma are pretty beautiful. Robert is so lucky that the two stunning women have been fighting for him. I'm so jealous of him."

"What a mess. Indeed, the affairs in noble families are like what it plays in the shows, and even much dramatic. Fortunately, this matter is over. Since Sierra is just Emma, a murderer, she must stay in prison for the rest of her life."

The rumors on the internet were finally stopped. After all, the truth that Sierra was just Emma was so striking.

Netizens even didn't care if Sierra really had been imprisoned illegally.

They only cared about the dramatic story between Georgia, Robert, and Emma, which had been more popular than all other news.

After the case was settled, Georgia called Travis.

"Travis, thanks for your help today. Please watch on her in prison. I'm afraid that there is someone behind Sierra. She may be rescued, or something bad may happen to her in prison."

"Don't worry. I will watch on her. I have never expected that Emma is just Sierra. It seems that she really hates you much. She even doesn't let you go until now, and almost succeeds. Finally, you and Robert have got rid of her."

"I hope so. I just feel that it's too tough to stop her. I'm afraid that something will happen again, so I just want you to watch on her. I hope that nothing will happen again. I wanted to punish her in another way, but it is too dangerous."

"And now, I also wanna punish her with law, which is also the best way to torture her. The scariest thing for her is just becoming infamous. Now she is convicted of murder, so she will be miserable in the future. That's also a good way to torture her."

Travis couldn't help laughing.

"I still remember one thing when we were students. She had affairs with many boys and was about to be exposed. Then she slandered you and made you the scapegoat. Indeed, she loves her good fame most. Now she's in prison, which is really the most miserable punishment for her."

Then Travis asked with concern.

"You asked me to send you the information about Jayson's Lab. Have you read it? What's wrong with it? Does it have something to do with Robert?"

"Do you also think so?"

Georgia managed a smile.

"I don't want to confirm it, so I haven't downloaded it yet. I will read it today because I have asked Robert to do a physical examination. I was checking the result, but I haven't finished yet."

"Is it terrible?"

Travis asked worriedly. He wanted to help Georgia. And he wanted to make her happy, even if the cost was that he must watch Georgia living with Robert.

"The medical devices in the hospital can't figure out what is going on with Robert's body. I will go with him to America for a more professional examination. It's terrible, but I don't know what the result may be. I'm scared... Travis, I'm extremely scared."

Georgia told Travis about her feelings.

Georgia's repeated words reminded Travis of the history one year ago.

In fact, he had lost the last hope at that time.

"Gigi, I have been roved these ten years. I was caught by Jayson and forced to be a beggar. I have been a fool for ten years. I guess he also had a lab at that time. He gave me an injection to damage my nerves. But his lab should be a small one at that time. After he believed that I became a fool, he left me alone in D City and let me roam. Ten years later, I even gradually recovered. Sometimes, you shouldn't feel hopeless. Since we haven't found any problems on his body yet, there must be hope. You have always been strong, so as long as you can face it with him together, there will be a way out."

"Yeah, you were also hurt by Jayson ten years ago. I really want to catch that guy and punish him severely. Since he dared to hurt the people I love, I must find him out and let him pay for it."

After Georgia hung up the phone, she downloaded the files that Travis had sent her. She read the files and then watched the result of Robert's examination.

On the other hand, Robert had picked Wesley and Maisie up. When he was driving, he received Travis's phone.

Travis had helped Georgia on Sierra's matter, and Robert also knew that Travis went to visit Georgia today.

Though he was a little jealous of Travis, Georgia's old love, he knew Travis's concern for Georgia was also sincere.

When he was in trouble, it was just Travis who always helped Georgia.

So, Robert had to control his jealousy.

But he still couldn't understand why Travis called him.

After two seconds, Robert finally answered the phone.

"Robert, may I disturb you a minute?"

When Travis said this, he had gone back to his house and was watching the sky on the balcony.

He had made this phone call after hesitating for a long time.

He had to say something to Robert._____

Chapter 402 Travis Gives Up

"I'm driving. Not busy. What's the matter? Oh, thank you first for helping Georgia on Sierra's matter. If you need my help in the future, you can call me. I heard that your company is developing fast, and the games you have invested in have attracted many investors' attention. If you need my investment, you can send me the plan. I will invest in it after I check the plan."

Travis smiled.

"I don't need your help on business. I have a good investor. He's my benefactor, Brenton Ellis."

It turned out that Brenton Ellis was Travis's investor, so Robert had no need to help him on business. Robert asked in confusion.

"So what's the matter? Just tell me. Does something happen to Georgia? Or something about me?"

"In fact, my words may annoy you, but I have to say it, though you have lost your memory."

"It was me who handled the matter about Jayson's lab, but we didn't know you were also there at that time. I would have saved you if I knew it. Georgia didn't tell me this matter. I guessed it when she asked me for the information about the lab. When we talked today, she also told me something about your situation, but she just said you're in a terrible situation."

"So that's what you wanna say? You didn't know I was there, so it wasn't your fault. Georgia also won't blame you."

Robert thought Travis wanted to say sorry for that, but Travis stopped him with a laugh.

"No, I want to tell you something in the past."

"One year ago, I and Georgia have been kidnapped. We got injured at the same time. She was given an injection, causing the miscarriage. She was in a bad situation, and she has lost hope. I was also in a terrible situation. She was judged to be dying, so all her friends went to help her regain hope. You and Vanessa also went there, but both of you couldn't help her. It was my words that cheered her up. You may forget it, but you will remember it sooner or later. Maybe it had confused you for a long time before you lost your memory. Now, I decide to tell you the truth."

"Do you want me to be jealous of you with this matter?"

Robert asked Travis after he kept silent for a long time.

He didn't remember this matter, so in his opinion, Travis was just Georgia's ex-boyfriend. Robert was confident in Georgia's love for him.

However, after Travis told him about his matter, he thought Travis was trying to challenge him.

He was indeed jealous now.

Did it mean that only Travis could cheer Georgia up when Georgia lost her hope?

Travis was the one who knew more about Georgia, not him. Robert became not confident, so he asked this question in an impolite tone. However, Travis sighed.

"You should ask me what did I say to cheer Georgia up."

Robert didn't ask. Maybe he didn't want to ask.

He was afraid that the person Georgia loved most was not him. Travis just continued.

"She has lost her hope at that time. She even couldn't recognize her daughter. I just said that if she couldn't cheer her up,

I would kill you there and let you go with her to hell. I was almost a dead man, so I dared to do anything. After I said that, Georgia suddenly cheered up. I didn't tell you what I had said, because I was jealous of you at that time."

After he said that, the two men were in silence.

Travis was sad about this because he knew that he had lost Georgia long ago.

From that time when he threatened Georgia with Robert's life, and when Georgia cheered her up all of a sudden, he should give up.

On the other hand, Robert had mixed feelings.

"Why do you tell me about this matter? And tell me about it today?"

"I know you will be with her all your life. You will also love her all your life. I never doubt your love for her. Maybe I shouldn't say this. Since you're going to take a further examination in America, I hope you will always have hopes no matter how bad the situation will be. I don't want her to be immersed in sadness again. She has lived a hard life, so I hope she will be happy in the future."

"I don't need you to remind me of this matter."

Robert took a deep breath and said this.

However, after this, he said thanks to Travis.

"Thanks for telling me about this. Don't worry. I won't give up in any situation. I will try to overcome it no matter how much it hurt."

After they hung up the phone, Travis called Brenton.

"Mr. Ellis, could you do me a favor? There must be other labs like Jayson's lab. They use the living to do experiments, so there must be the dead. The dead will be sent to the hospital for examinations. Though it is not possible, I wanna collect the data about these cases. I wanna get the examination results of those dead persons."

"Why are you interested in such data?"

Sarah didn't tell Brenton about this matter about Robert, so Brenton didn't know why Travis wanted to get such data.

"For a friend of mine. Besides, I have also been imprisoned in such a place, so I'm afraid there might be sequelae. I just wanna know the data as much as possible. It's okay if you can't help me. After all, it's hard to find such data."

"I'll ask my people to find it. The data must be secret, so it should be hard, but I will try my best to help you."

Travis smiled after Brenton said this.

"Thank you, Mr. Ellis."

On the other hand, Robert had driven back to his villa.

When he got out of the car, he asked the guards to carry his sleeping mother into the villa.

Then he took Wesley to the gate.

Wesley looked at Robert and asked.

"Dad, will auntie welcome us? If she won't, I can live in another house, as long as you will often come to see me."

Wesley was always so considerate, which made Robert feel guilty.

Since he knew that Sierra was not his real mother, he had been worried.

He was afraid that Robert would abandon him and then he would become an abandoned boy.

Wesley's nanny also said that he often had a nightmare, and called dad while sleeping.

He also called mom in the dream.

Wesley often had such a nightmare.

Robert wanted to comfort him, but he also didn't know how to explain the truth to Wesley.

"I won't lie to you. Anne also loves to play with you. She said she will be a good sister. As for your auntie, she also loves you. Remember it? When the bandit wanted to attack you, your auntie saved you subconsciously. In fact, she loves you very much. Follow me in. If you feel uncomfortable later, you can live in another villa nearby, and I will be with you every day there. If you don't want, I won't force you to live with your auntie."

Wesley had to nod. Then he followed Robert into the villa with worry.

He was just a little boy who had been deceived by Sierra, and he even didn't know who his real mother was.

His father had a wife and a beloved daughter, so definitely Wesley was worried.

He was worried and nervous every day, but he was kind and considerate, so he didn't speak it out.

He followed Robert into the villa nervously. Then he looked at Georgia sitting on the sofa. He greeted with fear.

"Auntie, hello."

Georgia was also embarrassed. She also didn't know how to pacify Wesley.

She could find that the boy clenched his fingers tightly. He was trembling slightly. Did she look so scary?

Anne suddenly came over and held Wesley's hand.

"Brother, you're finally here. I've been waiting for you. Mommy told me that you will live with me in the future. Let's go to play swing. You push me, and then I push you. It's funny."

After Anne said that, she pulled Wesley out.

Wesley looked back at Robert and Georgia nervously. Georgia said with a smile.

"Go with your sister. You will live with her in the future.

I also don't know what I can do for you, but you can be free at home. I love you very much, and I like your eyes."

Wesley was moved by Georgia.

He nodded and then went with Anne to play swing.

Robert held Georgia into his arms.

"Mrs. Simpson, thank you for accepting Wesley."__

Chapter 403 Who Is The Traitor

"I feel sorry for you about this matter, but I must be responsible for Wesley. Thanks for accepting him. I read in a book that it's hard to be a stepmother. Will you feel aggrieved?"

"Which book is it?"

Georgia thought it was funny.

"After I decided to take Wesley back, I have been finding the solution on the internet. Of course, there are many cases about being a stepmother, and being a good father. But the answers on the internet are all ridiculous. Only this word impressed me. I know you're kind, so is Wesley, but I am also afraid that I can't be fair enough to satisfy both of you."

"Wesley was nervous when he followed me in. His hand holding my hand was even trembling. I also don't know where he used to live. Sierra must have let him suffer a lot. Fortunately, she wanted to show a face of a good mother, so she didn't abuse Wesley, but she was not that kind. Wesley has been alert all the time. The only one he trusts is me, so I have to pay more attention to him. Don't think I am unfair. I won't mistreat Anne."

"You have said sorry to me many times today. Since you have taken him back, don't think too much. I think I will get along well with Wesley. He's a good kid. If I care too much about him, he will also be scared, so I will just get close to him step by step. The only one I am worried about is your mother. Why is she sleeping? What happened to her?"

Speaking of this, Robert sighed.

"She was sober sometimes and insane sometimes. She cursed me when I picked her up, and even cursed you. I couldn't take her home in such a situation, so I asked the nurse to give her a sedative. Maybe she will wake up later."

"Let's see her after she wakes up. If she can't accept you, then we can't let her live here. If so, I will send her to another villa nearby. I will go to take care of her every day."

"Fine. Let's go to see her after she wakes up."

After that, Georgia asked Robert.

"We didn't make clear the matter on the internet before. How did the branches of your family know it? Did they guess it when you took Sierra away that day? Or maybe one of us has been bought over. Do we need to check it? Now we have two kids here, and your mother is in a terrible situation. If there is a spy in those guards, they will hurt the kids."

Robert became serious since Georgia mentioned this matter.

"Don't worry. I've got an idea about this matter. I will ask my men to check it. I have all information about those guards when I hired them, including their families, relatives, and connections, so it's easy to find out whether something strange has happened to them."

"Besides, I've prepared a trap. Once someone moves, I can catch him at once."

"What's your plan?"

Georgia asked curiously.

"Anne and Wesley have stayed at home for too long, so they have to go to school since the trouble has been handled. I will ask bodyguards to protect them in groups. The spy will be found out as long as something happens."

Georgia was worried.

"I don't want our kids to be the trap. Can you make another plan?"

"Don't worry. Since I dare to make this plan, I will ask other guards to protect our kids secretly. The spy must be caught."

Georgia was still worried, but since Robert loved the kids as much as she did, she believed that Robert had prepared well. Besides, it was dangerous if the spy was always with them, so Georgia had to agree.

After all, compared with her, the kids were much easier to be caught, so the spy would be exposed faster.

"Just make the plan, but you must prepare carefully."

After they talked about this matter, Georgia was reminded of another matter. She said to Robert.

"Except for the branches of the Simpson family, someone else was pushing the rumors on the internet. Travis told me that it might be someone in Warner's Group. I think it should be Eliana Warner."

"Eliana Warner?"

This name was strange to Robert. He couldn't remember this name.

Georgia was amused.

"Eliana might be missing you, but you even can't remember her name. I just think she is suspicious. She might also love you. She has known you since you are a kid. Now you even can't remember her. Ask your men to check if she has something to do with the rumors on the internet. I'm worried that she may work with the branches of the Simpson family to set you up. Never be too careful."

Robert agreed. Then Georgia cooked dinner for them.

Anne and Wesley were tired after they played swing. Then they went to play with toys in a room full of toys.

When the dinner was ready, Anne and Wesley finally went out.

They had played with toys for an hour, so Wesley also looked happy. He got along well with Anne and got used to having a sister.

However, when he came to the dining room and saw Georgia there, he became nervous again.

Georgia tried to speak to him as gently as she could.

"Call me Auntie Lane. I don't know what you like to eat, so I cook many dishes today. Let's sit and have dinner. Don't force yourself to eat something you dislike. We have chefs here, but I just wanted to cook myself. You can tell the chefs what you like in the future. Let's eat first. You must be hungry."

After Georgia finished, Anne followed.

"Brother, try the dishes. My mommy is good at cooking. That's a rare opportunity. Don't worry. My mommy loves you very much. Let's sleep together tonight."

Wesley felt warm. He had thought that his sister disliked him. Now, his sister had played with him for the whole afternoon and shared her toys with him.

Wesley was sure that his sister liked him.

As for Auntie Lane, he was still nervous, but Auntie Lane was so gentle, which made Wesley relieved.

When the night came, Robert held Georgia in arms and said romantic words to her, which made Georgia blush, but she couldn't stop his invasion.

Then it was a romantic night again.

However, the romantic night was stopped at midnight, because Maisie began to make noise.

Georgia and Robert were wakened up.

They had to put on clothes and went to Maisie's room. _____

Chapter 404 Maisie's Anger

When they went to Maisie's room, they saw that Anne and Wesley also had been wakened up.

The two kids stood at the door with fear.

When Georgia and Robert came, Anne rushed to Georgia and hugged her.

"My grandma is so scary."

Anne put her head on Georgia's shoulder and said that with worry and fear.

Robert squatted down and asked Wesley.

"Are you also scared? Don't care about your grandma. Let's go back to your room, okay?"

Wesley nodded obediently. Georgia also said to Anne.

"Don't care about your grandma. Your dad and I will handle this. It's cold, so go back to your bed. Don't catch a cold."

After that, Georgia asked the butler to send the kids back to their room.

Anne and Wesley followed the butler back to the bedroom.

After they left, Georgia wanted to get into Maisie's room.

But Robert stopped her.

"Don't get in. If my mother is sober now, she may say some bad words to you. Just wait for me here."

"Never take it seriously if you hear some bad words. My mother has been living a hard life. I can only stop her from making mistakes, but I can't stop her from speaking freely. Otherwise, she might really be crazy."

"Alright. I will be here. Don't worry. I will go further so that I won't hear it. She may curse my mother, which will also make me angry. I won't hear it if I keep a distance. If you need me in, just call me."

Georgia smiled. They looked at each other helplessly, and then Georgia walked to the balcony, while Robert walked into his mother's room.

As soon as Robert came in, a cup flew to his head.

It caused a blue wound on his head. She had thrown it in anger.

"I have an ungrateful son!"

Maisie glared at her son in anger.

She glanced at a vase there and then threw it to Robert again.

Robert didn't stop her.

Though he had no memory about the past, he had investigated his experience in the past.

His mother brought up his sister and him alone, so he understood that he really had disappointed his mother.

After all, Georgia was Casey Allen's daughter, so his mother should be angry.

However, when he knew this matter, he already couldn't let Georgia leave.

That was why he didn't stop his mother from releasing her anger.

"Mom, it's my fault. It's okay if you want to curse me or beat up."

After that, Robert knelt down before his mother.

Maisie pointed at her son and was trembling in anger.

"You have so many choices, but why did you only marry Georgia?"

She was regarded as the murderer killing your sister, but you were merciful to her. I knew she was unique to you at that time, so I asked you to swear that you wouldn't marry her. You promised it, but you have broken your promise. I was threatened by Laurence Knight at that time. Otherwise, I wouldn't have agreed with your marriage. I won't allow you to marry her all my life."

"Sorry, mom. We already have Anne, and I only love her all my life."

"If you don't want to live with her, I will live with her in another villa, but I will come to see you every day. Just forget that I am married. Don't see her and forget her, okay? I won't force you to accept her, but you also can't force me to divorce her. Just forget this matter. I beg you, please."

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!
He's Using This Secret Trick To Make Millions

Robert also didn't know how to deal with this matter.

It was hard to deal with the relationship between the mother-in-law and the daughter-in-law.

Besides, the relationship between his mother and Georgia was even more complex.

He didn't know how to make them get along well with each other.

He had been persuading them one by one and bearing all the grievance.

"Do you forget that your father abandoned us for Casey Allen? Now you even married Casey Allen's daughter. How could you do that? You should be guilty. You have disappointed me and your sister!"

Maisie pointed at her son with trembling fingers and felt disappointed.

She was often not sober, but she would be sober sometimes. Then she would realize how miserable life was.

Her son who she had expected had married the daughter of the woman who had taken her husband away.

Whenever she thought of this, Maisie felt miserable.

"Mom, I know I have disappointed you, but it was my father's fault. He should have been responsible and loyal, and shouldn't have abandoned us for a woman."

"You've taken revenge on him. He died because of the bomb. Forget the hatred. You have been suffering because of him for so many years. You should have forgotten this. Besides, Georgia's mother didn't seduce my father at that time. When she was with my father, she had lost her memory. She also didn't know that my father had abandoned us. That was a misunderstanding. Mom, please forget it."

"Your father is dead?"

Maisie suddenly looked weird. She touched her forehead and felt her brain was gonna explode.

Robert knew his mother lost her mind again when he saw that.

As soon as he mentioned his father, his mother would be insane.

"You forget it? At my wedding, you threw a bomb at him. He didn't die on the spot, but he died after being treated in the hospital for a couple of days."

Robert said it with sadness, and Maisie became insane again.

"Shut up. Your father didn't die. I haven't tortured him yet.

I should take revenge on him. He can't die. He must kneel and beg me for forgiveness. He can't die..."

Maisie cried in pain. Robert felt sorry for her.

He knew his mother was in great pain, but he couldn't help her.

Only she could help herself. No one else could help her out of the hatred.

He walked to his mother, knelt down, and then held her hand.

"Mom, you're not old yet. I will try my best to treat you. You can go travel all over the world, and even find another man. You can do whatever you want to do. Don't trap yourself in hatred. My father was brave enough to admit that he has betrayed us, but he still did what he wanted to do. You should also live your own life. Forget my father and forget the hatred."

Maisie stared at her son as if she could see Aidan through a similar face. She cried all of a sudden.

"Aidan, why did you abandon me? I was trying to be a good wife, and I gave birth to babies for you. We have got along well with each other. Why did you abandon me, even if you needed to give up on the property of the Simpson family? How could you treat me like that? You're such a merciless man..."

Maisie cursed while crying. She kept repeating the history between Aidan and her. She complained and beat Robert.

Finally, she was exhausted and fell asleep.

Robert took a deep breath. He asked the servants to clean the room and then took his mother to another room.

After her mother was sleeping well, he walked out of the room.

Georgia had been waiting for him for about two hours. She didn't go to sleep. When it was sunrise, Robert finally went out.

She saw the wound on Robert's head at once.

"Did your mother beat you in anger?"

Chapter 405 Robert's Terrible Physical Situation

Georgia walked over and held Robert's hand, feeling sorry for him.

"The first aid kit is in the bedroom. Come with me. I'll disinfect and bind up your wound."

Robert smiled helplessly. Then he held Georgia's hand and walked into the bedroom.

Georgia opened the medical kit, took out the iodine, wiped the wound with a cotton ball, and then bound up the wound on her forehead.

After that, Georgia said to Robert.

"Are there any wounds on your body? Tell me and I'll deal with them together."

"There is only one wound. After all, I'm her son. When she was angry, she smashed something on me. Then she didn't do that anymore."

"Did your mother know the matter about my mother? How did she know? Did Sierra say that?"

"Maybe. After all, when I disappeared, my mother has been living with her. Maybe she has told her about it at that time. Although my mother is in a bad mental condition and often goes crazy, she will remember what she has heard when she is sober." Georgia hugged Robert gently.

"I know you will hurt your mother if you are with me, but you still chose to be with me without hesitation. I'm sorry. I can't choose who my mother is, and my mother loves me so much. I can't keep a distance from my mother for this kind of thing."

Georgia felt a little guilty. Robert had been in poor health, but he still had to worry about the grudges of the previous generation.

In fact, Robert had always been a filial child. Only on this matter, he might disobey his mother all his life.

"Don't be silly. You didn't do anything wrong to me. On the contrary, I might have done a lot of things to hurt you.

Although I lost those memories, I know what I might have done. I can't make up for you all my life. How can I blame you for the grudges between the previous generation?"

"What's more, you were not brought up by your mother, so those things have nothing to do with you. There are many helpless things in the world, and I just have one more helpless thing with you. As long as you are always with me and hold my hand, I will not be afraid of anything else."

"I think you are more and more considerate now."

Georgia sighed with a smile and gave him a kiss.

"Mr. Simpson, this is the reward Mrs. Simpson gives you."

Robert smiled. When he was about to return the kiss, Georgia stepped back and asked directly.

"Is your mother going to live in the villa nearby? Anyway, we have bought it and have it cleaned. Then you can move your mother in. She will be more unhappy when she sees me. It's better not to see each other. I can't do anything to please her. Just stay away from her and it will be good to each other."

"I will arrange it. Don't worry."

Robert had already made up his mind about his mother.

He didn't want Georgia to be wronged and worried. Of course, he had to solve these things by himself.

When the two of them talked, it was already six o'clock in the morning.

Georgia sighed.

"I'm not sleepy now. If you want to sleep, just go. I haven't finished reading something yesterday. I'll go to the study first. You don't have to worry about me."

Of course, Robert didn't feel sleepy.

He called Randy and asked Randy to come to the villa to deal with the company affairs with him.

Now he didn't often manage the affairs in the company, but still watched on the overall situation behind the scenes.

Robert intended to let Randy deal with most of the busy affairs.

He only appreciated Randy in the whole Simpson family and among the people working in the group.

Moreover, the plan to deceive Sierra last time was completed successfully by Randy, so he planned to train Randy.

From now on, the group affairs of the Simpson family will be handled by Randy.

Ivan was also good at business. In the past year, Ivan had maintained the business of the group well.

But Robert knew that Ivan didn't like to stay in the same place for a long time. He liked to travel around the world, so he often gave surgeries in different countries and stayed in different countries for some time.

If it weren't for a lot of things that had happened to Robert during the year, Ivan wouldn't have stayed in D City for a long time to help the Simpson family, so Robert could only train Randy.

Georgia continued to read the information about the lab in the villa. Yesterday, she didn't finish reading Robert's examination report, but just looked through it roughly.

Now she had to put all the data in the computer, compare it with the data she knew, and read it carefully. Then she would calculate it with the simulation program on the computer.

Georgia might have been crazy if she hadn't been mentally prepared in the past few days before she read this report.

But she had already been mentally prepared and learned something from Ivan, so she could calm down and analyze the situation carefully.

If She Has These Qualities, You Should Never Let Her Go!

Georgia sat in front of the computer, reading the data and taking notes for more than an hour.

It was already eight o'clock in the morning. Anne and Wesley also got up. The butler had asked the cook to prepare breakfast for them.

Georgia looked up at the ceiling for a long time, forcing herself not to shed a tear.

Then she put all the documents away and walked out of the study.

She took Anne and Wesley to the dining room for breakfast.

Just then, Randy came to their house. Robert invited Randy to have breakfast with them.

Ivan went out early this morning. It was said that he had to give surgery to a patient with the paranoid disease which needed to be cured immediately in the hospital.

Although he usually gave some surgeries to rich people, sometimes to challenge himself, he would also try some difficult surgeries.

The operation was scheduled before, so he went to the hospital early in the morning and didn't have breakfast with Georgia and others in the villa.

"Georgia, my name is Randy. Because of Robert's plan, I have been standing beside Sierra at that time. There might be many misunderstandings at that time, but I think Robert has explained it clearly. I hope we can get along well in the future."

When Randy saw Georgia come over, he said a lot of words and then showed a warm smile.

This was the first time that Anne had seen Randy. Randy was the grandson of Paul, and he was also a distant cousin to Robert.

But Randy was one year younger than Robert, so Georgia asked Anne and Wesley to call him uncle Randy.

Randy's face was a little round and looked like a baby's face. Georgia knew that the man had been a spy for Sierra and successfully deceived Sierra.

If she didn't know this, Georgia would definitely be deceived by Randy's face, thinking that he was an innocent big child. But she was very clear that the person who was chosen by Robert to take charge of the Simpson family was definitely not innocent.

"I'm impressed that you can fool Sierra. She has always been very cautious. Sit down and have breakfast first. Later you will have to discuss the arrangement of work with your brother, Robert. You will have enough energy to work after breakfast." Georgia greeted Randy with a smile. They sat in the dining room and began to have breakfast.

After breakfast, Georgia went back to the study and continued to read the materials.

According to Ivan's speculation and her own experience. Georgia was sure that cancer cells were spreading in Robert's body.

If it was just a simple spread of cancer cells, according to the current scientific technology, there were already medicines that could restrain the cancer cells. As long as they had money, they could keep Robert's life for some time. However, Robert's situation was troublesome. His cancer cells spread all over his body like Lyman cancer, destroying all his tissues and organs.

To a certain extent, it seemed that Robert's body would release a kind of ring-shaped camp substance that could restrain the cancer cells. The two sides resisted together, which caused a subtle balance in his body.

So Robert's current situation seemed to be good, but this balance was very subtle.

Once it was broken or there was an overwhelming victory on one side, no matter it was the suppression of the cancer cells or the spread of the circular camp all over the body, Georgia couldn't judge whether something wrong would happen to Robert's body.

She read the data carefully and then collected all the information she knew.

She was studying cancer cells, but she was studying the material to restrain lung cancer cells. On the whole, they were the same research types.

But these data were different from the symptoms of lung cancer she had seen. Even the characteristics of these cancer cells were different from the symptoms of cancer cells spreading in ordinary people.

Georgia put her fingers in front of her forehead and then leaned against the table, feeling worried.

She was not a doctor and didn't know how to cure it.

She was almost thirty years old and had been studying in preventing the spread of the cancer cell and kill it, but it could not save people.

All of a sudden, Georgia felt powerless.

Couldn't she help him at all? Could she only ask for others' help and hope there would be someone who could help Robert? Thinking of this, Georgia suddenly stood up and walked to the window. Then she called Professor Lee.

"What? Do you want to tell me when you will go to work?"

Professor Lee asked with a smile on the phone. Georgia just smiled bitterly.

She felt that her work date was unreachable as if her promise to Professor Lee would not be fulfilled in a short time._____

Chapter 406 Threat

"Prof. Lee, I'll send you a simple report on a kind of cancer cells. Have you ever seen such symptoms? I've sent it to your mailbox. Please help me check it. After all, you're more experienced than me. This kind of situation is rare. I've never seen such a situation before."

Professor Lee could know that Georgia was in a bad mood from her tones.

But he didn't ask more. Instead, he agreed to Georgia's request.

"I'm meeting some of my old classmates outside. I won't be home until this afternoon. I'll read it after I go back. Is it urgent?"

If you're in a hurry, I'll read it now."

"No, thanks. Prof. Lee, you can have a party with your classmates first."

After Georgia and Professor Lee hung up the phone, she called Travis again.

"Travis, I've read all the files you sent me. I want to ask you a favor because it was you, Miss Duran, and Mr. Ellis who did it. The lab has been destroyed, and there is only this information now. I don't think we can find any new information, but the people who studied in the lab at that time didn't die. They might be scattered all over the world now. Can you help me find out where these people are now?"

Finally, Georgia felt that some things needed to be investigated from the source.

Since these people used to work in the lab, they might have seen the similar physical condition of Robert now.

She had to know how many similar situations they had seen, or maybe they knew the reason.

Georgia felt that it was the most urgent thing at the moment to find out the important persons in the lab.

"I'll ask someone to do this. Don't worry."

Travis agreed immediately and comforted Georgia.

"I've asked Mr. Ellis to help me collect the data of the people who have stayed in the lab. If I get any valuable data, I'll call you immediately."

"Thank you, Travis."

Georgia felt that she had troubled Travis too many times. In fact, she knew that she shouldn't have bothered Travis so much. However, it was related to Robert's health, and Travis had been involved in it, so she could only ask him for help.

She could only bother Travis on this matter, nor could she make a clean break with Travis.

When Georgia and Travis were talking, Randy and Robert were talking about the company's affairs recently, as well as other matters of the branches of the Simpson family.

"Yesterday, you asked me to check if there was a hidden traitor in the company and if there was anything wrong with your bodyguard team. I've already begun to investigate, and now I have a suspect who has a mistress. That mistress has lost millions of money in gambling, but she suddenly paid off. I've targeted him, but we still need to test it to make sure if he has exposed the matter about Sierra."

"Now that you have the target, then start the plan we have discussed before. But all the plans need to be checked by me. You can only start after I make a decision."

Robert also knew that it was risky to use the child as bait, so he had to make sure that this plan was flawless.

Otherwise, Georgia wouldn't forgive him and he wouldn't forgive himself either.

"Did your grandfather do anything recently?"

Robert asked Randy. Randy sighed.

"He must have taken some actions, but now he sees that I have really entered the core of the group, and I persuade him every day, which has suppressed his ambitions. Robert, I'm sorry for this matter. I can't interfere with my grandfather's thoughts. I can only try my best to watch him and don't let him do anything excessive."

Randy's grandfather was the oldest elder of the Simpson family, who Robert naturally had to show respect to.

But after he pretended to be dead this time, Randy's grandfather also had some ugly thoughts, which made Robert a little disappointed.

So he asked Randy to enter the core of the group, and asked Randy to control his grandfather and his family.

If he failed, he would lose the chance to enter the core of the group.

"You can keep an eye on your grandfather. As for others, after I pretended to be dead this time, they were all ambitious and wanted to get a share of the group. I don't want to raise their ambitions. I even gave them money to let them take a step back. This time, I will teach them a lesson and let them understand that they should not get involved casually in the future."

"As for Kenny and Dora, these two people always do a lot of things secretly. Go to collect the evidence as much as possible. Then sue them to the court for compensation. I don't care whether they are alive or dead. Everything will be done according to the law."

While the two were talking, another person came to Robert's villa.

The butler walked to Robert.

"Sir, miss Dora, and Mr. Kenny are here."

They came so fast just when they were talking about them. Robert sneered.

"Let them in."

After a while, Kenny and Dora came in.

When the two of them saw Randy, Dora sneered.

"Randy, you're really a good spy. You used to cheat Sierra. Now Robert is back, and you're here to flatter Robert. You're really a good dog fed by Robert."

"Aunt, if you keep cursing, I will ask the bodyguard to kick you out."

Robert said coldly.

To be honest, he really didn't understand why the illegitimate daughter like Dora, who had been sent away early after getting married, always came to the Simpson family like a senior, and she always thought that she was in a high position.

Even Robert's grandfather didn't take this illegitimate daughter seriously. However, as soon as Dora came to Robert, she always acted like an elder.

Robert's warning didn't stop Dora from mocking him. Instead, she casually sat on the sofa opposite Robert and then said to Kenny.

"Give it to him and let him see it before he decides his attitude towards us."

Robert looked at these two people in confusion, and Kenny threw a document bag over.

Robert didn't move. Randy picked up the document bag.

There was actually a stack of photos in it. After Randy put all the photos on the table, Robert saw that the photos were about the same person. It was Sierra who was locked in a cage. More importantly, there was a picture of both Georgia and Sierra. _____

Chapter 407 It's Your Money

Georgia stood in front of Sierra, while Sierra was locked in the cage.

Robert finally looked coldly at Dora and Kenny.

"Tell me what do you want."

"Robert, your uncle and I just have a simple request. You can let Randy enter the core of the group and let him be the future CEO of the group. As your uncle and aunt, you should also give us some benefits. Otherwise, when these photos are posted on the Internet, everyone will know what your wife Georgia has done."

"She abused her half-sister in a cage. I heard that Georgia wants to do scientific research in the future. If the people in that circle know that Georgia has done such a thing before, do you think she can still work happily in that circle? I heard that those big shots in the circle of biological research are all righteous. They hate those dirty deals and dirty members in this circle. Send him a copy of this photo. Do you think that Georgia can escape from being scolded in the future? She can only become an ordinary research fellow in the future, and will never realize her dream in that circle."

Robert suddenly lowered his head and smiled.

"Tell me, money or shares? If you go too far, you will lose everything."

Dora and Kenny had discussed how to threaten Robert before. They were sure that it was the best way to threaten him with Georgia.

Perhaps Robert wouldn't mind his reputation or being cursed by the netizens.

If it came to Georgia's reputation, Robert would definitely compromise.

Now it seemed that they had expected it right.

Kenny and Dora looked at each other. Dora smiled, but it was Kenny who spoke.

"Robert, your aunt and I just have a simple request. Each of us only needs three percent of the shares. The annual share dividend should be transferred to our account every year. Then we will return all the negatives of these photos to you."

"Totally six percent, huh? It seems that you two are not too greedy."

Robert smiled and said to them.

"Now that you're here, show me the agreement about the shares you've prepared. I'll sign it myself, and then find a lawyer to validate it. Are you satisfied with it? But at the same time, you two must give me the negatives. If you don't give me now, then prepare the things, and then bring them to me. Only at that time will I sign the agreement. Otherwise, you won't get even a penny."

"We'll bring it here tomorrow."

Kenny and Dora stood up excitedly. The two of them thought that Robert wouldn't agree today, so they decided to take it slow. However, Robert wanted to sign it immediately, but they didn't prepare anything.

Robert was a smart man. If they didn't show him everything, he would never sign the agreement to transfer the shares.

The two of them were also smart. Then they said goodbye to Robert and went back to prepare the things.

Randy asked after the two left.

"Do you really want to transfer the shares to them in this way?"

Robert smiled.

"Don't you have a lot of evidence of what the two of them have done before? I'm willing to transfer the shares to them because they will kneel down in front of me and beg me to take back their shares in the future. Take them as the examples to let other people in the Simpson family see what will happen if they provoke me."

As soon as Robert finished his words, Randy trembled with fear. Fortunately, he had followed Robert to the end. If he had evil thoughts or more desires before, he might have been like Kenny and Dora today.

Fortunately, he didn't offend this big shot.

He had never surpassed Robert since he was a child. He had better work hard for him. That was also a good way to get money.

After the two of them finished talking, Robert said to Randy again.

"We've discussed everything about the company. Remember to investigate Eliana Warner. I got the news that the rumors on the Internet may have something to do with Eliana Warner. Get the information about the business of the Warner Group, or find out if there is anything wrong with Eliana Warner and the Warner family. Try your best to find something on them in case of need... What's more, ask someone to keep an eye on Sierra in prison. The evidence is ready. Make sure that she will not be released from prison for the rest of her life. Try to find out the evidence for what she has done before and increase her sentence."

Robert continued after Randy nodded.

"I'm going to America next week. I'm not sure how long I'll stay in America. Remember to call me if you find anything wrong."

After Robert finished what he needed to say, Randy spoke again.

"Robert, now that you're going to America, why don't you go to supervise the biological medicine company there by the way? You bought this company last year. Since you had an accident, the group has been occupied and unable to manage it. I think there's something wrong with their accounts and some people have made false accounts. Although this biological company has high profit and market value, I'm worried that something bad will happen."

"Robert, you can take some people to inspect this company. Only with your prestige can we find out those thieves."

Robert finally remembered the biological medicine company he had in America.

"I see. Send me all the information about it. I'll go to have a look."

When Georgia walked out of the study, Randy had already left. Robert was sitting on the sofa and reading a book. He looked gentle and quiet.

Georgia walked over and hugged Robert.

"Have you finished your work? I thought you and Randy would talk for a long time."

"I'm a very efficient person. Do you think I will really work so hard? I don't lack money now. Moreover, even if the Simpson family goes bankrupt, you can support me in the future. The property of the SY group is much more than that of the Simpson family. I'll rely on you in the future. With your support, I can also live a comfortable life and squander money like I'm doing now."

Georgia couldn't help laughing.

"That was supposed to be your property, but in my name. Do you want me to transfer it to you now?"

As soon as Georgia finished her words, Robert shook his head.

"No way. I want my wife to support me for the rest of my life. From now on, I will spend your money on everything. I will enjoy everything you buy for me. Suits, neckties, clothes, shoes, socks, and everything. You should buy them for me."

Georgia was amused by Robert's words.

"How can you be so shameless? If I choose a bright red or green suit for you, are you going to wear it too? I'll buy you some colorful shirts. Do you want to wear them too?"

"Of course. I'm old now and it's a good choice for me to wear colorful clothes for young people. As long as it's chosen by Mrs. Simpson, I'll wear it. Do you think it's not cool to wear those clothes?"

Georgia looked at Robert and thought about his words.

With such a handsome face, he would always be charming even if he wore all kinds of colorful shirts.

"How about we go shopping today? I'll buy you some clothes."

Georgia acted as she spoke. She took the family out to go shopping and wanted to buy clothes for Anne and Wesley.

Chapter 408 Having Lunch

Since Georgia wanted to go shopping, Robert naturally wouldn't refuse. Instead, he was happy to go shopping with Georgia. However, it was already noon. Georgia walked to Anne and Wesley.

The two kids were playing with building blocks. Seeing Georgia come in, Wesley was a little nervous.

Anne asked Georgia intimately.

"Mommy, is it time for lunch?"

Georgia squatted down and looked at the two children. She asked Wesley.

"Are you as hungry as your sister?"

Wesley nodded shyly and didn't dare to speak.

Georgia held Anne's and Wesley's hands.

"We're going to take you two out for lunch. Just tell me what you want to eat. We'll go shopping later and buy clothes. Wesley, let's go shopping with Auntie and dad later, okay?"

It suddenly occurred to Georgia that Wesley didn't have many clothes since he just came here.

As a matter of fact, no matter how friendly she was to Wesley, he was not her own child. If it weren't for this moment, she wouldn't have realized that she should buy clothes for Wesley.

"I will go with you."

Wesley had no objection.

Of course, he also liked going shopping or having lunch outside.

He was just a little reserved when he was with Georgia, but he was not so afraid now.

Anne was even more excited.

"Mommy, I haven't bought clothes for a long time. I'm going to buy a lot of beautiful dresses. Besides, I want to eat fried chicken."

Did children all like eating fast food?

Georgia smiled helplessly and asked Wesley.

"Wesley, what about you? If you don't want to eat fried chicken, we can take your sister to eat it first and then go to other places."

"I want to eat sweet and sour carp."

Wesley plucked up all his courage to speak out his favorite dishes. Georgia was stunned and found that it was also her favorite dish.

She smiled.

"Okay, I'll ask someone to pack up the fried chicken for your sister, and then we go to M Garden for lunch. The dishes here are very delicious, and sweet and sour carp are also authentic."

Georgia helped Anne and Wesley get dressed.

After all, it was winter. The two of them didn't wear warm clothes at home.

But they wanted to go out, so they had to be wrapped in thick clothes.

But Wesley didn't have a hat here, so Georgia had to give Anne's hat to Wesley.

The two of them wore fluffy hats and thick down jackets. Then Georgia asked the two children to wear fluffy gloves.

After taking the two children out of the dressing room, Robert looked at the two children and said to Georgia.

"Look. The two of them look like twins."

Georgia looked at Robert and smiled.

"They are both your kids. Isn't it normal for them to look like each other?"

Robert didn't dare to say anything more. It seemed to be a dangerous topic.

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!
If She Has These Qualities, You Should Never Let Her Go!

However, Georgia smiled and asked the driver to get ready. Then, all four took the car to M Garden.

As for the fried chicken, Georgia asked her assistant to buy it and send it to M Garden.

The family sat down in M Garden, waiting for lunch.

Naturally, they ordered the sweet and sour carp that both Wesley and Georgia liked.

Then, Georgia ordered warm soup. It was too cold, so it was comfortable to drink soup.

There were several other dishes. Anyway, they ordered a lot of dishes, which were all their favorite.

As the boss of M Garden, Georgia brought her family to have lunch here, so the dishes were served very quickly.

When the sweet and sour carp were served, Georgia said to Wesley and Anne.

"Be careful of the fish bones. Don't eat them in a hurry. No. I'll help you two to pick out the bones before you eat it. I'm really worried that you will be choked."

After saying that, Georgia began to pick out fish bones.

As an inexperienced father, Robert also began to do this job and asked the two children to eat other dishes first.

Wesley and Anne sat opposite Georgia and Robert, and the two kids were whispering.

"I've told you that mommy will be good to us. You don't have to be afraid of her. Be patient and you can also be intimate soon."

Wesley replied in a low voice. He was envious of Anne.

He did feel that Auntie Lane was very kind to him.

Sometimes, he even hoped that Auntie Lane could be his biological mother.

In this way, he might not be so envious of Anne. He really wanted to know who his mother was.

When Georgia put the fish into Wesley's bowl, Robert put the fish into Anne's bowl.

While Wesley was eating, he suddenly sobbed. Georgia got nervous immediately.

"What's wrong? Are there still bones, or it's not your taste?

Just tell us. You don't have to eat anything you don't like.

There is no such rule in our family that we have to eat up all the dishes. If you don't like it, you can refuse it. I don't know what you like and what you hate, so you must tell me if you don't like anything."

Wesley shook his head with tears.

"Auntie, the fish is delicious. I like it very much. Can you take me here often to eat it in the future?"

After saying that, Robert looked at Wesley in surprise.

Georgia smiled.

"Of course no problem. You know what, I'm the boss of the M Garden. Even if we don't come here, I can ask them to cook and send the dishes to our home. You can eat it every day."

Wesley nodded and continued to eat.

Gradually, he calmed down. Georgia was still confused.

She didn't know why Wesley was in a bad mood just now. She just couldn't get too close or too far when she got along with this kid. She could only get close to him gradually.

Anne didn't eat much because she had fried chicken before.

After eating, she began to play games aside.

Wesley ate most of the carp, and of course, the rest was Georgia's. The two of them really loved this dish.

It took more than an hour to have lunch like this.

Georgia asked the waiter to clean up the table. When she was about to leave, the manager of M Garden came in and smiled at Georgia. _____

Chapter 409 Go Shopping

"I have something to deal with today and just came here. I didn't know that Miss Lane has brought your family here for lunch."

"It's a random decision. I just felt bored at home, so suddenly wanted to go out. It happened that it was time for lunch, so I came to have lunch here. You don't have to care about me. Just do your business. You've run the M Garden well, and I won't interfere in your management. Everything is up to you, and you don't need to come to see me every time I come."

After Georgia finished her words, Harvey Moore smiled at Georgia and Robert.

"If the Old Mr. Simpson were still alive, he would be glad to see that Miss Lane and Mr. Simpson are living happily... When Mr. Simpson just came back, and Miss Lane just inherited the property, you were at odds with each other at that time, which made me so worried. Now I am finally relieved."

It was said that Harvey Moore was an excellent cook. At that time, his talent was discovered by Robert's father, Aidan.

Later, Aidan helped Harvey Moore to run the M Garden, so Harvey Moore was very grateful to Robert's father, Aidan.

It was not surprising for him to have such a sigh.

Robert smiled faintly at Harvey Moore, "Thank you for still remembering my father. I will live with Georgia well in the future so that he won't have to worry about us in heaven.

After Robert finished his words, Harvey Moore said to Georgia and Robert.

"In fact, the Old Mr. Simpson has left two letters for me. He told me that if he left this world, I should give these two letters to Mr. Simpson and your mother respectively."

Georgia was taken aback.

Robert's father even had left two letters here for Robert and his mother.

Robert didn't expect that either. However, he had lost his memory after all. His understanding and impression of this father were limited in the information he had investigated, so his mood didn't change much.

But he thought he should respect his father, so he asked Harvey Moore.

"Do you want to give these two letters to me now?"

"Of course I'll give these two letters to you, Mr. Simpson.

But I didn't know that Mr. Simpson and Miss Lane would come here for lunch today, so I didn't bring the letters. If Mr.

Simpson and Miss Lane are at home tomorrow, I can send the letters to your home in person. If you have any questions, you can ask me tomorrow."

Georgia asked curiously.

"Robert has been back for so long. Why didn't you give these two letters to him before?"

Georgia didn't have any doubts about Harvey Moore. She just wondered why Harvey Moore had never mentioned these two letters in the past.

"Mr. Simpson had a bad relationship with Miss Lane before, and I heard that Mr. Simpson had lost his memory. Mr. Simpson's mother was in a bad mental condition. So I thought it was not appropriate to send these two letters to you. Of course, I heard that Mr. Simpson hasn't regained his memory yet, but I think that Simpson seems to be happy and safe now, and he has a good relationship with Miss Lane. So now, it's the time."

"Because before the Old Mr. Simpson passed away, he told me to give these two letters to his son at a proper time. Although the Old Mr. Simpson didn't tell me when exactly the time would be, I think it should be a happy moment for Mr. Simpson just like now."

"Mr. Moore, thank you."

Robert thanked Harvey Moore.

"I'll wait for you at home tomorrow. You can give me two letters then."

When Georgia and Robert took Anne and Wesley to the shopping mall, Anne couldn't help but ask curiously.

"Did that uncle say that grandpa has left a letter for dad?"

Georgia nodded with a smile.

"Anne, it's true. Your grandfather left a letter to your father and your grandmother when he was alive. He kept it at Harvey Moore's house, so Mr. Moore told us about it today."

Anne couldn't understand such a thing, so she asked curiously.

"Why did grandpa leave the letter? Couldn't he speak to them face to face?"

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!

A 25-Year-Old Becomes The Richest Man In His City

Georgia didn't know how to answer this question. Robert smiled and answered his daughter.

"Anne, some words can't be said face to face. You're too young to write a complete letter. When you grow up, you'll understand that sometimes people don't want to say something face to face, but they'd rather write it in a letter."

Anne had met her grandpa, but Wesley hadn't. He couldn't help but ask.

"When did grandpa pass away?"

"Last year."

Georgia replied and showed Wesley the photo of Aidan.

"He is your grandfather. If he knows you, he will like you very much. Let's go to the cemetery to visit him later. You can talk to him then."

As rich people like Georgia and Robert, it was not easy to go shopping ordinarily.

Instead, the bodyguards went to make a block booking, and then the family went shopping.

After all, this family was too rich. If they were kidnapped or met someone crazy, it would be a disaster.

Although Georgia preferred to go shopping ordinarily in the past, after so many things happened, what she cared most about was her safety, as well as the safety of her family.

Therefore, Georgia had no objection to the way that they went shopping with a block booking.

They went to the most prosperous street in D City.

Of course, Georgia held back her impulse. She took the two children to a shop for children's clothes first.

The weather was getting colder and colder, and Wesley had just moved in, so they had to buy many things he needed. Therefore, Georgia bought a lot of fluffy scarves for Anne and Wesley, fluffy hats in winter, and all kinds of cute gloves.

Anyway, she didn't lack money. As long as she saw something she liked, Georgia would ask the staff to pack it.

"This dress looks very beautiful. Anne, go in and try it on."

Tired of shopping, Georgia sat on the sofa and asked Anne to try on the clothes.

Anne shook her head.

"Mommy, I don't want to try it on. I think it's beautiful. As long as it's the same size as mine, why shouldn't we just buy it directly?"

What she said made sense.

"Well, if you don't like to try on clothes, just buy them. You must be very cute in them."

Georgia chose a cool coat for Wesley.

"Do you want to try this one? It's cool, Wesley."

Wesley obediently went to the fitting room to try on the clothes.

Anne complained to her mother.

"It's so tiring to try on clothes. My brother doesn't dare to refuse you. He will try on the clothes whenever you want him to try."

Georgia was amused by her daughter's reaction.

"I just asked your brother to try on the first one, but you complained that your mother was bullying your brother. If I ask him to try on more clothes, you will think that I am a vicious stepmother, just like the stepmother of the Snow White, huh?" _____

Chapter 410 Catching Dolls

"Mommy, I didn't mean that."

Anne immediately pleaded for mercy. Robert was amused by the mother and daughter.

"Don't say these words to Wesley. He is sensitive."

Georgia and Anne nodded.

"Don't worry. We won't. But Dad, you look like an unfair father now. Do you prefer boys to girls?"

As soon as Anne said this, Robert showed a worried look.

"Where did you hear that? I never meant that. I just think your brother is a little sensitive."

Robert's anxious expression made Anne laugh.

"Dad, you are so cute. I'm just kidding. I like my brother very much. I know you love both me and my brother. I just joked with mom, and mom was fine, but you were scared by my joke..."

Georgia bent over and burst into laughter. She didn't expect Robert to be fooled by his daughter.

Her daughter was a wicked girl. Robert had just stayed with his daughter for a few days, so he didn't know much about it.

In the end, Robert had no choice but to surrender.

"It's my fault. I don't know what kind of person Anne is, but I still want to tell you that you and your brother are of the same importance to me. I will treat you equally and love you equally."

After that, Robert asked again.

"Where did you hear that I prefer boys to girls? Did someone say that to you?"

Robert looked serious and worried. Anne was silent for a moment. Then she raised her head and said to Robert.

"Dad, don't you ever watch TV dramas? In TV dramas, the vicious mother-in-law, the vicious stepmother, and the wronged little daughter-in-law are all like this, aren't they? The mother-in-law only wants her daughter-in-law to have a boy. I saw this kind of scene in TV dramas, and no one spoke it to me."

Anne looked at Robert helplessly.

Even a six-year-old child like her knew this kind of thing.

Why had her father never heard of it?

'Is my father so old-fashioned?' Anne thought to herself. At this time, Robert said to Georgia.

"Have you always let her watch TV dramas like that? Don't let her watch it in the future. Just look. She has learned so many ridiculous ideas."

Georgia felt that she had suffered an undeserved catastrophe.

"You'd better keep pace with the times. Children know a lot. You think watching TV can affect them, right? They won't be affected by TV dramas. Just pay attention to their natures and don't be too cautious."

Georgia cast a scornful glance at Robert. She had been in prison for a few years, and it hadn't been long since she took Anne with her.

However, she and the child soon became friends. Whether it was about children's favorite idol movie stars or the characters in the cartoon, Georgia could chat with Anne, and she would watch those TV series and cartoons with Anne.

But obviously, Robert didn't have such experience. How could he watch the TV series about the conflicts between the mother-in-law and her vicious daughter-in-law? He probably hadn't seen it when he was a child, so he was flustered by his daughter's idea. He even felt that watching such TV series would affect his daughter's growth. He was so funny.

Robert was rendered speechless by the conversation between the mother and the daughter. He began to doubt himself. Was he really too old-fashioned?

'Do children nowadays know so much?' When he doubted him like this, Wesley had already dressed up and walked out.

He was wearing a gray down jacket, cool and handsome.

Anne walked to Wesley and gave him a thumbs up.

"Brother, you look so handsome in this coat. We're going to go back to school a few days later, and the girls in the class will definitely like you very much. Maybe they will send you love letters and chocolates. Remember to share the chocolates with me at that time."

Robert was stunned by her words. He didn't expect children nowadays to be so open-minded.

Georgia held Robert's hand and comforted him.

"Look. They are just kidding. The most important thing is to let them develop a good character, a good learning habit, and we should build a peaceful family environment... As for such ideas, just guide them if you think they are wrong, instead of stopping them from getting in touch with it."

Of course, Robert understood what she meant. He smiled helplessly.

"It's my fault. I'm too nervous. I should have known this matter, but when it comes to my children, I only have one thought. I just want to block all the vicious things in the world and stop them from touching my kids. It's really my fault."

"Well, it's just a small matter. You haven't been a father for many days, and you're not used to it. Let's go to the next place and get along with the children. The most important thing is to relax and have fun. Accompanying them is the most precious thing."

Georgia and Robert took Anne and Wesley to several other children's clothing stores and bought some more clothes.

Finally, of course, they went to the game hall and played games with the two children.

This time, they asked the bodyguards to hide in the crowd. They just played games with ordinary people in the game hall.

Georgia was not good at most of the things in the game hall, except catching dolls.

She watched Robert play those games with his children, and then spend thousands of game coins.

In the end, of course, they played the game that the two children wanted to play most, catching dolls.

The two kids, Anne and Wesley, were not very lucky and weren't good at it either. They spent 300 coins but couldn't catch a doll.

Anne said to Robert gloomily.

"Dad, why can't I catch the dolls? Can you catch it? I really want to catch a doll."

Even Wesley looked at Georgia and Robert expectantly.

The two children watched the elder children around them catching dolls one after another. They were so envious of them.

As a father, of course, Robert had to build his omnipotent image.

He walked forward to catch dolls for the two children.

However, he was also a rookie. It took him more than ten minutes to try every doll catching machine, and only one doll was caught.

Although it was enough to make Wesley and Anne excited, Robert felt that he was too useless.

He said to the two children.

"Daddy will buy you a lot of dolls today, okay?"

As soon as he said this, the two children shook their heads together. Anne complained to Robert.

"Dad, you don't understand the fun of catching dolls at all.

The feeling of buying them is different from that of catching them. I just want to catch them myself, or dad and mom to catch them for me. This is what I only want!"

Wesley nodded and agreed.

Georgia finally said to the two children with a smile.

"Well, Mommy is here to give you a wonderful performance. Let me catch dolls for us."

However, Robert gave Georgia a suspicious look.

"Are you sure you can catch them? I feel that we're all unlucky today."

Georgia said confidently.

"Don't worry. Since I was a student in junior school, I have often come to the game hall to catch dolls. I've been skilled in it."

After saying that, Georgia took the game coins. She could catch dolls in every machine easily.

Soon, Anne and Wesley screamed with excitement every time she caught a doll.

People around gradually gathered around to watch Georgia's amazing skill.

Robert felt a little embarrassed. When they threw the dolls into the car and got on the car again, he whispered in Georgia's ear.

"How did you learn it?"

"Of course I learned it through a lot of practice. Back then, when I was a student in junior high school, I was unskilled in it. Every time I went there, I either couldn't catch it or only caught one. Later, when I was in senior high school, Travis taught me a few skills. Since then, I could catch it every time."

Georgia explained this subconsciously, but Robert said with jealousy.

"It turns out that Travis taught you this." _____

Chapter 411 Your First Love

"Why does someone seem jealous?"

Georgia grinned at Robert, who turned around and pouted.

"I wasn't involved in your past. I can imagine how bright your smile must have been back then, as a shining energetic young girl. But those memories belong to Travis, and I know nothing. You left your budding years to Travis. If only I'd known you then."

There was such pain in those words that Georgia instantly felt guilty.

Really, that was such a soft spot, and she should have just said that it was something she practiced herself instead of telling the truth.

Sometimes people just got stupid.

While the two kids weren't paying attention, she hurriedly sneaked a kiss on Robert.

"No need to get hung up on it. Didn't you say that everyone had a past? We still have to buy clothes today, right? You just promised me, and I'm going to get all sorts of different colored suits for you. Red, orange, yellow, green, purple, one each, how's that?"

Robert remained silent and didn't speak, seemingly really shaken by this.

Georgia could only take his hand and wring it.

"Don't ruin the happy atmosphere today; we're having fun today, aren't we?"

"Then kiss me another two times, and I'll forget this today."

Robert said that to her in such a sulky way that she felt a surge of sweetness as she leant over and kissed him twice.

But this time, the two kids say it.

Wesley and Annie covered their eyes, and Annie, even more daringly, started teasing her parents.

"So embarrassing. Daddy, Mommy, you're so shameless. Can you pay attention to your behavior? We're kids here!"

"You slick little imp. All right, can Mommy apologize?"

"No, Mommy needs to kiss me and Wesley too.

"Wait, no, Mommy just kissed Daddy twice, so you have to kiss me twice and Wesley twice too, because you have to be fair, right?"

Robert felt like that made sense.

"Annie is right. Mommy has to treat us all fairly."

Georgia felt like these days were especially happy, and even facing Wesley, she felt warm and intimate.

She bent her head and kissed both children on both cheeks. Annie, excited, kissed her back twice as well.

As for Wesley, his face was red throughout and he was too shy to speak.

That made Georgia feel like he was even cuter. For some reason, she was really starting to take a liking to Wesley, even though she knew that he had another mother.

As she promised, Georgia brought Robert and their children to the men's fashion floor in the mall.

As she understood the bigger men's fashion brands, the brighter, more lavish men's clothes brand would have to be LV.

Georgia had seen summaries of men's fashion online several times, and LV had always left a deep impression.

With curious designs and rich colors, this line of men's fashion had always been an eye-catching trendsetter.

So Georgia brought Robert to the LV storefront.

The person who counted as the manager in charge of the store walked up in front of Georgia and Robert.

"Mr. Simpson, Mrs. Simpson, is there anything we can do for you?"

When people like them went out for a stroll, they were the center of all attention, and whatever they wanted, others prepared right away.

Georgia spoke to the manager directly.

“Do you have anything green or red? Suits with bright colors. Take them all out; I’d like to look them over.”

The manager looked cautiously at Robert.

She couldn’t seem to believe her ears, and asked Georgia one more time.

“I’m sorry, Mrs. Simpson, I didn’t quite hear your request clearly.”

The manager probably didn’t believe Georgia was really going to buy those brightly colored suits.

“You didn’t mistake me. I’m asking you if you could please take out the suits with bright colors in our store, say, red or orange or yellow or green or indigo or blue or purple. If you have those colors, please show us. We’d like to buy those suits.”

Georgia showed a prim and beautiful smile and the manager felt like she was getting dazzled, feeling dizzy.

But this time, her good work attitude allowed her to stay calm.

“I understand your request now, Mrs. Simpson. I’ll have people on it right away.”

At that, the manager hurriedly retreated and delegated the rest of the staff, having them get the goods ready.

Robert and Georgia sat on the sofa, drinking tea and chatting.

“Are you really planning on having me put those weird clothes on right here?”

“What do you mean weird clothes? Look at that face of yours. It’s handsome and cool. You’ll handle those clothes just fine.”

Robert suddenly regretted what he’d said at home before.

He thought Georgia had been joking with him or teasing him, and even if she meant it, he’d just try it on at home.

Now, it looked like she was really going for it.

It wasn’t that he was unwilling to put it on at all, he just wasn’t used to it.

Robert’s suits were all the same cold colors, and he really hadn’t worn anything bright red or green or purple or orange or blue or whatever.

But to please his wife, Robert decided to make the sacrifice today.

He’d put the clothes on to make Mrs. Simpson happy.

Not long afterwards, the staff walked over with a pile of clothes.

There was luminous red, yellowish orange, crimson, indigo, azure, all sorts of colors.

Annie, playing a game at the side, couldn't help but look up at her father.

"Daddy, are you really going to wear suits like this? Do you like this kind of color?"

Annie showed a complicated expression, and Robert shot a careful look at Georgia.

Implying to his daughter that, yes, her mother was forcing him to.

Annie, naturally, understood her father's meaning, and turned to Georgia instead.

"Mommy, are you really going to have Daddy put these clothes on?"

Georgia smiled at Annie.

"Haven't you seen the clothes Daddy wears every day? It's all either gray or black; don't you think that's boring? If we put a few brighter suits in your Daddy's massive closet, he doesn't have to wear it often, it'll just liven up the atmosphere a bit. Maybe some red suits for the holidays."

That seemed to make sense, and Annie was convinced, and even turned expectantly to Robert.

"Hurry up and put it on, Daddy, you might look really cool in them."

"So long as it'll please Mrs. Simpson and our little princess, there's no problem even if I have to wear these clothes every day."

Robert stood up heroically and took a red suit into the changing room.

After a while, he came out wearing red.

Georgia felt her heart throb. It didn't feel wrong at all. In fact, it was an unusually beautiful fit.

You really could just wear anything if you looked good.

Annie ran over and took Robert's hand excitedly.

"Daddy, you look like you're a few years younger wearing this."

Robert didn't know if he was supposed to be happy or depressed hearing that.

"Annie, I'm not that old."

"What I meant was that you look more boyish in this, Daddy. Like how you normally feel like a senior, but now you look like a cool big brother."

Robert was happy with that. He walked up to Georgia.

"Are you satisfied with this? If you are, let's buy it and take it home. It fits, and if you really want me to wear it for the holidays, we can all wear red at that time and take a family photo."

That had Georgia's eyes gleaming.

"You're right. Our whole family wearing red for the holidays would make it such a celebration! I forgot to buy something red for Annie and Wesley too; I have to pick a few pieces up. For myself, then..."

Georgia thought of something.

"I want a red dress, and we can take a photo all together by then, and it'll look great. We haven't taken a family picture yet. We have to take one for the holidays this year."

Afterwards, Georgia had Robert try suits of a host of different colors.

When Robert came out in a luminous green suit, Georgia ducked her head and lost it.

It wasn't that Robert didn't look good in it, but the color was just too catchy.

His entire being emanated with a playboy aura, and it was hard not to laugh looking at him.

Annie didn't quite understand how adults thought. She just subconsciously thought that it was a bit weird for her Daddy to be wearing green.

"This green suit doesn't look so good, Daddy. How about you change it for this yellow one?"

Yellow was essentially a taboo color, and Georgia wasn't sure if Robert could handle it.

But since the whole family was talking amongst themselves, even Wesley couldn't resist chiming in.

"How about you try the yellow, Daddy? I want to know which one looks uglier."

Wesley had his boots on the ground, and Annie erupted into laughter.

Before Robert could take the yellow suit into the changing room, another person came into the store.

Because the store had been cleared out, the bodyguard came in directly and spoke to Robert and Georgia.

“Mr. Riley Price is outside and is preparing to come in with a lady. He’s heard we’re here, and wants to greet us.”

Robert blinked, then looked at Georgia.

“Let him in, then.”

Georgia spoke, and Riley brought a gentle-looking, quiet woman inside.

Seeing Robert in luminous green, Riley couldn’t help but mock him for it.

“You’re almost thirty years old, and you’re still wearing a suit in this color. Trying to play it hip, Robert?”

Before Robert could reply, Georgia had already stepped in to protect her husband.

“My Mr. Simpson just looks that young. Not like you, who looks older than his age. You’re not jealous, are you?”

That had Riley looking at Georgia, a little confused.

“The relationship between you two is this good now? I didn’t expect that.

“Right, let me introduce you. The woman besides me is named Leda. She knows your husband well. They were each other’s first love, too.”

Finishing, Riley smiled faintly at Georgia, as if he was sitting by and watching the show.

Chapter 412 His Diary

Georgia smiled and didn’t lose her composure.

She leant next to Robert and spoke evocatively.

“So this is your first love, eh. She’s pretty.”

Robert felt an instant surge of danger and held Georgia’s hand tightly.

“It’s a misunderstanding. I’ll explain it to you after we get home.”

The two exchanged knowing glances and spoke intimately for a while as if there wasn’t anyone else around.

The woman called Leda walked up and greeted Georgia and Robert.

“Hello, Ms. Lane, I’ve heard of you before on the internet and I’ve never seen you in person. You’re a lot more beautiful than in your photos online.”

Leda’s smile was gentle and polite, and she didn’t seem to have any ill intentions.

But she knew that Georgia was married to Robert, and didn’t call her Mrs. Simpson, sticking with Ms. Lane instead. It was hard to tell if she was deliberate or not.

Georgia returned the greeting in kind.

“Hello, Ms. Lane. Is Mr. Price your boyfriend right now?”

Georgia smiled as she asked. After all, these two were out together.

There had to be some reason, logically speaking.

“Mr. Price isn’t my boyfriend. Strictly speaking, I’ll be working under Mr. Price in his company from now on. I’m discussing the terms with Mr. Price today, and clearing up the salary and benefits.”

Georgia nodded and didn’t ask anything else.

She couldn’t tell if Leda was a friend or an enemy, and it didn’t look like it was anything too important.

Leda turned back to Robert and smiled.

“It’s been seven or eight years. You look a lot steadier right now. Congratulations on your marriage. I hear you’ve had a son and daughter with Miss Lane. You always said back then that you hoped to have a happy and blessed family in the future. Looks like you achieved it. Congratulations.”

Seeing his first love in front of his wife, Robert was naturally very mindful.

As Leda chatted with him, he only smiled politely.

“Thank you. My wife and I are done shopping and we’re going home. Please, continue to enjoy yourselves.”

Robert finished, still smiling, then turned to Georgia.

“Right, let’s bag those up and go home. We can leave now. It’s almost night.”

The two sides didn’t tangle at all. Riley and Leda politely bade them farewell.

As the family of four got on the car, Georgia hadn’t started interrogating Robert yet when Annie started raising questions.

“That auntie was so pretty, Daddy. Is your first love the first person you like? Did you date that auntie?”

Faced with his daughter’s innocent questions, Robert’s head hurt.

Was his daughter a little bit too honest? That wasn't a good habit.

Of course, with his daughter's performance today, he suspected she was being deliberate.

After Annie said that, he clearly found that Georgia was looking at him with an increasingly meaningful gaze, and his head tingled.

"Annie, the love life of adults can't be summarized in a few words, you'll understand when you're older."

As Robert finished his examination, Georgia couldn't help but chuckle. Annie turned to her father and started complaining.

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!
If She Has These Qualities, You Should Never Let Her Go!

"Adults really like telling children that they're only children right now and don't understand some things but they'll understand when they grow up, without ever explaining what that thing is. Am I right or not, Wesley?"

Wesley nodded seriously and Robert decided to shut up.

After all, anything he said would end up wrong anyway, and if he continued, Mrs. Simpson was going to get angry.

After returning home, the butler received word halfway, and had already had the kitchens prepare dinner.

The playing around today had somewhat relaxed Wesley's tightly guarded heart, and he was smiling all through the meal.

When Georgia gave him food, he accepted it gladly.

The family ate happily.

At night, when it came time to bed down, Georgia told the children a few stories, then walked back to her own room and got ready to wash and go to sleep.

She turned the shower on in the bath. Then the door opened and Robert came in.

Georgia grew nervous right away.

"I'm taking a shower; what are you doing in here? Out."

The two were married now, but Georgia wasn't quite too used to someone else coming in when she was showering.

"I wanted to explain what happened today."

Robert did not leave, but willingly took off his robe and walked under the shower, and the two were showering together right then and there.

Georgia didn't give a damn about Leda right now, she just wanted Robert to get out.

"Mr Simpson, don't mess with Mrs. Simpson, she likes to take a shower alone and not with other people."

Those words were warning enough, but Robert went ahead and showered with his wife anyway.

Of course, it ended up in a night of passion.

In her exhaustion, Georgia had almost completely forgotten that Robert had come to her about Leda.

And before she could settle her emotions, that despicable man started explaining next to her ear.

"It was just the romance in name, in middle school, Leda was the belle of the class. She liked me, and Riley's relationship with me was good. She though, wanted to get close to me through Riley, and one time Riley pissed me off and I wanted to piss him off back. Seeing that he liked Leda, I responded to her advances. Those were idiotic things I did when I was young, so don't take it seriously. I don't know why Riley brought Leda over here today of all days."

As Robert said all that, Georgia only had one question.

"I thought you'd forgotten all your previous memories. Why are you so aware of Leda's past with you?"

That made Robert feel another surge of danger.

He was worried that a wrong answer might have gotten him kicked out of bed.

"I found my diary in my elementary to high school days. I didn't write in it every day, but I did write some things on there.

I looked over it, and just so happened to see it. I laughed it off back then and didn't take it seriously, but I didn't think I'd be coming across Riley and Leda with you today."

Georgia was somewhat pleased enough with that answer, and chuckled.

"Was it fun to write in that diary of yours? Can I see?"

To be honest, she was really curious about Robert's youthful days.

Robert's face, though, darkened.

"No, you can't look at that. You'll like me less for it." _____

Chapter 413 Jasper's Surgery

"I was an ill-tempered boy when I was young. I had all sorts of mad ideas and aggressive urges, and with the things I did and thought back, then, I'd just look like a fool right now. You won't like me anymore if you saw."

After all, when he was ten or so, Aidan left the family. Losing his father, Robert had grown rebellious for a while.

He started trouble, started fights, taking out his temper on the whole world as if it owed him for it.

Back then, he was just an idiot, and even more idiotically, he'd recorded all those angry thoughts on his diary.

So Robert firmly refused to have Mrs. Simpson see those diaries.

He was sure that her impression of him would crumble once she saw those entries.

At least before his own wife, he was still a stand-up man. If she saw those diaries, she might just think of him as an impulsive, unreasonable moron.

And he couldn't have that.

"Then that diary should have cleared it all up if you haven't recalled your memories. Those entries should have recorded all your big events, I'm guessing."

Robert nodded with some difficulty.

"It goes all the way up to high school, and there weren't many entries after that. I'm guessing I turned normal at that time.

"I don't remember too much of the past, but my personality hasn't changed, so looking at those things, I can mostly guess at what's happened. Do you really care that I haven't recalled my memories?"

The two laid in bed, in each other's embrace, and Robert asked curiously.

The one thing he minded the most was that he'd forgotten the memories of love the two shared, and he didn't know if his Mrs. Simpson minded it as well.

"It's also fine if you don't remember."

Georgia suddenly smiled.

"We can just be like this, spending every day happily. As for the past memories, let's just see what comes. I don't mind if you recalled them, and you don't have to force yourself, either. If you somehow remember one day, then fate had that in mind. We don't need to force anything to try to make you remember."

For herself, Georgia didn't mind Robert being unable to recall his past. After all, they were just as loving now. Also, she wasn't sure how much nerve damage Robert had sustained. If they tried to fix his memory, she was afraid it'd damage his body even more. If that was the case, might as well go at it like this, and take things as they came. The pair started chatting about when they were young, then eventually fell asleep. That night, Jasper drank a glass of water as he usually did, then fell into an unusually deep sleep. Outside the bedroom, the doctors, the nurses, and Jasper's parents Bailey and Elliot were waiting outside. The nurses went in to confirm that Jasper had taken the sleeping drug, then several of them went in, dressed Jasper again, and put him on a stretcher. Then the group rolled Jasper to the surgery room. On the other end, Selena had gotten dressed and laid down on the bed, and the two were pushed into the operating theatre together. Before they could go under, Elliot gripped Selena's hand. "Your father and I will keep watch over you two outside. Jasper's just too stubborn, so we can only do this. I'm sorry, Selena. And I'm so grateful." As Elliot said that, Selena was wheeled inside, and the door shut completely.

Islamabad Man Earns Thousands Of Dollars Via This App

Elliot's face grew worrisome, and Bailey walked over, holding his wife's hand. "The surgery isn't dangerous, so don't be too anxious. We'll just wait outside for the good news. The surgeons are the top experts of the world. It'll be fine."

"I'm not worried that the surgery will fail, dear, I'm just worried that Jasper's going to throw a fit tomorrow when he wakes up. If he lost his temper just after he had his surgery, I'm worried it'll affect his recovery. He's never agreed to this, and I don't know if he'll forgive us for forcing him to do this." For all this while, Jasper and Selena had been in a stalemate.

Selena wanted her brother to have the operation immediately. She was willing to donate her kidney, but Jasper wouldn't have it.

Jasper didn't want his sister's kidney, but nothing had turned up on the black market, and his condition had worsened. Not to the point of death, of course, but enough to make Selena, Elliot and Bailey worry.

Elliot was especially worried. Her son never compromised and was ridiculously obstinate. Trying to convince him to let Selena donate her kidney was basically impossible.

As a mother who'd already lost her daughter, Elliot agreed to Selena's suggestion.

They decided to face Jasper's wrath after the surgery was done. After all, for Jasper, it'd just been one night's sleep. When he woke, the surgery would be complete.

And Jasper's body would slowly recover. Elliot had no regrets. She was just afraid that Jasper wouldn't forgive them as parents.

Bailey sighed as well. He knew what kind of personality his son had.

Stubborn like a mule.

"Don't think about if he'll be angry. If he can live on in good health, we should do it even if he'll hate us forever, right?"

Bailey finished, and Elliot's eyes reddened.

"It's all thanks to Selena's insistence this time. She really does care about Jasper, and Dan is looking healthier and cuter every day. I can't even bear to have Selena pick him up. I was wrong before. Selena only means the best for her brother. From now on, we have to treat her better."

"You finally get it."

Bailey smiled.

"We raised Selena, and she's our adopted daughter. She's always been a good, obedient girl. You can't blame young people for their feelings. Selena's always known that Jasper's not her birth brother, and Jasper's always been so nice to her. Of course she'd feel that way.

"Now that the child's been born, when Jasper gets better, let's see if there's some way we can match them together. If there isn't, we'll hide it for the rest of our lives, and treat Selena well for the rest of our lives."

Elliot could only nod, all while feeling uneasy.

It was impossible to tell if Jasper was going to throw a huge tantrum when he woke tomorrow. She turned to Bailey again.

“Maybe we should have his friends over to soothe him. Otherwise, he might hurt himself.”

“You mean having Jason and Robert over?”

Elliot nodded.

“Let’s give them a call tomorrow morning. Jasper probably won’t wake up from the operation until at least the afternoon. If there were more people around, at least he might be a bit more restrained.”

As the two spoke, they ran into Ivan outside by chance.

“What are you two doing outside the operation room so late, Mr. and Mrs. Holland?”

Chapter 414 Professor Lee’s Warning

Ivan had just finished a surgery in the morning. It’d been rough work, and it’d taken him a whole morning to finish.

With the surgery done, he’d been planning on going back and resting.

But then there’d been complications after the patient was finished with the surgery, and Ivan could only stay and see if there’d be any further problems, so he could continue with the operation at any time.

He’d stayed there in the hospital for a whole afternoon, and the patient had gone back to normal at night.

He was planning on heading back then, then he’d run into Jasper’s parents outside the operating theatre. Ivan couldn’t help but be curious.

After all, Jasper had been in the hospital all the while, and he was worried if Jasper’s parents were outside because his condition had taken a turn for the worst, and they were trying to pull him back from the brink.

Bailey and Elliot had been planning on telling Robert and Jason in the morning, then they’d run into Ivan.

Bailey sighed and explained how Jasper and Selena were inside under the scalpel.

Of course, they were going behind Jasper’s back, which was why they were operating at night.

Jasper, in other words, was being forced to accept his sister’s donated kidney while not knowing about it.

“So that’s how it is.”

Jasper heard it and sighed a long sigh.

It was Holland family internal affairs, and he couldn’t really have an opinion about it.

After all, Selena was willing, while the recipient was the unwilling one. That wasn’t really something an outsider could comment on, and Ivan could only comfort the old couple.

“It’s not a difficult operation, and it’ll go through in a while. Don’t worry, Mr. and Mrs. Holland, Jasper and Selena can definitely complete the surgery. I know the doctor, and he’s never failed this type of surgery.”

Bailey and Elliot shot him a grateful smile, and Ivan left.

He’d worked all through the day and it was time to rest.

It was late, and Ivan didn’t go to his brother’s mansion this time, instead heading back to his own place to sleep.

Early morning the next day, Georgia had just woken up and washed when Professor Lee gave her a call.

“I’d been planning on looking at the data you sent yesterday, but the student reunion was just too exhausting, and I only gave it a look this morning.”

Georgia had also tired herself out playing around outside yesterday, and she’d actually forgotten about the request she’d made of him.

“It’s all right, Professor. But seeing as you’ve seen it, have you seen the symptoms I sent you?”

“I’ve seen a situation that’s similar but not entirely the same.”

Hearing that, Georgia grew excited, and put the professor to her question.

“What then? How was this person cured with their body in that state?”

“It’s not exactly the same situation. The cancer cells in his body were almost uncontrollable, and the cAMP and anti-tumor substances had slowly lost their ability to fight against the cancer. Even with the cancer treatment substances that my and my mentor’s research team failed to have any effect.

“That man finally had all his organs fail one by one, and died in agony. He even begged us to euthanize him. How did you come by such data? It’s an incredibly rare situation, and I’ve only seen one case in all my years.”

Georgia's heart sank right away.

Especially hearing how Professor Lee was describing that person's agonized death, she couldn't help but feel sorrow and dread, and her voice trembled.

"Professor, when you first saw that person's condition and how different it was from normal cancer, did you know what caused it?"

Professor Lee sighed.

"I only heard about it, and I was still young. They say that person was kept in the lab of a mad scientist for live research and injected with all sorts of radical chemicals, which damaged all his organs and eventually caused him to develop cancer. A mutated cancer. Regular cancer spreads from a single spot of cells, say lung cancer or leukemia or lymphoma. But he was different. The cancer seemed to spread all throughout his body, and it destroyed his body in an instant like tearing down a rotten tree."

It was eerily similar to Robert's situation, but with Robert, the two sides were in balance, and he didn't look any different on the outside.

Maybe, though, when that balance was broken, the situation would turn into that of the person the professor had described.

"Professor, can you send that person's data to me? I don't know if you have any copies on hand, but please, find them for me. It's important to me."

"What is it? Is there someone close to you who's developed those symptoms? The same person whose data you sent me?"

Georgia didn't want too many people to know Robert was sick. She was afraid that too many of them would take advantage of his body's condition to start trouble. She replied to the professor.

"Professor, please, don't ask too much about this. It's dangerous. I'm afraid it'll threaten you. After you send me the information, please act like you haven't even heard of it. If the information needs to be searched for en masse, then forget it."

As Georgia said that, Professor Lee reacted.

“That makes sense. You can’t tell too many people about this. Back then, that person my mentor and I encountered had already been at the end of his rope, which was why he’d gone to our elite cancer treatment team to try and see if his symptoms could be alleviated, or if his body could be used for research to synthesize usable anti-cancer substances.

“Later on, all our experimental data was stolen. I suspect that even on his deathbed, that person was being used to generate experimental data. If there were mad scientists or specialist labs for human experimentation, they might have taken a shine to this body and wanted it for their tests. If someone around you is in this state, keep it secret, and tell as few people as possible. Don’t underestimate the darkness of this world. With more and more of the rich getting cancer, they might take a liking to this unusual condition to advance their own teams of scientists.

“After all, the report you gave me showed that the cancer cells and normal cells in his body are maintaining a balance, which proves that he’s got a surplus of anti-cancer substances in his body. People will get greedy. Some others might try to synthesize usable cancer treatment substances from his body.” Georgia stiffened.

She’d thought that as the head of the Simpsons, Robert had enemies out there on the regular, so it wasn’t the time to tell outsiders about his condition yet.

It took Professor Lee’s reminder for her to realize that Robert’s body had been experimented on by everyone inside the lab because they felt like his body had valuable data.

“I’ve got it, Professor. Thank you for telling me about this. Hurry up and delete the information I sent you. I might not be able to come to work for a while. It’s important to me. I want to cure this.”

“All right, I’ll hide it for you. But if you can find the cause of this condition and even discover some useful substances to use against cancer, your career might develop rapidly. You’ll find out what we’ve never found before, and with you researching those matters, you wouldn’t do anything like hurting that body. You should go further, Georgia, aim higher. Don’t give up on your dreams.”

Hearing Professor Lee’s encouragement, Georgia felt fear instead.

“Professor, I don’t have that much faith in myself, but I can only try my best to do this. I hope I can become the kind of person you say I can.”

Hanging up, Georgia headed to the dining room for breakfast. Before she could make it to Annie and Wesley’s side, there came a knock on the door to the mansion.

Georgia walked downstairs. Robert was sitting on the sofa.

Walking over, she saw Kenny and Dora walking in.

She found it strange that these two had come over. __

Chapter 415 Aidan’s Letter

She looked towards Robert, feeling like he’d know why these two were here.

“Sit next to me. I’ll explain. Don’t say anything later. I’ll resolve it.”

Robert spoke, and Georgia sat, confused, at his side.

The man leant close to her ear and lowered his voice.

“These two are here today to blackmail me. I’m going to play around with them. Don’t say anything. Just let them have their satisfaction.”

Wasn’t that just treating her as background? With a deeper meaning that he didn’t want her saying anything to ruin his plan?

Georgia smiled and sat next to him, watching Kenny and Dora sit on the sofa opposite Robert.

Kenny placed a packet on the tea table between them. Georgia saw a photo on top.

There she was in the picture, along with Sierra, who was being shut in the cage.

That was the night she’d gone to find Sierra. How had they taken that photo?

Georgia was shocked for a moment before understanding.

Kenny and Dora had come with ill intentions and material for extortion.

“Aunt, Uncle, I’m never stingy, but I hate being threatened again and again. I’ll ask you again, have you brought it all?

If my people find these types of photos by your side later on, or other places leak those photos, I don’t need to remind you how you’ll end up.”

“We’ve brought it all over. We wouldn’t lie to you about this.”

Dora hurriedly explained, and she smiled at Georgia.

“You’re lucky you have a husband who pampers you so much.”

“Don’t worry, Robert, that’s the end of it today, so long as you fulfil your end of the bargain.”

Georgia understood that they were using that image to threaten Robert’s position.

If it had been her regular self, she would have probably mocked them and sent them packing along with the photo.

She didn’t mind if it leaked. She didn’t have a shred of reputation left anyway.

But Robert had said to keep quiet and watch, since he had his own plan.

Georgia could only stifle herself and watch those two slimeballs bask in their own satisfaction.

“I’ve already written up the stock transfer documentation and signed it. You two just need to sign it, officiate it, then get a public witness to sign it for me, and the stock transfer will be complete.”

Saying that, he passed two documents to Dora and Kenny.

Those two snatched up the documents excitedly, looked at it, and smiled at each other.

“You’re a man of your word, Robert. Your aunt and I aren’t greedy; we just want a bit of profit from the Simpson family’s development. We won’t disturb you with this sort of thing anymore.”

With that, Dora and Kenny stood and got ready to leave with the documentation, all smiles.

When the two stood and prepared to walk off, Robert spoke coldly.

“You have what you want. Is it about time to tell me which of the people around me have been bought out by you two?”

Dora and Kenny looked at each other. Finally, Kenny gave up a man’s name.

Only after that did Robert let the two leave.

Georgia waited until they’d left the door completely and turned to Robert, feeling a little pent-up.

“Why did you let them get so arrogant? I don’t feel like that picture affects me too much. I’m not afraid of people besmirching my name after seeing it, either. Reputation is one of the most pointless things in this world.”

“Don’t worry, I’m just playing around with those two and letting them have their satisfaction for a while. After a while, they’ll come over again and beg us for mercy. It’s easy to get stocks, but returning it, probably not so much.”

“So you’re telling me you have some cunning plot to trap the two of them?”

Georgia’s pent-up feeling finally loosened.

She just knew that Robert couldn’t have let someone bully him.

Of course he had some other plan.

“I haven’t trapped them at all. They brought it on themselves, and I just found out by accident.”

Robert’s words were mild. Georgia felt like the person before her looked like a right proper strategist.

She hugged the man’s head and kissed her forehead.

“I knew that my Mr. Simpson wouldn’t get bullied like this. That aunt of yours dislikes me particularly. What did she do? Tell me, I want to laugh at her.”

Robert leant close to Georgia’s ear and whispered a few words, and Georgia burst into laughter.

It turned out that Dora had liked gambling, so even though the Simpson family had given her enough money to live the rest of her life in comfort, she’d spent it all.

Even though when she was young, she’d gotten married, her husband had divorced her because she was gambling so much, and her child had disowned her too.

For twenty years, Dora had lived all across the world as a rogue, occasionally coming back home to beg for a bit more money, then using it to gamble some more.

But she was a looker when she was young, so she could sell herself to make money, then occasionally come back to the Simpsons, get some wealth from Robert’s grandfather when he was still alive, then leave.

The Simpsons didn’t want the trouble, so they’d usually set aside some money and chase her off.

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!

If She Has These Qualities, You Should Never Let Her Go!

But for the past five years, Dora’s luck had improved, and she’d been dazzled by a pretty boy, even marrying him and giving him control over all her wealth.

The pretty boy and Dora would continue to come back to the Simpsons for money, then have Dora invest the money for her. The two were married now, and Dora had been completely entranced by the pretty boy, so she'd given the money to her new husband to invest with.

What Dora didn't know, though, was that the pretty boy who'd latched to her was even more vicious and even more of a gambler than she was.

The businesses they invested in owed the banks over a billion in debt, and now that pretty boy also owed hundreds of millions to casinos.

The banks and the casinos were only staying their hand on Dora and her husband because of the Simpson family reputation. But then Robert had spoken to the people who ran those places and let them have free rein.

After this, Dora would take on her husband's debt, and then be harassed by the people from the casino every day.

For those sorts of places, they were the types who'd lock people up, beat them, break their limbs if they wouldn't pay them back. There would be no mercy until the money was repaid.

If Dora had a good relationship with the other Simpsons, she could still seek protection from them.

But with it having gone this far, all Robert was going to do was laugh at her until she came over to beg him.

His short-sighted aunt thought that she could have no worries the rest of her life with a bit of money.

In reality, without the Simpsons backing her, she wouldn't be able to keep a cent of all that money.

As for Kenny, he was even more ambitious and incompetent.

A while ago, his money had been scammed to do a huge investment, which ended up sinking into nothing.

In his rage, Kenny went and found the investor who'd scammed him.

Then he'd lost it and killed the investor, whose family had found proof and was going to have him pay.

Murderers got life in prison.

Even with billions in property, there was no way to spend it.

So Robert was planning on watching the show.

The two chatted for a while longer about Dora and Kenny, until Georgia grew more and more satisfied, eager to see the two made fools of.

The butler couldn't hold it in anymore and came over, urging the two to hurry up and eat breakfast. Wesley and Annie were already seated, waiting for their parents.

After breakfast, the boss of M Garden, Harvey, who'd had an appointment with them yesterday, came over. He passed two letters to Robert.

"Ever since Mr. Simpson returned to the country, those two letters have been kept with me all along. I was supposed to hand them back over after he passed, but too much happened in the middle, and I only managed to give these to you now."

"Other from these letters, did my father leave anything else behind?"

Harvey shook his head.

"He's said everything he needed to say in this letter."

After Georgia and Robert saw Harvey off, Robert held the letters in his hand, hesitant.

One of the letters was for Robert. From the side, Georgia spoke up.

"Are you too scared to read them? If you want to read them alone, you can go to the reading room. Don't worry about me. Unless you want to tell me about the contents, I won't ask."

"Maybe it's just because it's so close to my heart. It's hard for me to muster the courage to read them."

Robert smiled faintly and took the letter, standing.

"I'm going to the reading room for a while. I'll talk with you after I've read it."

This was a time that belonged to Robert and his father, and the two of them alone.

Georgia nodded. Of course she wasn't going to get involved.

As Robert left, Georgia's mood suddenly turned sorrowful.

She recalled what Professor Lee had said, and didn't know exactly how she was going to fix Robert's condition right now.

But as she was feeling conflicted, she found an unknown number calling on her phone.

She took the call, and a middle-aged woman's voice came from the other end.

"Miss Lane, I'm Aston's mother, Laurie Powell. You can call me aunt too. I'm here in D City with Aston's father. Can we meet you?”

Georgia was shocked that Aston’s parents wanted to meet her. Strange as it was, Georgia agreed.

“Where would you like to meet? I’m free today.”

“We might have to trouble you to come near the hospital...”

Georgia confirmed the time and place, then stood and got ready to tell Robert she was leaving.

Meanwhile, Robert had come to Maisie’s room, opening the letter than his father had left her.

He was planning on letting his mother know what her husband’s last words to her were. _____

Chapter 416 Maisie Reads the Letter

Robert had been planning on moving his mother to the house at the side today.

But it hadn’t begun yet, and because he’d seen Harvey yesterday, he decided to take the letter to his mother.

Just as he was getting ready to go into the reading room with the letter, the butler had come over and told him that his mother was now sober.

So it was just the time for Robert to come in front of Maisie’s room with the letter his father had for her.

“If you’ve decided to be with that Lane woman, what are you still coming to see me for? After all, in your eyes, I’m not even a match for a hair on Georgia Lane’s head, so why bother with a lame, elderly woman like me? Let me die on my own!”

Maisie’s voice was full of resentment and pain, and Robert didn’t expect his mother to forgive him on the spot. If saying those things could allow her to take her temper out a little, that was good enough.

He took out the letter and walked in front of his mother.

“Yesterday, when I went to M Garden for a meal, I met the boss of the place, Harvey Moore. Mom, I don’t know if you’re aware of the relationship between Harvey and my father. He told me that Dad left us two letters, one for me, and one for you. I’d wanted to read the one Dad had left for me first, but the butler says you’re awake now, and I think you might want to see this.”

With that, Robert passed the opened envelope to his mother.

Maisie, who’d been simmering with a wrathful grudge to begin with, froze to the spot from the news.

Aidan had actually left her a letter. This man didn’t ask after her for over a dozen years, didn't lavish a single care on his son and daughter, and didn't even know his daughter was dead. She hadn't been willing to tell Aidan, either, just to see if this man would have asked after the two of them every year. But several years after their daughter died, Aidan didn't even come back.

At that moment, Maisie understood it all. The moment Aidan decided to leave the Simpson family, he'd abandoned them for good, so he wouldn't be keeping up with information at all. That man wouldn't even have known their daughter was gone. Her hatred burned deeper year after year, and just thinking of Aidan, the man she'd loved and hated throughout her life, Maisie's heart bloated with bitterness.

So back then, when she'd been in danger and saw the bomb before her, all she wanted was to take revenge on this man, have him torn to shreds, dead before her.

As if it would relieve the bitterness and agony – but knowing that Aidan was dead in every rare moment Maisie was sober this year, it didn't make her that happy.

She would rather have stayed deranged. And with his son's incident, Maisie didn't have a care in the world, and she thought she might as well have just lived out the rest of her life as a madwoman.

She'd thought that Aidan hadn't had the slightest bit of pity or respect for her.

So, she hadn't expected that a year after the man's death, she'd receive a letter he'd penned for her.

Maisie's hand trembled as she took the letter, her eyes reddening right away.

"Your father... still remembered to leave something for me. I thought that he felt like he didn't need to tell us if he lived or died anymore. I've been married to him for ten years, and he left for a new love just like that. It's possible he never loved me, and I was only someone who was arranged to marry him. I thought I'd always only been a tool in his eyes. But he still remembers that I exist."

Maisie's mood affected Robert, and he felt a twinge of sorrow. He recognized the sadness, fury, and pain in his mother's tone. His father had really gone too far with her. Just one letter could make her this happy.

“Go. I want to read this letter alone.”

Maisie spoke to Robert.

She didn't have the energy to care about Georgia and Robert, and didn't want to care about how she was going to interact with her son in the future.

He's Using This Secret Trick To Make Millions

She just wanted to see what the contents of Aidan's letter to her were.

“I'll be waiting for you outside, Mom. If anything comes up, remember to let me in.”

Robert said that, then left the room and closed the door.

He took a few steps out and saw Georgia headed this way, seemingly looking for him.

Robert walked over on his own and spoke to her.

“I didn't go to the reading room. The butler said my mother was awake, so I went to see her. Then I gave her the letter Mr. Moore kept. She wants to be alone right now and see what the final letter my father left were says.”

Georgia nodded, then raised a dubious question.

“Then you haven't read your own letter yet, right?”

Robert nodded.

“Not yet. I suddenly can't muster the nerve to read it in the moment. I'm worried my mother might get another breakdown, so I wanted to wait outside for her situation. Don't bother with me. I have to wait outside the door in case my mother wants me in. Maybe she'll want to chat later.”

Hearing Robert say that, Georgia responded.

“I just got a phone call from Aston's mother, who counts as my aunt. She told me that she's here in D City with Aston's father, and wants to meet me near the hospital. I might have to go out now, so I came over to tell you about it.”

“Why do Aston's parents want to meet you?”

Robert asked suspiciously.

“For Aston? But you're only cousins. Last time we went over, we tried to persuade him, but just a couple sentences later he lost his temper. Are they hoping you can say anything more to their son? We haven't gone to visit for the past few days; do you know what situation he's in right now?”

Georgia shook her head.

“I don’t know what condition he’s in for the moment, but looks like he should still be in the hospital. Otherwise, Aston’s parents wouldn’t have arranged the meeting to be around the hospital. I don’t think they mean any harm. I’ll go see them and see what they want me for.”

Robert wasn’t going to keep her from the door, of course, but he still cautioned her.

“You can’t see what’s in a person’s heart. You haven’t been in contact with them, after all. What if they’ve been kidnapped and are being threatened to get you outside? Bring your bodyguards; don’t go alone.”

Georgia couldn’t help but smile.

“Of course I understand that. I won’t leave alone, and I’ll definitely bring bodyguards with me. Annie and Wesley are taking a nap. Remember to watch the kids. I’ll be back as soon as I can.”

With that, Georgia said goodbye to Robert, then got out, into a car, and headed to the meeting place she’d agreed on with Aston’s parents.

She was used to taking bodyguards with her whenever she went out now.

The habit had come about because the last two times she’d been attacked, it’d been because there weren’t enough people around her protecting her, which allowed Robert to be threatened, and injured when he was saving her.

Those two lessons had left a marked impression on Georgia, so she wasn’t going to go out alone out of obstinacy.

Meanwhile, Robert waited outside his mother’s room.

In the room itself, Maisie trembled, fell silent for a while, and finally unfurled the letter.

Seeing the first line on the letter, her tears fell and moistened the paper. ____

Chapter 417 Meeting Aston’s Parents

“Maisie, I’m sorry.”

Seeing the first line, Maisie almost didn’t have the courage to read on.

She set the letter aside, covered her mouth, and wept.

Robert could hear his mother’s sobs from outside. Not loud wailing, but muffled, quavering sobs.

In the end, his mother was still hung up over his father. If she could set him aside, maybe she'd be happier later on. Robert didn't want his mother to drown in the past.

After crying for an untold period of time, Maisie mustered the strength to read on.

Her eyes were immensely swollen, and her sobs from earlier had her body trembling.

But she'd already taken up the letter before her, and continued to read.

"I once thought that we'd live respectfully together, or become a pair of grudgeful people in our middle years, with you living your own days, and me mine. I was busy with business every day, and you were busy raising our children. It was a mild, boring life to me.

"I married you because I found you elegant and proper, and would make a good wife. Before I met that woman, I'd never loved anyone before. I never felt like I'd feel anything for any woman in this life. To be honest, before meeting her, I didn't believe in love at first sight, so I felt like I could live the rest of my life with you.

"From since the time I grew up, I'd planned my life well. I thought that after I retired as I planned at fifty and let my son take over the family business, I'd travel the world as a drifter. But that was all my own imagination. I fell in love with that woman the moment I saw her, to the point of obsession.

"I know the things I've done are insane, and I know that doing this is letting you down and letting our son and daughter down. But I'd never wanted to live the life I wanted before. It's the most selfish I've ever been in my life, and it resulted in you being hurt so badly. But I still left and decided never to come back, until Robert had his incident, and you had to find me anyway.

"You see, that's how cold and selfish I am. If I had any pity or love or sympathy for you, I wouldn't have made that decision. That was how cold I was to begin with. I'm not worth your entire life's longing, or your entire life's grudge, and I'm not worth staying in the Simpsons for. I'm planning on having someone give you this letter after my death. I think that if I said these things to you while I was alive, you'd only sneer at me, say I was looking for excuses, and mock me for being a hypocrite.

“But if you’re reading this letter, I must have already departed this world. I’m dead now. Go live your own life. Don’t waste your hate and your emotions on me. In the end, the one person I feel like I should be the sorriest for is our daughter. I didn’t know all that would have happened to her. You see? The person I’m sorriest for isn’t even you, but I still felt like I should apologize to you.

“Live the life you want from now on.”

The letter ended there, at a screeching halt.

Maisie rolled her wheelchair over to the window-side.

She suddenly recalled the year they’d gotten married, the man’s faint smile at her, and the vows they’d spoken before the priest.

It was fake. It had all been fake.

It was only her being so invested like a fool, believing that if she worked hard enough, treated him well enough, he’d look back at her eventually.

But it had just been her own longing.

Robert waited outside for a long time, and didn’t hear her sobs anymore, which worried him.

After a long while, the door opened, and Robert saw his mother wheeling herself outside.

“Are you all right, Mom?”

Robert asked concernedly, afraid his father had written something that could provoke his mother’s madness.

“I’ve got something I want to ask you. Are you planning on being together with Georgia for the rest of your life?”

Robert nodded silently. If he said any more, she might have gotten even angrier.

Maisie scoffed.

“Know what your father said to me in his letter? He wants me to live the life I want to live. Well, the life I want to live one where my son and Casey Allen’s daughter are completely separate, and never tangled together. Your father wouldn’t want that, but he’s dead, so what can he do? He can panic from the other side.

“I’ll ask you again. Your mother, or your wife. Me or Georgia.

You can only choose one. If you choose Georgia, then there's no need for the two of us to see each other again. From now on, you'll no longer be my son!"

Even though he'd known that his mother would have made him choose, but Robert still hadn't expected his mother to make such a demand after seeing the letter.

"Mom, you mind that Georgia and Casey are mother and daughter, but do you know that Casey had never raised Georgia, and they'd been separated for over twenty years? For all this time, Casey never thought of Georgia, because she'd forgotten everything, been lied to by my father, then lived for over twenty years under another identity. She only remembered those memories lost year."

"Are you defending them?"

Maisie sneered.

"Don't change the subject. Your father's right. He's selfish, and only wanted to live his life as he wanted. Now I'm going to be like your father and live the life I want. If you leave Georgia, I'll still recognize you as my son. If you don't, then I don't need you as a son. I don't need a son who hurts my heart."

"If you don't want me as a son, Mom, I'll still care for you, protect you, and love you in my own way. No matter if you disown me by word, or by announcing it to the newspapers, or by no longer permitting you to see me, I can care for you in other ways. You're my father, and I'll repay the debt I owe you in some other way.

"If disowning me will make you feel better, then you can do you. But I won't ignore you or leave you for it. No matter where you go, as your son, I'll keep you safe, and keep your life free of worry."

Robert's words had Maisie so angry her fingers trembled.

"You're still determined to be with Georgia Lane over having me as a mother. How could I have had a son like you?"

"I'm not choosing to abandon you. You're choosing to abandon me. But I won't distance myself from you for it. I'll take care of you in other ways."

"Take care of me? Being with Casey Allen's daughter and pricking me where it hurts every day is supposed to be taking care of me?"

Maisie shrieked in rage. All she felt right now was that her son was being a shameless bastard, and her whole hand shook. In the moment, she couldn't think of any words to refute him with.

"Mom, being with Georgia might hurt you a little, but you're telling me to leave her; the woman I love the most. Have you thought of how hurt I would be to be separated from her? You're asking me to hurt myself. I can't do that.

"Maybe I'm like my father, selfish and cold. You can think of me that way. But I'll always take care of you. I'll arrange it if you want to go have fun somewhere. I'll switch your home out if you don't want to live here. I'll stop having Georgia appear before you if you don't want to see her. Other than being separated from Georgia, I'll try my best to satisfy you on everything else."

"Laughable!"

Maisie scoffed, and wheeled her chair forward.

"Butler, take me to the garden. I need some fresh air."

She didn't seem to want to talk with Robert anymore. Maisie just wanted to be away from this son of hers.

She was afraid she'd get an ulcer if she took another look at him.

Robert sighed and could only let the servants and the butlers take his mother to the mansion garden to bask in the sunlight. It was winter, but the weather today was warm, and the winter sun was high in the sky.

It was quite cozy.

Meanwhile, Georgia had come to the meeting place with Aston's parents.

It was a café close to the hospital. The décor was elegant, and it wasn't noisy.

It was almost half full with customers, but the people who'd come here all liked it quiet.

Even if they spoke, they kept the volume low.

Georgia went in, told them who she was meeting, and the server brought her to a compartment.

Opening the door and going in, Georgia saw Aston's mother Laurie, and his father Carr.

Chapter 418 Old Man Powell's Iron Grip

Carr Powell looked bookish and gentlemanly, with gold-rimmed glasses and a gentle smile on his face.

Laurie, on the other hand, looked more outwardly attractive. Aston was more similar to his mother in appearance, but his aura was closer to his father.

Back then when Aston had video called his mother, Georgia had seen Laurie's appearance, but this was her first time seeing Carr.

They were nominally her uncle and aunt, but Georgia couldn't quite get the words out.

She went in with a polite smile, but couldn't really call them family.

In the end, she went with "Mr. and Mrs. Powell."

Laurie, though, smiled.

"Come, sit. You must find it strange that we suddenly called you here to see us, and you probably aren't too used to it. But we'll get to know each other better once we meet and talk some more."

Georgia could only nod, then sat somewhat cautiously before the couple.

Laurie beamed at Georgia.

"No need to be nervous. We didn't come to you for anything too important. We mainly just wanted to meet you. After all, you've gotten back together with your mother, but you haven't seen the other Powells yet. Your uncle here particularly wanted to meet you. He just took an operation that needed for him to be in the city, and Aston is in hospital, so I came over with him to see our son and see you along the way."

As Laurie finished, Carr showed a gentle smile to Georgia.

"Your aunt and I mostly just wanted to meet you and get to know each other better. When your mother's fully healed, you might still need to visit the Powell family with her. The family's in a complicated situation, which your mother doesn't know too well. Aston probably wouldn't have told you too much, and he's left the family, probably for good. As for Emilia, she's more radical, and I'm afraid her words might give you some misunderstanding. So, thinking about it, we decided to come meet you in person."

So that was what this was all for. Georgia had thought that Aston's parents were seeing her over Aston's situation. She showed a mild smile.

"Regarding whether or not I'll come back to see the other Powells, we'll see how it goes.”

Probably noticing that Georgia wasn't too willing to go back to the Powell family, Laurie and Carr exchanged a glance.

Carr turned back to Georgia afterwards.

“The Powell family never raised you, and your mother was only found afterwards, so you don't owe the Powell family for raising you at all. It's normal that you're unwilling to head back, but some things are beyond your imagination. I'm afraid you and your mother will be hurt.

“With that father of mine, it's always been his way or the highway. He disregards the younger generation entirely, and sometimes even does things to hurt them. I've caught wind of some things, so thinking it over, I decided to talk to you about it.”

Georgia showed a shocked expression.

“What, if my mother and I are unwilling to go back, he's planning to force us? What can he do to threaten me?”

Georgia couldn't help but show a mocking grin.

She really didn't have any feelings towards the Powells. Aston, who was her friend to begin with, was an exception. So was Emilia, whose personality was loose enough for her to chat with.

As for the rest of her mother's family, if her mother didn't care, of course she didn't care one whit either.

“It might seem funny to you, but to my father, it makes complete sense. If he wants to see you, he feels like you should go see him outright, and show him respect. If you didn't go, he'd just feel like you're offending him, then he'll have people kidnap you and bring you over. If they can't kidnap you, he'll kidnap someone close to you instead to threaten you into seeing him. Don't find it strange. He can do this sort of thing.

“That's why, in the beginning, my son Aston disliked his grandfather's methods and didn't want to inherit the Powell family or his grandfather's way of doing things. So my father up and threw down the gauntlet at Aston, saying that if he didn't want to inherit the Powell family, he ought to just get out. So from that point on, Aston left the family and didn't go back again. Other than occasionally contacting his mother, he rarely even meets with me.”

These Strange Ways Will Keep Your Relationship Strong Day To Day

“No offense, but with your father’s way of doing things without a care for anything or anyone in the world, is there nobody who can rein him in?”

Georgia really wanted to say that, no matter how powerful the Powells were, there had to be families stronger than them still.

Has this old man never been beaten down by society and taught how to do things?

Or was this old man just too capable for anyone else to do anything but okay?

“My father rules with an iron grip. But he mainly uses that iron grip on the Powell family. Us younger generations have to follow his commands. Anyone who’s not down with his decisions either get punished into being obedient, or get booted out after repeatedly refusing his plans. Aston’s not the first to leave the Powell family, and my father doesn’t care about this sort of thing, which is why he only gets authoritarian with other Powells.”

“Okay.”

Georgia was a bit speechless. She smiled gratefully at the couple before her.

“Thank you for reminding me of this. I’ll pay attention. If he’s going to use other methods, I’ll go see him if he really wants to meet me. It’s just a meeting. Can’t be that important.”

With that, she asked Aston’s parents another question.

“Since you’ve caught wind of his intentions, do you know why he wants to meet me?”

“That I don’t know. It might have something to do with your status now. You inherited the SY Group and now you’re Robert Simpson’s wife. He might see a chance to profit off you, or something else. If my father’s people really do come for you and ask you to go over and meet them, just don’t refuse.

“He’s stubborn as a mule, but he won’t harm you with dirty tactics. The most he’ll do is get forceful if you don’t agree to meet him.”

Finishing that topic with Aston’s parents, they finally moved on to Aston.

“Back then, with what happened between Aston and Kayden, you seemed to be there, and you knew why they broke up. As parents, we don’t get involved in our children’s emotions. I’ll only support him getting married with the person he loves. I don’t know why he left Kayden, but I could tell from before that he liked her.

“I only found it regretful in the beginning that they didn’t end up together and was torturing himself with work over how much pain he felt. As his mother, it hurt me to see it, and I was ready to come persuade him along with his father as we came to the city. But for these past two days, a pretty girl always came to his room to speak with him. I know what personality my son had. He’d only treat someone he didn’t like coldly, trying to force them to leave.

“But this time, he actually agreed to be with the girl. I could see that he didn’t like her at all. But as his mother, there’s not really much I can say. Georgia, can you look over Aston for me and also look into that girl? After all, Robert is from this city, and it’d be easier for your side to investigate the girl. I’d like to ask you to do so for me. I don’t want another unusual girl to appear close to my son, then hurt him.”

Georgia was stunned by that. She’d known Aston for so long, and she knew how cold and ruthless he was to women he wasn’t interested in.

Now he was willing to be with a woman he didn’t like. That wasn’t normal at all.

Was it because he’d taken a blow in love, and now wanted to feel love from another woman?

That was such a cliched development that Georgia felt goosebumps pop up across her body.

She turned to Laurie and raised another question.

“Mr. Powell, do you know that girl’s name or do you have any of her photos? It’d be easier for me to investigate that way.”

“I know the girl’s name, but I don’t have her photo. Her name is Anaya Mitchell.”

“Anaya?”

Chapter 419 Aston and Anaya Sitting in a Tree

Georgia couldn’t help but raise her voice. Laurie nodded, a little confused.

“Why? Do you know the girl?”

Georgia nodded. It was a long story.

"She and I and Aston used to be colleagues in the same research team. Back then, Aston's research direction aligned with mine, and we conversed often. Anaya always liked Aston, so she'd been somewhat hostile to me. There's been some bad blood between us. Not only that, but she's also Robert's cousin. I'm technically her cousin too now, but our relationship isn't the best. And before, Aston used to really dislike Anaya and wouldn't give her the time of day. Why's he with her now?"

Georgia found it strange, and Laurie also chuckled helplessly.

"Yes, I can see it too. Aston doesn't like the girl, and I don't like this Anaya, either. I keep feeling like she's not as pure of mind as she lets on. But Aston just has to be with her. As his mother, I can't crack down, so that's why I wanted you to investigate her for me. So my speculation was right and there really is an issue."

"I'll go meet him."

Georgia suggested actively.

"I don't know if he's willing to see me, but I'll still go ask him what he's thinking. If it's hard for you to get involved, Mr. and Mrs. Powell, I'll ask him for you."

Laurie and Carr both thanked Georgia.

Afterwards, when Georgia headed to the hospital again, she received a call from Robert.

"Are you close to the hospital and haven't got home yet?"

Georgia nodded.

"I'm getting ready to meet Aston at the hospital. I'll go home afterwards."

At that, Robert chuckled at the other end of the line.

"Don't leave the hospital for now. I'm coming to the hospital too. Then we can both go home together."

That had Georgia a little surprised.

"What are you doing in the hospital too?"

"Last night, Jasper and Selena had their surgery in the operating room. Jasper should still be under, and the doctors guess that after the anesthetic wears off, he'll wake up in the afternoon."

So Jasper and Selena had already had their surgery.

Why did they do it in the middle of the night, though? And hadn't Jasper refused the operation all along?

Georgia found it strange and hadn't raised her own question yet when Robert continued.

"The surgery was done when Jasper wasn't aware. Selena and their parents essentially forced the operation on him. Jasper is definitely going to be angry when he wakes up, so Mr. and Mrs. Holland gave me a call and asked me to come to the hospital to see Jasper, maybe persuade him a little, so he doesn't throw a tantrum after the operation and make it hard to recover.

"Jason should have received the phone call already. We'll see him together. Ivan also gave me a call. He's at the hospital already and we'll probably go see Jasper with us. But right now, he still needs to check on the patient he operated on yesterday and see how that person's recovering. Wait for me at the hospital. We'll go see Jasper together."

Georgia nodded and agreed.

Afterwards, she went to Aston's room.

Opening the door, Anaya was there sitting at Aston's bedside, peeling an apple and talking about something while Aston read a book at the side.

The scene looked sweet, but she found it strange.

So the two really were together. What was Aston thinking?

Georgia was dubious, while Aston and Anaya both turned to look at her with her arrival.

Anaya, who'd either mocked her or showed outright hatred to her, actually gave a pleasing smile this time around.

"Hello, cousin. Are you here to see Aston? Come, sit, I'll fetch you some water."

That pleasing attitude was a little disturbing.

Georgia felt like Anaya didn't have good intentions, but after she sat down, Anaya really did pour her some water.

She couldn't help but be suspicious.

"You didn't poison this water or anything, did you?"

He's Using This Secret Trick To Make Millions

Surprising Facts About La'Tecia Thomas You Probably Didn't Know That had Anaya smiling awkwardly, and Aston even chuckled at the side.

"You're making too much of it, Georgia. She's apologizing for what happened before. With me here, she won't do anything to you."

These two were being weird.

Georgia took a sip and put the water down, while Anaya beamed at her.

“I was young and stupid back then and had a bad attitude towards you. I went too far in some occasions. Please, could you let bygones be bygones? I won’t do that sort of thing anymore.”

“You don’t need to apologize to me.”

Georgia said embarrassedly. With how Anaya was apologizing and trying to please her, she felt a bit apprehensive.

“Didn’t I misunderstand your relationship with Aston back then? You two turned out to be cousins. Look at how silly I was, dear cousin. Please be generous and disregard those dumb things I used to do.”

Georgia could only nod, actually disregarding those dumb things for a moment.

The two had a pretty big grudge, but since Anaya was being so pleasing, it wouldn’t be too proper to dredge up that grudge.

She turned to Anaya and spoke.

“I’d like to discuss some things with my cousin. You might have to step out for a bit. I’ll be done in a moment.”

Anaya didn’t look too happy with that, while Aston spoke.

“Go downstairs and buy some oranges if you would. I’ll just talk with Georgia for a while. You can come back later.”

Anaya left a little resentfully, and her pleasing expression towards Georgia turned a little dissatisfied.

She knew that Anaya wasn’t seriously repenting. She was just pretending for Aston.

When Anaya walked off, Georgia hadn’t spoken yet when Aston broached the subject.

“What’s so important you needed to get Anaya out of the room?”

“I think you can guess. It’s not my business, but I can at least ask about it, right? You used to dislike Anaya, didn’t you? Why are you suddenly agreeing to be with her now?”

At that, Aston showed a strange smile.

“After I got sick, Anaya come to the hospital every day to take care of me and talk to me. I recalled the first time I’d seen her. That was four or five years ago. She’d started courting me then. When I went back to D City and started working at the MU lab, she came over to and continued to chase after me. I was wondering how a person could remain determined for so long.

Was she capable of loving me all throughout?

“So, I thought that if I couldn’t be with someone I loved, then I could be with someone who loved me. I want to know what it feels like to be loved.”

“But didn’t you hate her? Well, maybe not hate, but weren’t you always cold to her?”

At those words, Aston ducked his head and chuckled.

“Back when I first got to know you, Robert didn’t treat you that well. Aren’t you all sweet and sticky right now? Not all loves in this world start and end in honey. Maybe I’ll really fall for her.”

That was such a powerful reason that Georgia wasn’t just struck dumb, she actually choked up.

After all, she hadn’t been that willing to remember all the unhappiness that had once been between Robert and her.

But Aston just had to go there.

In the end, Georgia couldn’t really say anything else and left Aston’s room.

Before she left, she urged him to look after his own body, then go back to work after he’d recovered.

She stood in the hospital corridor, preparing to give Robert a call.

Then she suddenly saw Kayden’s figure.

Georgia had no idea what Kayden was doing in the hospital.

Without a trace of hesitation, Georgia chased after her shadow._____

Chapter 420 Kayden’s Warning

Kayden was walking particularly quickly. Georgia had only just started running.

As if realizing someone was chasing after her, Kayden started running too.

Following her stride, Georgia chased her into an elevator.

Naturally, Georgia’s bodyguards also followed her into the elevator.

In an instant, Kayden and Georgia occupied the same space.

“I’m warning you, don’t follow me!”

Kayden didn’t look at Georgia and kept her eyes straight forward as she cautioned her.

“What are you doing in D City? And in this hospital too. Did you know that Aston was sick?”

At Georgia's words, Kayden's face changed.

Her expression was cold, and her voice chilling.

"Don't get close to me. Word of advice. Delete all of Robert's experimental data in this hospital. Someone's looking into his body checkup report."

Georgia trembled, and the elevator doors opened.

Georgia was going to chase up, while Kayden turned around and spoke directly to her.

"If you follow me, you'll bring Robert even greater danger."

At that, Georgia's footsteps came to a halt.

She watched Kayden walk out of the elevator, then watched the elevator doors slide shut. Kayden's words reverberated in her mind, making her whole body shake.

When the elevator stopped at another floor, she hurriedly got out and immediately gave Robert a call.

"Where are you now? Are you at the hospital yet? I've got something important to tell you."

Georgia herself hadn't realized that her voice was particularly panicky, while Robert heard it right away.

"Has something happened? I've just reached the ground floor of the hospital. Where are you? I'll come see you right away."

"Then come to the first floor. I'm next to the elevator. I'm coming over to see you now."

Georgia got back into the elevator, fingers locked, her palm already seeping with sweat.

She recalled what Professor Lee had reminded her of in the beginning. With Kayden's warning and Robert's current situation, a fearful Georgia didn't know what to do.

The elevator ride was less than a minute, but Georgia felt like she'd experienced a century inside.

As the elevator doors slid open, Robert was waiting for her outside.

The man before her had just shown a smile when Georgia rushed over and gave him a hug.

"What's with you? Why are you sticking to me like this all of a sudden?"

Robert seemed to find it amusing, but his tone was gentle.

"Hug me tighter. I'm scared."

Robert rarely saw Georgia so afraid her emotions leaked, and his eyes deepened.

After he hugged her tight for a dozen seconds, Georgia felt her heart settle.

She hurriedly told Robert about how she'd just seen Kayden, and what Kayden had cautioned her of.

"I'm really worried. You'll have to take care of the hospital. Hurry up and call them and tell them to wipe your data. Right, and tell Ivan about it. He's the best one to deal with it. He knows the twists and turns of the hospital and he'd also know if they really wiped the data.

"Professor Lee also reminded me – with your situation right now, if other people know, you'd attract more than just enemy attacks. I'm even more worried that some forces in the shadows would take a shine to your body's state and target you for it."

Robert's relaxed expression turned cold and guarded. He gripped Georgia's hand and kissed her forehead.

"Don't worry. Since we've been warned about this, we can take precautions.

"Ivan's in the hospital. I'll give him a call, and he can arrange it. Don't panic. It hasn't begin yet. If someone's really targeting me, with how Kayden put it, they mustn't have grasped too much information yet. Besides, with all the bodyguards around us, it's hard to strike at us just like that."

Georgia reined herself in and watched Robert give Ivan a call. Afterwards, the three of them met in a break room inside the hospital.

Robert spoke about Georgia and Kayden and everything they were worried about, and Ivan's face changed.

"It's my fault. Back then when the check was being run, I should have considered this. I just felt that with the Simpsons as a family, regular people wouldn't have dared to target you. I was careless. For madmen or people who don't care anymore, who knows what they'll do. The body checkup figures can't be leaked. If someone really did do something to your blood, there'll be no defense."

Ivan finished, then turned back to Robert and Georgia for a moment.

"Wait here, you two. Georgia, tell me about all the departments you had Robert do the check in. I'll go ask them about it in person and watch them destroy the information. I hope I can still make it."

Georgia hurriedly sent the data on her phone to Ivan and watched him walk away.

For some reason, she wasn't reassured at all. Instead, she was more worried than ever.

Robert held her hands, his voice strong and gentle.

"Don't be afraid. The worst that could happen is for my body check data to be leaked. That'll just let people know what state I'm in. I wouldn't be hurt at all. Don't act like the sky is collapsing."

Georgia's eyes reddened, though, and she clutched at Robert.

"I know. I know we're fine right now, and I know you're doing well, but you don't understand. If they have your blood, they can work with it and work on it, then get a grasp of exactly what's going on in your body. They can even use your samples to create something specifically to target your body. You know how your system is in balance right now. What if they made something that could disrupt that balance? If you ingested it even by accident, I'm afraid..."

Georgia didn't dare go on.

She didn't want to imagine the worst. Especially how Robert had been shut in the lab a year ago.

Georgia couldn't help but speak again in a panic.

"Kayden warned me about this. Seems like she knows something. I suspect the data on you in the lab last year was leaked. Maybe someone received the data. Jayson Mathis couldn't have been the only person in this world to have found someone to do this sort of experiment. I'm worried they'll target you. We have to be careful. We can't give anyone any openings."

Georgia finished, after which Robert lightly patted her back and soothed her.

"Don't worry. Safety first, of course. With our status now, even if my body was fine, there'd be people targeting us from the shadows to begin with. This calls for caution. If you really don't feel like it's safe, let's pull Annie and Wesley out of school for now. I'll hire a family tutor to give the kids lessons. With how smart those two are, they'll just be missing some friends staying at home. When we've resolved how we've got enemies in the shadows and by our flank, they can still go to school.”

At Robert’s words, Georgia nodded.

“You’re right. The school is too chaotic. A moment’s diversion and those people might use the children. We have to be on guard with this.”

The two finished talking about that, and Robert raised a question, curious.

“Why do you think Kayden would warn you about this of her own volition? According to my knowledge, you could even say you two used to be enemies. Why’s she suddenly being so kind as to warn us?” _____

Chapter 421 Delete The Data

Georgia was also puzzled by his words. Because what Kayden said made Georgia too flustered, she didn't think about why Kayden reminded her of this.

Robert's question confused her.

"She planned to kill my mother before, but now she even reminded me of this. What on earth is her intention? At least, she must know who is planning to hurt you. Does that force happen to be hostile to her, too? So she also wants to destroy their plans."

Robert burst into laughter when he heard Georgia's words.

"Don't think too much. Now that she came to the hospital today, I'll check all the surveillance videos to see what she has done and then infer what she's doing in the hospital. But now, after Ivan eliminated all the physical examination data of me, we have to go to see Jasper. I think he's about to wake up."

As soon as Robert finished his words, his phone rang.

The phone was connected, and Jason's voice came from it.

"Where are you? I have arrived at the hospital. Is Jasper awake?"

Robert told him where he was now. About ten minutes later, Jason opened the door and came in.

"Why don't you two go to Jasper's ward but just stay here? By the way, where is Ivan? Didn't he say that he would go with us?"

Robert told him what had just happened, and Jason also became serious.

"You've suffered so much in the past two years. If you hadn't told me, I wouldn't have known it was so serious. But fortunately, I didn't tell anyone else about it. When Jasper wakes up, we have to tell him, too. The fewer people know, the better. We can't let more people know about it."

Robert nodded and Jason sat down.

He comforted Robert.

"Don't worry. No one dares to hurt you at home. But those places abroad are still dangerous. Although we have made our business abroad, that is indeed someone else's territory. We don't know much about the situation there. Didn't you say that you are going abroad recently? Will those people hurt you?"

Jason's words worried Georgia instantly. But if Robert didn't do that examination, she couldn't know what was wrong with Robert's body. She couldn't expect Robert to keep such a balance all his life. It was too whimsical.

Sometimes when it came to health, if there were any hidden dangers in the body, a simple cold, and a simple fever might completely destroy the balance.

Georgia didn't dare to take the risk, but what Jason said reminded her.

If they went abroad, it was not their territory after all.

Georgia was also worried about that.

"How about we wait a little longer?"

Georgia said to Robert.

"Although this is a friend of Ivan's, we don't know much about him. We'd better investigate him carefully in case that it is a trap."

"When Ivan comes, I'll discuss with him. We have to go there for the examination, but we can't take the initiative to step into the trap of others. Also, we don't have to be so nervous and worried. Even if we go abroad, do you think they can hurt us so easily? As long as we are well prepared, those people won't succeed even if they take action."

Georgia managed to calm down. After all, the most important thing for her was to figure out Robert's physical condition and find a way to cure him.

It would be the stupidest thing to delay Robert's treatment because of the potential danger.

"Now that you two have made up your mind when you go to America, I will help you keep an eye on those people."

Then he added.

"Jasper's parents asked us to persuade Jasper, but we are outsiders after all. How should we persuade Jasper? But since his parents have requested us, we must do something. Robert, have you thought about what you will say later? As far as I know about him, that guy will definitely get angry."

Georgia had never thought about it. After all, it was Robert's job. She was just a companion. She also wanted to hear what Robert would think of a solution.

A Pakistani Man Has Accidentally Found A Way Of Earning More

"If he gets angry, I'll slap him. Selena has already donated her kidney. If he gets angry at this time, it will hurt Selena's heart. Even if he is angry at this decision, he has to endure it."

Hearing Robert's words, Jason gave him a thumbs up.

"You're right. Selena is the one who suffered the most. Jasper is the one who has been saved. He can't still make people around him sad in the end. But anyway, he doesn't want to do it. If we force him to do it, he will definitely be reluctant. Don't you think your method is too cruel? It's normal for him to be emotional."

Hearing Jason's words, Georgia couldn't help laughing. Robert said helplessly.

"I'm just talking about the worst situation. A slap is just to wake him up. If he does something impulsive or hurts someone in a rage, it's not good. Pain can wake him up."

Georgia decided to shut up. She couldn't meddle in the relationship between these brothers.

After they chatted for a while, Ivan came in.

"I don't know if they have sent the previous examination data to others, but at present, I have asked people to delete the data that has been stored in the hospital, and I have also made disordered data. If someone really wants to investigate it, even if they get it, it is still fake."

"Okay, let's stop talking about this matter for the time being. I'll have someone watch over here and see how many people will come to check my body data. Maybe it's not just the person behind the scenes. Let's go to Jasper's ward and wait for him."

I think he will wake up soon."

They went to Jasper's ward together. Jasper's parents, Elliot and Bailey, were there.

Seeing them coming, Elliot and Bailey smiled gratefully.

"Thank you so much for coming here. I have thought about it for a long time. When he wakes up and sees his father and me, he will definitely get angry. You can help us to persuade this stubborn guy. We are indeed selfish in this matter, and he should be angry, but I don't want to affect his recovery, and being angry now will be harmful to his body."

After Elliot finished her words, Bailey also expressed her thanks to them. Jason took the initiative to ask.

"Where is Selena? Is she awake now?"

"She woke up in the morning. She is in a ward nearby, but she just fell asleep."

"Mr. and Mrs. Holland, since you are worried that Jasper will be angry, you don't have to wait for him to wake up in the ward. Just let us wait here. You can come to see him after he calms down."

Robert took the initiative to say this. Elliot and Bailey nodded helplessly.

"Let's go to Selena's ward and wait for your news."

Later, Elliot and Bailey went to Selena's ward.

Robert, Georgia, Jason, and Ivan were standing outside, hesitating.

Did everyone have to stay in the ward?

Or just let one or two people in and wait for Jasper to wake up.

"Let's go inside together. It doesn't matter. I'll warn him when he gets angry. I'm a doctor. He should listen to me."

Robert and Jason had no objection to Ivan's words.

They were all concerned about Jasper's situation. It didn't seem appropriate to leave anyone alone in the room.

As for Georgia, she just accompanied them to wait for the news.

Even if Jasper woke up, there would be no place for her to talk.

So they all waited in Jasper's ward. _____

Chapter 422 Jasper's Anger

Jasper hadn't woken up yet, so they didn't talk loudly. Instead, they each took their mobile phones and occasionally whispered to each other.

Georgia and Robert were whispering in a very low voice.

"We've been talking about Kayden just now. Didn't you come to see Aston's parents today? Later you told me that you visited Aston in the ward. What happened today?"

Georgia told him in a low voice what Aston's parents had reminded her.

"It turns out that Carr, Aston's father, is the one who operated on Jasper,"

Robert sighed and continued to speak to Georgia.

"In this case, we two have been married, and your mother will come to live with you in a while. If he really wants to see us, we will officially visit him. After all, he is an elder. If we don't respect him, he may make trouble."

Georgia had no choice but to nod helplessly. So many crises were around her, so of course, she didn't want Mr. Powell to cause any more trouble.

It was not a big deal to have a tough relative to meet.

After that, Georgia mentioned the relationship between Anaya and Aston.

"In the past, I always thought that Aston was very aloof. He would never be with someone whom he didn't love. But this time, just because Kayden abandoned him, he changed a lot. I really don't know what he is thinking about, but it's about other people's love. I have no right to persuade him. I just hope that he won't give up his career and dream. As an outsider, I can't get involved in their relationship. "

Georgia said with a sad face. Robert smiled.

"Why do you worry about Aston's relationship so much? Everyone has his own life, and no one else can't persuade him. Now he is with Anaya, and even they will get married in the future. It is his fate. If he is unhappy, it is his own choice. You didn't lie to him and didn't make him misunderstand anything. You don't have to be responsible for his life."

"And in this case, didn't you say that Anaya could only play up to and respect you? Isn't that good?"

Hearing Robert's words, Georgia couldn't help laughing.

"You're right. From another perspective, at least Anaya won't make trouble for me now and will respect me honestly. It's really good, but..."

Georgia sighed. She was just worried that Aston would do something he would regret in the future.

But everyone had to bear the consequences no matter what decision they made.

If she stopped him from doing something and didn't let him know what the consequences would be, maybe he even would blame her later.

While the two were talking, Jasper on the bed finally woke up. He opened his eyes in a daze and felt a dull pain in one part of his body and a dry throat.

Jasper looked around and woke up in an instant.

"Why are you all here?"

Jasper continued.

"Can you get me a glass of warm water? I'm so thirsty. What happened? I just fell asleep last night. Why is it so bright here? And what brought all of you here?"

Jasper murmured. Jason had already walked over to him and handed him a glass of warm water.

"Do you feel something wrong with your body?"

After drinking a glass of warm water, Jasper said to the people in the ward.

"I feel a pain in my waist. Did I faint and was carried into the operating room last night? Did my physical condition get worse? Or am I going to die? You guys all come to say goodbye to me, right?"

Hearing Jasper's words, Jason couldn't help laughing.

Now everyone was well prepared, but they were disturbed by this fool's funny words.

This guy hadn't figured out what was going on with him yet.

"You had an operation last night. You don't have to worry about your kidney getting worse. As long as you recover well, you can become a healthy person again."

Ivan said this voluntarily. Jasper was stunned for a moment, and then his face immediately got sullen.

"What's going on? Tell me!"

Robert sighed and told him the truth.

Jasper's face darkened as soon as Robert finished his words.

"Call my parents here. What's wrong with Selena now? You all come here to persuade me, right? I must return the kidney to Selena!"

It seemed that Jasper was not as angry as his parents had expected. At least he restrained his anger well.

Perhaps it was because they were all present that Jasper didn't lose his temper in front of his friends.

Ivan persuaded.

"I've read the latest examination report of your body. Your condition is different from that of ordinary people and it is getting worse. If you really want to wait for the kidney, it may affect other organs of your body. Jasper, you have your own thoughts, and there is nothing wrong with your thoughts. Your parents want you to be healthy, and they are also right, but you can't give the kidney back to Selena. Do you think it's easy to take it out and give it back? Don't be so childish."

Jasper roared at them after he heard Ivan's words.

"Do you guys come here to laugh at me? Get out! I thought you came to see me out of kindness, but you actually want to persuade me. What? Do you think I should accept my sister's donation with ease? So what if I don't want it? Why should I accept it?"

It seemed that Jasper was getting angrier and angrier. He even vented his anger on everyone in the ward.

Jason said coldly.

"Why are you angry? It's Selena who has lost a kidney, and it's your parents who can't sleep well every day because of worry. They did force you and did do something wrong, but you got the benefits in the end. You just can't persuade yourself. Why can't you accept Selena's donation with gratitude?"

"If you feel guilty, you should take good care of your sister and your parents in the future. That's enough. Many people in the world are willing to selflessly donate corneas and organs for those strangers. This is a good moral. Don't hurt the people who have done something for you!"

"But I don't want to accept it!"

Jasper roared.

"I don't want my sister to suffer this kind of pain. Am I wrong? Why do you all persuade me to accept it? Why can't all of you listen to me? I just want Selena to have a healthy body all the time, and like others, she should have two kidneys. I don't want her to have any problems with her health after she gets old. Am I wrong?"

"That's a kidney donated by Selena, so you can't feel the pain. You are just standing there and talking about others' affairs!" Jasper said angrily and didn't look at them anymore. Jason spoke again.

"Do you think only Selena is willing to donate the kidney? After we knew you had this kind of disease, I also went to have a check-up. If my physical condition were suitable and the data could be usable for yours, I would also be willing to donate the kidney to you. We are good friends, so I don't want to see you die like this. Everyone has this intention. If I donated the kidney to you, would you reject it like this? Why do you reject Selena's donation so fiercely? "

"I wouldn't accept your donation, as well!"

Jasper said angrily, ignoring the people around him, but it seemed that he was not as angry as before.

Robert said to Jasper.

"Look at your current physical condition. You have already recovered from the surgery. As long as you have a good rest this time, you may be able to have a long life. Selena donated her kidney, but as long as you protect her well and make her happy, maybe both of you can live long. Do you know what's wrong with me now? I want to live longer, but I can't. At least you are healthy now. You should cherish this."

As soon as Robert said this, Georgia lowered her head sadly. Jasper was shocked. He couldn't help but ask Robert with concern.

"What? Are you sure there is something wrong with your body? Is it really terrible?"

Chapter 423 Be Together Forever

Robert shook his head with a bitter smile.

"I can't be sure because it is still unknown. I'm not sure whether I'll get worse tomorrow. Maybe no one can save me at that time... Jasper, don't be angry about this. The most important thing for you now is to cherish your healthy body."

"You are healthy now. If you think that you owe Selena too much, you should protect her for the rest of her life and make her live a happy life. Then she won't suffer from a serious illness because of the loss of a kidney when she gets old. If you think it's not enough, you should find more medical companies and hospitals and ask them to study the tough diseases. Maybe you can save them once someone around you gets ill again. "

Robert's words silenced Jasper.

"Let me stay here alone. I feel sad, and It's normal, right? But I know that I can't let you guys, my parents, and Selena work hard for nothing. I just want to stay alone for a while."

"Well, have a good rest. I'll come to see you tomorrow."

Robert said this, and Jason also said next to him.

"You just woke up. The doctor must have to check your body. I'll wait for you outside and talk to you later."

Ivan also comforted him for a while, and then all of them left the ward.

Jason said that he would stay here with Jasper for a while.

Robert and Georgia did intend to go home now.

After all, the children were still waiting for them at home.

The two of them did not intend to stay outside for too long, in case of making the children anxious.

As for Ivan, he drove back to where he lived. After all, Robert's house was not his home.

It was inappropriate to live in her brother's house every day.

After the couple got in the car, Georgia said to Robert.

"Robert, are you afraid, too? I felt bad when you said that just now."

"Mrs. Simpson, didn't you say that you are a genius? I will count on you all my life. You can study my physical condition and find a way to save me, can't you? Don't give up. I think my Mrs. Simpson can cure me sooner or later."

Robert smiled gently. Georgia tried her best to suppress the bitterness in her heart and smiled at the man in front of her.

"You're right. It's not the most critical moment, nor the most desperate moment. How can I be so hopeless first?"

"Honey, I will cure you. We two will grow old together. Maybe we two can have a great-grandson. No, we must live a long life to see our great-grandsons. You will also work hard, won't you?"

"I won't give up any hope. Don't give up, too, until I close my eyes and the doctor declares my death. No matter what is waiting for us ahead, we two have to face it together."

After saying that, the two held each other's hands tightly.

When they were about to get home, Robert called his family. The butler told him that his mother was still sitting in the yard.

Robert said to Georgia when they got off the car.

"My mother is still there. Wait for me outside. She will say something bad when she sees you. You'd better not go in."

"I've told you that I won't let you be wronged and put you in a dilemma. I'll solve these things by myself."

Georgia nodded with a smile. She didn't want to go to see Robert's mother. She didn't want to have more conflicts with Robert's mother, which would make Robert more embarrassed. She wouldn't force Robert to make a choice between her and his mother, because this kind of choice was actually hard to make for Robert.

Georgia was waiting in the car. Robert opened the gate and walked in slowly.

He walked up to his mother.

"Mom, you have been awake for a long time. It seems that you have recovered well. Maybe you will recover gradually in a while."

Robert's words made Maisie sarcastic.

"What's wrong? Do you feel bad when I wake up? If I'm insane, I may not know how you are intimate with Georgia in front of me, huh? So do you want me to continue to be insane so that you can be with Georgia happily?"

"If such thoughts can make you happy, then just keep thinking like this."

Robert's words made Maisie even angrier.

She felt that she didn't know her son anymore. No matter how angry she was and how ironically she spoke, her son just stood in front of her indifferently. He wouldn't be angry or compromise with her.

Why was his son such a stubborn person? Her words were like the blows on the cotton.

"Then I curse Georgia to die right now. I curse you two to live a miserable life. Don't you care what I say?"

Islamabad Janitor Became A Millionaire Almost Overnight!
A Pakistani Man Has Accidentally Found A Way Of Earning More
Robert burst into laughter when he heard Maisie's sarcastic words.

"Mom, I'm a materialist. If the curse can work, people in the world won't have so much pain. Anyway, when someone is hurt, he can't hurt back his enemy by cursing every day. I'm certainly unhappy to hear this, but if I take it seriously, I will become a fool."

"Mom, you probably scold me and Georgia the same way in your heart every day. I can only pretend that I don't care. Do I have to be angry with you because of this?"

"Get out!"

Maisie was really powerless in front of her son. His son could even keep calm after she cursed Georgia. She couldn't separate Robert and Georgia now, so she could only say something to stimulate Robert.

If Georgia were here, she would definitely say all kinds of insulting words to her. But Georgia was not here, and Robert didn't allow Georgia to see her. She was so angry about this. What's more, she was lame now, so she could only sit in a wheelchair and could not go to the place she wanted to go. As a result, she could do nothing. Maisie felt very aggrieved.

"Mom, you are only in your fifties. I remember that you liked painting very much in the past and you had your own hobbies. You shouldn't indulge yourself like this. Dad hurt you and never gave you love, but now you can still find someone who really loves you. If you can't find him, you can still learn painting which you liked in the past. In fact, I think you painted so well. If you didn't marry my father, maybe you would have become a famous painter, or you would have traveled all over the world and made famous works one after another. "

"You are not old. You can still find out what you really want to do. Mom, I hope you can live a happy life. What Dad has done is irreparable. You can only forget these things. If you always remember dad's hurt to you, I also can't help you."

After saying that, Robert walked straight into the villa and took out Anne and Wesley who had been hiding in the room. Maisie's eyes changed when she saw the kids. Robert said to his mother.

"This is Anne, your granddaughter. You've seen her before. I hope you won't vent your anger towards Georgia on Anne. This is Wesley. You should have seen her too. He's your grandson.

They both want to respect you and hope you can have a happy life."

"Anne, Wesley, come and say hello to grandma."

Although Anne was a little scared, she spoke loudly.

"Hello, grandma."

Wesley whispered.

"Grandma, I'm Wesley."

The two kids didn't dare to say anything after they finished greetings. Maisie looked gloomy all the time. The two kids were very sensitive, so they didn't dare to say anything else.

"Go out. Your mother is waiting for you outside."

After saying that, the two kids ran out. Robert said to his mother.

"Mom, I don't want you to be a scary old woman for your grandson and granddaughter. Think about what you like and what you love. Your life shouldn't be bound by the past."

"I've told you that I won't force you to accept Georgia. If you don't like her, I'll never let you see her. Just pretend that I'm not married. You can live here and I'll live next to you. I'll always be filial to you."

After saying that, Robert walked out.

Maisie stood still, recalling the past decades.

She couldn't help wondering what she was thinking and doing before she married Aidan.

After Robert took the two children out, he asked Georgia to get out of the car.

"She must be sad if we move her to a new place. She will think we want to kick her out if so. Let's live in the villa next door. I've already asked the butler to move things there. Although they haven't finished yet, it's definitely okay for us to live there tonight."

Georgia nodded. Of course, she had no objection to this kind of thing, but she still asked with concern.

"Is your mother seriously ill? Did you have a fight?"

Robert smiled.

"Don't worry. My mother is a softhearted woman. She is just saying harsh words, which can also make her vent her anger a little. I don't dare to let her go out in such a situation.

She must feel aggrieved, so just let her say anything she wants to say. Words can't hurt us."

Georgia didn't want to get to the bottom of the matter. She could guess how Robert's mother cursed her and her mother. She knew it must be some dirty words, so she would never ask.

The two took the two children to the villa nearby.

After dinner, Robert received a call.

After answering the phone, he said to Georgia.

"The people in the hospital told me that they have found out what Kayden has done in the hospital today." _____

Chapter 424 Kayden's Intention

As soon as Robert said this, Georgia became serious and even nervous.

"What on earth has she done in the hospital?"

Robert said in a serious voice.

"She might have taken away all the data of my physical examination."

Georgia's face turned pale as she heard this.

"Who is behind her? Why did she take away your physical examination data? And she also warned me. I really don't understand her intention."

Robert smiled helplessly.

"We can't figure out her intentions. She attached your mother, and with her ability, she should have succeeded, even if you came there, but actually, she failed."

"Now she suddenly came back home and took away the data. I can't find out who is behind her."

Georgia had mixed feelings now.

She was scared, worried, confused, and even anxious.

She held Robert's hand and tried to get a sense of security from him.

"Let's carefully recall what Kayden has done this year and try to find out her intention. Is there anything we have ignored?"

Robert nodded and Georgia began to recall.

"Last year, when you had an accident, she was Laurence's subordinate. As far as we knew, she should be loyal to Laurence.

At least I didn't think that she was a spy someone sent beside Laurence. But Laurence had an accident later and she disappeared. Now she must be working for someone else."

"Obviously, she has a new boss behind her."

Robert nodded.

"Your assumption should be right. She did this for money, or for someone behind her."

"But she has been with Aston all this year and she has been in love with him. During this period of time, I am certainly not sure if she has done anything else. But her main goal should be to get close to Aston. In the beginning, I thought that she approached Aston because of my mother. But with her ability, she had no need to wait and move after my mother woke up. " After Georgia said this, she began to be confused again. She didn't think Kayden's intention was like this, but she couldn't figure out what benefit it would be for Kayden to have a relationship with Aston.

Robert said to Georgia after a moment of silence.

"You told me before that Aston took part in a research project in America in the past year, didn't you?"

Georgia nodded and then looked at Robert with her eyes wide open.

"Does she want to steal the data of the experiments that Aston's team has been working on for a year?"

"It's very likely. Why don't you call Aston now and ask him what kind of project he has participated in last year? I think with your knowledge, you must know what this project means." With worry, Georgia called Aston.

Soon Aston answered the phone.

"It's so late. What's wrong? Are you going to talk to me about Anaya again?"

"It has nothing to do with her. Didn't you take part in a project in America last year? Can you tell me what project you were involved in at that time?"

"Don't you know it?"

Aston smiled and replied to Georgia.

"This project is called the Blood Purification Project, but it mainly aims at leukemia, malaise, and sepsis. In a word, it is a kind of cancer cell capture and filtering technology. First, we extract blood from the patient's body, and then study the cancer cells in the blood. After that, we inject a micromagnetic pellet that is combined with the specific disease cell, and then use a magnetic bar to capture the combined materials. Then remove it from the blood. "

"It's still in the stage of experiment and theory, but this project has been studied all over the world. If it can be properly applied to the human body, it can slow down the disease cells in the human body, and even can remove the poisonous bacteria from the blood through the micromagnetic pellet. I think you have heard of this theory, but this project is not that perfect. Some of the cancer cells are not in the blood, so I gave up after I went on this project for a year. "

Islamabad Man Earns Thousands Of Dollars Via This App
Georgia finally understood what Aston had been doing in the past year. It had something to do with blood again. She couldn't help asking Aston.

"When you met Kayden, how long have you been working on this project?"

"Why do you ask this question?"

Aston's tone sounded a little angry, and Georgia had no choice but to speak.

"After I came out of the ward today, I saw Kayden. I suspect that the reason why she approached you in the past year was that you were participating in an experimental project. Perhaps she has stolen all the data of your experiments."

As soon as Georgia finished her words, Aston said angrily on the phone.

"Why do you suspect her like that? Do you have any evidence? Or do you think I am so unprofessional that any of my friends can steal the data? I did love Kayden very much, but it doesn't mean that I am unprofessional in the confidential work."

"I'm not suspecting you. I'm just suspecting Kayden's intention. I don't have any evidence of this matter, but I'm just suspecting. I'm sorry to disturb you tonight. Bye."

Georgia was about to hang up the phone when Aston spoke quickly on the phone.

"Why did Kayden go to the hospital? Did you tell her anything else?"

"It has nothing to do with you. I'm sorry."

After saying that, Georgia hung up the phone. Aston's face darkened after he hung up the phone.

Coincidentally, Anaya came in at this time. In fact, she had just heard Aston talking on the phone outside.

"Is Kayden the one you love?"

Anaya's eyes were obviously full of expectations when she asked this question, but Aston said coldly.

"It's you who is willing to stay with me. If you don't want to be with me, you can break up with me at any time."

Anaya said in a hurry.

"I don't mean that. I just asked you casually. It doesn't matter if you don't want to answer. Anyway, you are my boyfriend now, so you are not allowed to be with another woman."

Aston kept silent.

How could he be with another woman? It was just that woman who abandoned him.

However, since Kayden had come to the hospital and known that he was sick, she was still reluctant to come to see him.

Thinking of this, Aston lay on the bed gloomily, closed his eyes, and was ready to go to sleep.

Anaya was so angry, but she didn't dare to ask more.

On Georgia's side, she hung up the phone and kept silent for a long time. Robert just comforted her.

"Is it terrible? Why do you look so serious now?"

"Aston told me that the project they were working on has something to do with blood. It happens that some problems happened to your blood now. I think these things seem to be related to each other. Kayden might just keep an unchanged intention from the time when she was with Aston, and then she finally targeted you, which means that she has been working for the same person all the time. Maybe those people have been targeting you for a long time."

"Don't be so worried. Since I was born, I have had so many enemies who want to hurt me. Even if I were not sick now, do you think we would be in a really safe situation? At any time, there are enemies who are watching us. Keep vigilant at any time. It's so late. Let's sleep first. Don't think about it anymore."

After that, Georgia and Robert went to find the kids.

After the two kids fell asleep, they went back to their bedroom to take a shower and go to bed.

Lying on the bed, Georgia was still awake. She said to Robert again.

"Where on earth did Jayson escape? Haven't you been looking for him all the time? Have you got any news about him?" _____

Chapter 425 Ask Wilson For Help

"I really haven't found any news about him. He has always been good at hiding."

"He invested in that lab, didn't he? Even if it exploded, there must be a lot of data in it. I don't believe that he didn't leave any data in it. Maybe someone else has got this data, too. He is a smart man, so I think he has sold all the data in the lab long ago, which may also be the reason why you have been targeted."

"I really want to send him to prison when I think that he may still live a carefree life now."

Georgia said through gritted teeth.

Now she hated Jayson and Emma more and more. It was these two people who brought endless trouble to her and Robert.

Emma was now in prison, waiting for the trial of the court.

She would never have any chance to escape from punishment.

It would be better if she was sentenced to death.

However, Jayson was still escaping, and it was really hard to catch him.

"Forget it. Don't think too much."

Robert held Georgia in his arms and comforted her.

"Have a good sleep. Maybe we can find a new solution or new evidence tomorrow morning."

Georgia had no choice but to close her eyes. She didn't want Robert to have a bad sleep.

Now she treated Robert as a fragile baby. Of course, it was very important for him to have a good sleep.

She didn't sleep well this night. In Georgia's dream, Robert spat out blood in front of her and then fainted.

When she woke up with fear, it was already dawn outside.

Robert had woken up and was about to get out of bed.

She held Robert's hand subconsciously.

"Why do you get up so early?"

"My phone woke me up. The bodyguard team called me because they have caught the traitor. The evidence is irrefutable and they are waiting for me to deal with it."

Georgia also remembered that Robert had set a trap for the traitor, so she asked Robert.

"Is it the one that Kenny and Dora talked about?"

Robert smiled.

"Of course the person they mentioned was also involved, and there is another person who hid more carefully. Now he has been found out by my people. The two definitely wouldn't tell us all the truths. I knew that these two people must have their trump cards."

"Didn't you say that you would use Anne and Wesley to make a trap? Have you changed the plan?"

"I think you are right. We can't get our children in danger, even if we are absolutely sure of it."

"Then what method did you use in the end?"

Georgia asked curiously.

"There must be the motivation for them to betray me. I asked the guard team to spread the news that Kenny and Dora were about to go to jail, and I also spread fake news that Kenny and Dora have told me who the traitor was. Of course, the traitor would only be scared by this, but I told them how I will punish Kenny and Dora. The details were revealed too much, so the traitor must want to send the message out. "

"All the bodyguards live in the villa, and they will keep an eye on each other. Then I will reward whoever finds out the traitor, so they will naturally try hard to find it out. Now the traitor is crying and begging me to spare his life."

"Is he seduced or threatened?"

After Georgia said that, Robert laughed.

"Both of them. The father suddenly had a son, so he had to take a risk for the son. At the same time, they bought off him with money. Therefore, we have to investigate the backgrounds of the bodyguards at any time and figure out if there is anything wrong with their families. These are the matters that outsiders can find a breakthrough. Is there any problem with your bodyguards? Do you want to check it again? "

After Robert finished his words, Georgia shook her head with a smile.

"Wilson has been in charge of this matter all the time. He is more experienced than me in this area. No problem has ever happened to my bodyguards. I believe that Wilson has done a good job on this matter. After all, he also used to be a bodyguard."

"Stay here. I'll go out to deal with this matter. At least I have to warn other bodyguards that it's not easy to escape from the punishment after they betray me."

After saying that, Robert put on his clothes and was about to leave. However, Georgia stopped him because she was suddenly reminded of something.

"Did you forget to read the letter yesterday? We had dinner with our children after we came back and then went to bed. So you haven't read the letter your father wrote to you, have you?"

Robert was stunned. He did forget it.

"I'll read it after I finish this matter. It's not urgent at this moment anyway."

After saying that, Robert walked out.

Georgia was no longer sleepy. When she got up, washed, and dressed, it was already around 8:30 in the morning.

The two kids had also woken up. Georgia dressed Anne in person and then had breakfast with Wesley and Anne.

A Pakistani Man Has Accidentally Found A Way Of Earning More
He's Using This Secret Trick To Make Millions

Robert wasn't at home for breakfast. He didn't plan to deal with the betrayal of the bodyguards at home.

Early in the morning, Elsie and Wilson came to the villa after breakfast.

Wilson took some documents which Georgia had to sign. After all, she was the chairman of the SY group nominally.

She had to sign her name on the documents about some important decisions.

Elsie just came to see Georgia. They hadn't seen each other for a few days. By the way, she also came to play with Anne.

When Georgia was working on the documents, Elsie played with Anne and Wesley. Still, Wesley was so shy.

After finishing her work, Georgia asked Wilson a question.

"We should check the backgrounds of my bodyguards frequently. Is there anything wrong with them?"

"At least, for the time being, there is no problem. Anyway, I will kick out those suspicious guards, and will not give them any chance to hurt you. That's the rule here. If they want a high salary, they have to follow the rule here."

After that, Georgia told Wilson about the plan that they would go to America.

"If you are free recently, can you go to America with us later?"

Georgia briefly told him that she was going to America with Robert and the kids.

Although it was safer to keep the children at home, Georgia couldn't rest assured without them around.

Although it was dangerous to take them to America, at least she could take care of them at any time.

Moreover, she knew how capable Wilson was. He was alert and skilled. With him around, no one could hurt her easily.

If there was any danger, Wilson would find it out quickly.

Nominally, Wilson was the chief assistant of Georgia.

Wilson would tell Georgia about the affairs in the SY Group, and what Georgia needed to do was just to sign her name on the documents.

She didn't know much about business. Anyway, she did what Wilson said.

As for the power that Robert's father secretly left to her, it was all managed by Wilson.

Besides, Aidan had been staying in America for a long time.

Georgia thought that Wilson should also be powerful in America and knew more about the situation there.

With his protection, Georgia could feel safer.

"No problem. Anyway, you should hold some meetings in the headquarter of the SY Group. You can't stay at home all the time. After all, the headquarter is in New York."

"Where will you go in America? Tell me the places and I'll check them in advance."

"Oh, there is indeed an important place that you should check. If there is something wrong with it, just let me know in advance."

Georgia sent a message to Ivan, asking him where his friend lived, and what the names of his friend and the examination institution were.

She wanted Wilson to investigate it. Although Robert would also ask people to investigate, she trusted Wilson more.

Besides, the different results of the investigation from the two different teams might reveal some matters.

Ivan quickly replied to her. Georgia then summarized these things and sent them all to Wilson.

Not only that, but Georgia also briefly told Wilson about Robert's situation.

She said this to Wilson in private. Of course, she couldn't let the kids know it.

Elsie happened to take the two kids out to play.

After Georgia finished her words, Wilson frowned.

"Robert's situation is really too complicated now. I will check it out for you first. Nothing in the world can be covered forever, as long as we check it carefully. I can start from Kayden's current account and the places she has traveled. Then I may find out whom she is working for. Just wait for the result."

"Besides, as far as you know, I used to be a mercenary. Some people like us should have physical training. We have to go to the battlefield for training, and at the same time, we should make our body stronger."

"Exercise is not the only way to get stronger. Just look at those athletes who took stimulants. There are also black markets for us to buy stimulants, which can intensify our strength and perception. Then we will become stronger at the specific moment. I also know some of those markets, which may be related to this matter. I will investigate those places."

After Wilson said these words, Georgia thanked him gratefully.

As a matter of fact, she really left most of her work to Wilson.

Perhaps she was not a qualified boss.

Robert was sure that he wouldn't inherit the property, so

Georgia wanted Wilson to be the chairman.

"I think you can become the chairman of the SY Group. I don't think I am capable enough to take this position. You are the most suitable person to replace me in my opinion."__

Chapter 426 Maisie Wants To Kill Herself

After hearing that, Wilson showed an indescribable expression to Georgia.

"Do you think I'm willing to do so much for you? That's all because Old Mr. Simpson ordered me to help you."

"Miss Lane, you should do your own business. I prefer to live a free life. Old Mr. Simpson has helped me a lot, so I will certainly do the thing he asked me to do, but I won't be the chairman of the SY group. It's so hard to take charge in such a large group, and I won't help you forever. I hope that you can find a successor as soon as possible within these years.

Or, you can ask your husband for help. Just let him take charge in both the two groups."

Wilson refused without hesitation, which embarrassed Georgia. Her request was indeed shameless. Wilson had helped her with so many chores, but she was still asking him to do more. But how could Georgia find a suitable person? She said to Wilson.

"Please help me find a suitable person. Isn't there any suitable person in such a big group? Like those young people or experienced people in SY group?"

"No one in the group can be respected by all the people. The SY group is too huge. There are parties and serious internal strife. No matter who becomes the chairman, others will not be convinced. Miss Lane, you can hire a few more assistants. You can ask them to deal with the affairs and you make the final decisions. You still just need to sign the documents at that time. Ask Robert if there is something you can't decide. He will help you with the important decisions, so you won't be fooled by those assistants."

It seemed that she had still to be the chairman of the SY group. After all, she owned the most shares, and the people inside had to listen only to her.

After chatting with Wilson about work, Georgia and Wilson walked out.

Elsie was playing with the two kids outside.

Of course, it was Elsie who sat on the swing and asked the two kids to push her.

However, the three of them were all laughing happily, and Elsie could always play well with the children.

When Georgia and Wilson walked over, Elsie also saw them. She got off the swing and asked the two children to play themselves. She walked over and asked these two people.

"You two have talked about the confidential business for a long time. Have you finally finished it?"

Georgia nodded and Elsie asked curiously.

"You and Robert have moved to a new place. I haven't asked the reason yet. Didn't you live in the villa next door before?"

Georgia said with a smile.

"Robert's mother lives there now. You know the bad relationship between me and her. Since she doesn't want to see me, then I have to live in another place. Otherwise, both of us would feel uncomfortable when we see each other there."

Elsie couldn't help but complain about the relationship between Georgia and her mother-in-law. But she also knew that Georgia really couldn't live with Maisie.

But before she could finish her words, the Butler walked up to Georgia.

"Madam, something happened to Old Mrs. Simpson."

"What's wrong with her?"

Georgia asked in surprise, and the Butler said seriously.

"I don't know what happened to her this morning. She just suddenly cut her wrist with the glass from a broken glass cup, and locked herself in the bathroom. The servant found that after half an hour. We've already called the ambulance. I also called Mr. Simpson just now, but no one answered, so I come to tell you about it."

Did Robert's mother want to kill herself?

Georgia was also shocked by this matter. She tried to call Robert, but still, no one answered.

After all, Maisie was Robert's mother. Now that Robert was not here, she had to deal with it.

Georgia asked the butler to take care of the two children, and then asked Wilson and Elsie to stay here to help the butler.

Then she came to the villa nearby. Maisie had fainted on the ground. There was a lot of blood in the bathroom, but her situation was too terrible.

The ambulance arrived after a while. After Maisie was carried into the ambulance, Georgia quickly ordered her subordinates to stop the news from spreading.

Then she sat in the ambulance to the hospital.

After she sent Maisie into the operating room, she received Travis's call.

"I saw the news of your mother-in-law's suicide on the Internet. Is it true? How could it be exposed on the Internet?"

It seemed that the news had already been spread.

"She did try to kill herself by cutting her wrist. I just sent her to the operating room, and now I'm just waiting for the result outside. I have already ordered my men to cover up the news, but the news has still been exposed. Please help me check who spread it this time."

Although she made great efforts to stop the spread of news, it was impossible for her to completely cover up it.

But it had been spread too fast, which meant that someone had been watching them, or deliberately targeting her.

"I think it's the same force as the force last time. Those paid posters and accounts were also involved in the spread of the news that you illegally imprisoned Sierra."

"I remember you said before that it might have something to do with the Warner family, right?"

Travis said yes.

"Yes, it had something to do with them, but after I started a more careful investigation, I found nothing. Maybe they were just scapegoats, or they have covered up all the evidence."

"Travis, thank you for helping me investigate this matter. I will ask my men to suppress the news on the Internet. I have something to do now. Let's talk later."

After saying that, Georgia hung up the phone. She immediately answered the phone call from Robert.

"Is my mother in a bad situation now? I got the news on the Internet. Don't worry. I've asked someone to deal with the news."

"When I saw her, she was already in a coma, but the situation is not too bad. She should be fine after the operation. But why didn't you answer the phone just now? Is there anything wrong with you?"

"No, it's just that there was a road with poor signal just now. I'm coming to the hospital right now."

As soon as Robert finished his words, Georgia hung up the phone and found a bunch of hasty footsteps walking towards her. She turned around and saw a group of reporters running towards her with microphones and cameras.

Georgia subconsciously felt that something was wrong. These people came for her. It seemed that someone was really targeting her.

But there was only the operating room behind her and there was only this corridor ahead. Besides, there were only four bodyguards with her.

It was not easy to get out of here in the gazes of so many reporters.

Soon, a group of reporters blocked the way. _____

Chapter 427 Drive The Reporters Out

"Miss Lane, I heard that your mother-in-law has committed suicide because of your abuse. Someone said that you beat and cursed your mother-in-law at home. Is that true?"

"Miss Lane, it's said on the Internet that your biological mother was the second wife of Robert's father. Did your mother get involved in the relationship between Robert's mother and father?"

"Miss Lane, I heard that you grounded your mother-in-law at home and forbade her to go anywhere, making her gradually depressed..."

"Miss Lane, was it you who forced your mother-in-law to die?"

...

Countless questions came to Georgia, each of which was full of traps.

Georgia wouldn't be so stupid to answer these people's questions.

No matter how hard she tried to explain, these people would always make it blurry or use ambiguous titles to attract more attention.

Although she didn't answer, these people would also tell the netizens that she was too guilty to answer. Whatever, she didn't care.

Under the protection of four bodyguards, Georgia was about to rush out of the crowd of reporters.

She didn't know why the security guards of the hospital had allowed so many reporters in.

More than twenty reporters surrounded the four bodyguards around Georgia and squeezed. Georgia felt that she was almost out of breath.

Suddenly, Georgia felt a sharp pain in the back of her head.

A reporter threw a microphone at the back of Georgia's head.

"Georgia, you are such a vicious woman. You even forced your mother-in-law to die. You will be punished. Go to hell!"

The speaker was a man with a gloomy face. He looked at Georgia with hatred in his eyes.

In an instant, countless flashlights shot towards Georgia.

In this case, Georgia felt dizzy and almost fainted.

But she couldn't faint. Otherwise, something worse might happen.

But her body was on the verge of collapsing. Georgia felt that her eyes were almost dazzled by the flashlight.

She covered her forehead and felt a splitting headache.

She was unlucky this time. She only brought four bodyguards with her, and the surrounding reporters were live streaming.

It was impossible to ask these bodyguards to kick those reporters out.

In a daze, Georgia was carried forward by the bodyguards. The reporters seemed to be asking her various questions and taking photos of her.

When she was about to lose consciousness, she heard a voice.

"Drive these reporters out and teach them a good lesson. Just some b*stards working for someone rich. They even don't know who they are if we don't teach them!"

It seemed to be a woman's voice. After hearing it, Georgia finally fainted on the ground.

When Georgia woke up again, she saw Robert sitting beside her bed.

Robert said worriedly as Georgia was about to sit up.

"The backside of your head is bandaged now. Don't move too fast. You have a slight concussion. Let me help you up slowly."

Georgia nodded dully, still in a daze.

Georgia asked in confusion as she recalled what had happened before her coma.

"Who saved me at that time? I remember it was a female voice. By the way, how is your mother now? Has she come out of the operating room?"

After Georgia finished her words, Robert helped Georgia sit up and handed a glass of warm water to her.

"My mother has come out of the operating room but hasn't woken up yet. Don't worry about her. She is fine."

"As for you, you are injured this time. Maybe you need to stay in hospital for a while. You got an operation on the backside of your head. I have sent the reporter who attacked you to the police station. I will teach him a lesson. And the person who saved you was Miranda. Didn't you recognize her voice?" Georgia was stunned. It turned out to be Miranda. She shook her head slightly.

"I was dizzy at that time. I really didn't notice that it was Miranda. Where is she now? Why does she come to the hospital today?"

"She is in the police station now."

Georgia asked worriedly as soon as Robert finished his words.

"What? What happened?"

"Miranda has a bad temper. She asked her bodyguards to beat those reporters in front of all the cameras, and the process was directly broadcast on the Internet, which brought disrepute to her. Although some people think that these reporters are too provocative, more people think that Miranda should not abuse and beat reporters with her power, so she is under the pressure of public opinion. Definitely, she has to stay in the police station. "

"But don't worry. She has her own lawyer, and Jason has been there with her. I guess she will be released on bail. Those reporters only dare to bully the poor people. As long as we threaten them, they won't sue Miranda. It will only take some money and time in the end."

"I'm so sorry to bother her today. You have to help her. Don't let her suffer there."

Robert smiled.

"You still care about others at this time, but she did help you today. Otherwise, if you fainted there, those reporters might do something more terrible. There must be someone in the hospital deliberately letting them in. I'm investigating.

Georgia, I'm sorry. I didn't protect you well today."

"You are also in trouble with my mother's matter. Don't worry. I will never let go of the person who planned this behind the scene today."

"Then what is the public opinion on the Internet now? The pictures they interviewed me at that time must have been broadcast on the Internet. Your mother is indeed in the hospital, and the news can't be covered up. They now must be cursing me crazily, right?"

Georgia said with a bitter smile. Robert didn't know how to comfort her.

"Yes, there are a lot of people cursing you, but because Miranda got involved in this matter, the focus is now on Miranda. After all, she arrogantly ordered her bodyguards to beat the reporters in front of the cameras. This matter has been discussed more widely, barely suppressing the matter of my mother, but the two matters are always linked together."

"In fact, I don't care about their curses on the internet. If there is a more important public event, these people will not pay attention to me anymore. What I am worried about is another thing."

Georgia paused, and then she asked Robert.

"I'm worried that your mother wanted to threaten you with the suicide this time. If she threatens you to break up with me with her death, you will be in a dilemma. She is your biological mother, so I can't force you to give up on her. But if you really want to give up on me, I'm not that generous and Anne also can't accept it. What should we do if so?"

"She hates me so much. If she really threatens you with her death in the future, we two can't do anything about it."

Georgia said with a sad face.

She had never thought that his husband would be forced to deal with such an unsolvable problem.

There was no answer for any man to the question that when his wife and mother fell into the water at the same time, who he would save first.

Georgia just thought it funny and thought it was meaningless to ask such a question because such things rarely happened.

However, now she was really facing such a dilemma.

Robert kept silent for a while, with a complicated look on his face.

"Georgia, no matter what, I won't give up on you. But I don't know if I should use that method."

After saying that, Robert took out a letter from his pocket and showed it to Georgia.

"This is the letter from my father. I have read it when you were in a coma. There is a solution on it to such a situation now."

Chapter 428 The Method On The Letter

Georgia was a little surprised. She had never heard of a solution to this kind of thing.

Unless Robert's mother really forgot the past, or didn't hate her and her mother.

However, no one else but only Maisie herself could change her mind.

Robert seemed to have a solution, but he hesitated. Was there anything wrong with the solution?

"What method did your father write?"

As soon as Georgia finished speaking, Robert handed the letter to Georgia.

Meanwhile, he began to tell her the way Aidan told him.

"Your mother was with my father after she lost her memory, which was not a natural loss of memory. My father said in the letter that he knew a capable person called Vincent Poole. Now this person is about 70 years old. According to the current academic description, he may be called a hypnotist, but he is different from the ordinary hypnotist. He can make people forget the past, and even make a fake memory in their minds. That's what your mother was like in the past. "

Georgia said to Robert in surprise while reading the letter.

"Is your father so cruel to keep my mother with him?"

Georgia couldn't help complaining. She was sure that her mother didn't have any feelings for Robert's father back then.

Aidan made her mother hypnotized and then stayed with her mother as her mother's husband, which made her mother believe that they two were in love.

It was indeed not a good method.

"Maybe."

Robert didn't think it was appropriate to comment on his father's behavior. Georgia continued to read the letter, and Robert continued to speak.

"Vincent is still alive. My father gave me his address and contact information. He told me that he had already known who you were. When he came back from abroad, he investigated your identity and knew that you were your mother's biological daughter. But he deliberately didn't say it out, because he felt that it might affect our relationship. Besides, your mother has lost her memory for such a long time. He was not sure what would happen to her after she regained her memory. He thought it was better for everyone not to know about it." Georgia had already read half of the letter before she spoke to Robert again.

"I've heard that your father always gets what he wants by fair means or foul. It seems that it is true."

Although Aidan had given all his property to Georgia, she had no good impression of Robert's father.

Sure enough, Aidan, with the gentle appearance, was a quite scheming person.

In order to keep the person he loved, he could do anything. He could give up all the property of the Simpson family, and even make her mother lose her memory and he had deceived her for a lifetime.

Georgia couldn't help but think of Vanessa and Alfred. Although she didn't like Alfred's nature in the past, both Alfred and Aidan were scheming and would do anything to get what they wanted.

Her mother didn't regain her memory until she had an accident and Aidan's death was confirmed.

What about Vanessa? Georgia was worried about her.

Vanessa might regain her memory or not later. In theory, it was the best that she couldn't remember those painful memories all her life.

But Vanessa was still so young. Georgia was really worried that the truth would be exposed.

She continued to read the letter. She spoke to Robert after she finished reading.

"I understand what your father means, but is it really good to do such a thing?"

Robert looked embarrassed.

"You have also read what my father wrote in the letter. He has known for a long time that once my mother knows who you are, she will definitely not allow me to be with you, and she will even try to separate us. I knew that she would not be good to you in words before, so I asked you not to see her, but I did not expect that she would try to kill herself."

"I'm not sure if she wants to threaten me with this matter, or she's really sad and doesn't want to live in this world. No matter what kind of situation it is, it's my unfilial behavior that makes her do these things. If my father were still alive, he would definitely suggest we make my mother forget everything. But I'm a little hesitant about this."

"I can't interfere in this matter."

Georgia said to Robert directly.

"She is your mother, so you should be responsible for her current situation. You also know the matter about my friend, Vanessa. I don't know whether it's right or wrong, but I can't interfere in this matter."

"I just want to tell you this method. Georgia, no matter what decision I make, I won't force you or hurt you."

Georgia smiled faintly. She felt a little tired and there seemed to be a dull pain in her head.

"Help me deal with the trouble on the internet. I need to sleep a little longer. My head hurts."

Robert hurriedly helped Georgia lie down on the bed again.

"Have a good rest now. I'm afraid you'll be hungry after you wake up again. I'll bring you some porridge. If you want to eat anything else, you can tell me now. I'll ask the cook to cook it."

Georgia shook her head.

"I have no appetite. I think it's better to have some porridge. Just go back to your work. Maybe I can fall asleep as soon as I close my eyes. I'm so sleepy."

After saying that, Georgia closed her eyes. She really felt sleepy and fell asleep soon.

Robert didn't leave the ward until he saw that Georgia was completely asleep.

After leaving and closing the door, he said to the two bodyguards outside.

"No one is allowed in. If someone wants to visit her, let me know. No one is allowed in without my permission."

The two bodyguards nodded obediently. Then Robert walked away and made a phone call.

It was Elsie who answered the phone. She and Wilson were on their way to the hospital, and the two children were also with them.

Robert knew that these two people were on the way to the hospital, so he said to Elsie.

"Georgia is very tired now. She just fell asleep again. How about you take the children home first and then come to see Georgia?"

"We almost get to the hospital. Since Georgia is sleeping now, we can wait outside the hospital and see her when she wakes up. Is that okay?" _____

Chapter 429 Jasper's Suspicion

Robert sighed after Elsie finished her words.

"Do you have enough bodyguards with you? Do you need me to send more guards to pick you up? It will be safer for the kids, too."

"Then send some people."

Elsie and Wilson took two children with them, and there were several bodyguards in the cars behind their car.

But Robert must be worried about his kids, so she didn't refuse him.

After Elsie hung up the phone, Anne asked worriedly.

"What did my Dad say on the phone? How is Mommy?"

Wesley also looked at Elsie with worry. He was worried about Georgia's situation, too.

"Your mommy has just woken up for a while, but now she is asleep again. We can't disturb her rest, so we can't go to see her now.

There are too many bacteria in the hospital, and we can't let you two stay in the hospital for a long time. We just find a shopping mall near the hospital and hang around for a while.

Your father will send several bodyguards to protect you two.

Stay with us closely. Okay? "

Anne nodded sadly.

"Well, how can we see my Mommy? Is she seriously ill?"

"It's not serious. It's just a minor injury."

Elsie comforted Anne, and the silent Wesley also spoke.

"Then when can we see her? She must want to see my sister when she wakes up."

"Maybe a few hours. Don't worry about so much. Just don't run around. I can play with you."

In the end, Elsie and Wilson took the two children to a shopping mall.

Of course, they were protected by a group of bodyguards. In the end, they booked a game room and let the two children play inside.

Robert went to the top floor of the hospital alone, and the bodyguards followed him from a distance. Robert didn't let them get close.

He was thinking about a lot of things. Too many things were disturbing him.

His father suggested to him in the letter that he should not be restricted by morality. If he wanted to keep someone he loved, he had to pursue it by himself.

His father had already guessed that his mother, Maisie, would threaten him with all kinds of methods, even death.

In this case, Aidan suggested that Robert should learn from him and send his mother to see Vincent.

When his mother forgot all the sad memories, he would let her get her hobbies in her youth. Even if she remembered all the memories one day in the future, she would no longer be sad because she might have lived a happy life for years.

In fact, Robert also understood that his mother's sadness was mainly caused by his cruel father.

His mother couldn't get rid of the fact that Aidan had abandoned her. She indulged herself in the pain of this matter day by day.

If his mother forgot everything and got a new life, when she enjoyed the career she liked and the happy days, her life would naturally be redeemed.

It was good that she couldn't remember the painful memory all her life.

Even if she suddenly remembered it, those lies and pains would not be as painful as they were now.

But Robert couldn't make up his mind.

He was restricted by morality. He felt guilty for his mother who had been raising him.

After a long silence, Robert sighed and walked to the elevator.

After a while, he went to Jasper's ward.

Ivan happened to be there, too.

Jasper was chatting with Ivan. Seeing Robert come in, Jasper asked with concern.

"How's Georgia? Is it terrible?"

"And your mother, has she woken up yet?"

"Georgia woke up not long ago. She still had a headache and fell asleep soon. She will stay in the hospital for two days.

As for my mother, she hasn't woken up yet. Maybe she will wake up tonight."

After saying that, Robert sat on the sofa beside Jasper's bed.

Ivan sat right next to him.

"Why has the news been spread so fast on the internet? Didn't you stop the news?"

Ivan asked with concern.

He had been occupied in the past two days, so he was a little busy in the daytime and almost stayed in the hospital all day.

So he could see Jasper at any time.

When Georgia was surrounded by the reporters, he was operating on a patient.

At that time, he didn't know that in the operating room. After the operation, Georgia had already been in the ward, so Ivan didn't help.

He had gone to see her, but the bodyguard stopped him. The guard said that Georgia was sleeping and no one was allowed in, so Ivan came to see Jasper.

Just after he came here, Robert also came.

"Someone is trying to make it a big deal. Can't you see that?"

So many reporters were there to make trouble for Georgia. There must be someone behind them. I've asked my men to investigate who is behind it. It should be related to the incident last time. The photo of Sierra and Georgia was also exposed on the Internet last time. It seems that they are the same group of paid posters who are spreading the news."

Robert's words made Jasper frown.

"You seem to be so unlucky recently. Look. You're bothered by all kinds of troubles. You look even more annoyed than me.

Though I changed my kidney, at least I will recover soon. And I can live a long life after this. You seem to be doomed. Is that because someone is keeping cursing you?"

After Jasper finished his words, Robert smiled.

He also knew that Jasper was just joking to make him not too sad.

"I think you are in a good mood now. Can you accept it now? Where is Selena? Did you see her after you woke up?"

After Robert said that, Jasper's expression became a little complicated.

"We met last night. Both of us woke up and were in good mental condition at that time. And I was not angry anymore. Selena had an operation and was weak. Of course, I should thank her and want to talk to her, but her attitude towards me was so strange, which made me feel uncomfortable."

"Selena is my sister, and she donated her kidney to me this time. Logically speaking, she is my savior now, although we shouldn't count this kind of thing as brother and sister. But Selena looked at me so strangely, as if she was thanking me and was very afraid of me. I really can't stand the way she looked at me. We two have always been very close before. I don't know what happened to her this year. "

"After she gave birth to the baby, she always looks at me with inexplicable expressions. I always feel that she wants to say something, but stops on second thought. It seems that I have owed her something, or that she is in a dilemma. You know I hate guessing. But Selena is my sister, and she has done so much for me. I can't lose my temper on her. It's so depressing..." _____

Chapter 430 Jason And Miranda

Both Robert and Ivan were confused by Jasper's words.

"You are brother and sister. Why don't you directly ask her? But don't ask her too much now, in case she really has something difficult to do."

"After you and your sister recover completely, you can ask her patiently if there is something wrong with her. After all, Selena is an adult and she has her own child now. It's normal for her to have some trouble, but she can't tell you this kind of trouble. Maybe it's too big for her to solve, and she thinks you also can't solve it. You have to be patient. In this case, you have to be even more patient with her. "

"Of course I know. I have been extremely patient with Selena. I have been enduring all the time. Otherwise, I would have lost my temper long ago."

Ivan persuaded him.

"You are just fine with your new kidney. Don't get angry and lose your temper frequently. It's not good for your health."

After Jasper nodded, he remembered something else and asked the two again.

"I've watched the video spread on the Internet. It turns out that Miranda has a bad temper. She was so brave to beat those reporters before so many cameras. We think it's cool, but the netizens don't. We also can't stop those people curing her on the internet, which may irritate them more. We have to find a way to solve this problem."

"I will find more hot news to distract their attention. Then they may not focus on Georgia and Miranda. Now the Internet is slowly losing its focus. We have to be patient. If we directly stop the discussions about Georgia and Miranda, the netizens will know that we are manipulating public opinion behind the scenes. After one or two days, there will be other explosive news. Then they won't pay attention to it anymore."

"But we don't know if the people behind it will keep making it bigger and bigger. If they will, maybe we can find some clues and find out who is behind it."

Robert smiled confidently as he said this.

He had been well prepared on the Internet.

If someone wanted to stir up this topic again, he would definitely find out who was the real manipulator behind the scenes.

"I thought Miranda is a gentle lady from a rich family, but now it seems that I was wrong. Where is her? Is she still in the police station? Should we help her out?"

Jasper said to Robert, but Robert shook his head.

"Jason can handle it well. My mother and Georgia are in the hospital now, so I can't leave here. Let Jason rescue his fiancée today, and I will personally thank her next time."

As they chatted, Jasper finally felt sleepy.

The doctor came to give him an intravenous drip and inject him with the medicine to prevent his body from rejecting the new kidney.

Ivan and Robert had no choice but to leave because Jasper would fall asleep because of the effect of the medicine.

"Follow me to the top floor. It's quiet there. I have something to tell you."

After walking out of the ward for a while, Robert said to Ivan.

They went to the top floor and began to chat.

On the other side, Miranda, who had paid the bail, finally came out of the police station.

Jason had been waiting outside.

The moment he saw Miranda come out, he directly walked over and grabbed Miranda's hand. Then he took her into the car immediately.

As for the reporters who had been secretly taking photos not far away, Jason had already driven them away by all kinds of methods.

The reporters were quiet this time, and no one spread any news about Miranda again.

After getting in the car, Jason said to Miranda.

"I've watched the video. You were so arrogant. You just ordered your bodyguards to beat up those reporters. You just looked like a bully."

Miranda glared at Jason.

"The evildoer can only be punished well by the evildoer. Those reporters must have been bought off since they came to interview Miss Lane with malicious intentions. I saw them trying to squeeze Miss Lane. Maybe after Miss Lane fell down, there would be a trampling incident. Those people had no conscience at all. They are all bad guys who need to be taught a lesson! They were so lucky because Miss Lane is so kind and didn't ask her bodyguards to drive them away. But I am not as gentle as Miss Lane. Just let me be the evildoer and teach them a lesson."

6 Uncommon Tips For Building A Healthy Relationship

"Look at you. Do you think you are a hero who is so capable to save the beautiful princess? Are you very proud of it now?"

Jason said to Miranda with a helpless look.

He didn't even know how to comment on what his fiancée had done today.

It was true that those b*stards needed a lesson, but she shouldn't do that before the cameras, which made an uproar on the internet.

Many people were cursing Miranda. Some people always hated the rich, but Miranda still did that before so many cameras.

The people would definitely be sympathetic to the poor, and almost no one would stand by the rich's side in such a situation.

Miranda was now cursed by everyone on the Internet.

They were rich and powerful, and they could work together to actually control the public opinion on the Internet.

But if they really did it, the netizens would definitely know that they were behind the public opinion. Then the netizens would curse more severely. They were able to change public opinion, but they couldn't do that.

"Don't you think I was so cool in the video? I was just like the capable hero who has saved the princess. I also read the comments on the internet. Besides those who cursed me, there are also a few people who think I was cool. They said that I was like an imposing queen and wanted to become my fans. They are even going to establish a fans club to support me. Don't just look at the people who curse me, but also look at those who praise me. There are still many people praising me."

"I don't think the one praising you can fight against one thousand people cursing you. How can you find those people praising you among so many people cursing you?"

Jason said helplessly.

His fiancée had helped his brother's wife and completely stood by his side this time.

But the way she helped Georgia was too rude and straightforward.

He had known Miranda for a long time, but he had never found that this woman could be so rude.

If he made a mistake in the future, this woman might also ask her bodyguards to beat him up.

At the thought of this, Jason trembled with fear.

Would he become henpecked in the future? While Jason was thinking about this, Miranda spoke again.

"What's wrong with your sarcastic tone? It's Miss Lane whom I helped today, isn't it? Miss Lane is your brother's wife. Maybe your brother will also thank me in person later. Why do you blame me like that?"

"I just think that I have a new understanding of you today."

Jason sighed. He was a little worried about his future.

He used to think she was a delicate and gentle woman, but now, in fact, she was a domineering queen who might totally suppress him.

However, this was not what he should care about the most at the moment. He said to Miranda.

"There are so many ways for you to teach those people a lesson. You could beat them up in private after you took Georgia away. Or you can secretly ask your bodyguards to beat them at night. Why did you do that before so many cameras? What if someone insane among them takes revenge on you in the future?"

"You are worried about me, aren't you?"

Miranda said excitedly. Jason didn't think he meant that, but he also couldn't refute it.

He did not answer Miranda's question but continued to speak earnestly.

"Don't care about my intention. I know you don't think it's a big deal to be cursed by the netizens. Anyway, you won't be arrested for that. However, speaking of the reputation, you may not care about it, but you can't get it ruined. We should try our best to keep a good reputation if we can."

"Don't do that again in the future. If you meet someone you hate or something you can't stand, just let me know. I will help you. Don't be so straightforward. What if the person you offend is richer and more powerful than you? What if he wants to take revenge on you?" _____--
