

I'm A Quadrillionaire

Chapter 1797

• • •

Chapter 1797

Portraits of David began to circulate in all the trade areas in the Central Sacred Continent. Both physical and electronic versions were available. There were also two paragraphs of text at the bottom of the portrait.

[Wanted!]

[David Lidell, male, estimated to be within a thousand years old. This person is related to the accidental death of Archimedes Lightfoot, the first-in-line heir of the Lightfoot family. The Lightfoot family is hereby issuing a warrant. Anyone who sees this person, no matter who they are, will be rewarded with 100 million Star Dollars and an important favor from the Lightfoot family once it is verified to be legitimate. If anyone manages to catch and bring David alive to the Lightfoot family, they will get a reward of 10 billion Star Dollars and three favors from the Lightfoot family.]

[Since David may put on a disguise to hide from everyone's identification, as long as you find someone similar to David, you can provide information to the Lightfoot family. Regardless of whether it is David, you will still be rewarded accordingly. Of course, please be conscious, if the Lightfoot family discovers that the report was orchestrated to get rewards, don't blame the Lightfoot family for being merciless!]

As soon as the warrant from the Lightfoot family came out, it immediately attracted a huge amount of attention.

The ten billion Star Dollars was secondary. What really got everyone's attention was the three important favors promised by the Lightfoot family.

The Lightfoot family was one of the Central Sacred Continent's top five trading companies. They were the actual controller behind Splendor and had several Saint Realm grandmasters. Furthermore, they had more than one True Saints.

They were top-ranked even throughout the entire Star Kingdom.

If one could get three favors from them, one could do anything they wanted in Star Kingdom as long as they did not offend those forces that were more powerful than the Lightfoot family.

Most importantly, the warrant issued by the Lightfoot family stated that everyone was qualified to participate.

Many people who were being hunted down by their enemies, as well as desperadoes who were wanted by the government, saw their chance.

If they helped the Lightfoot family find David, catch him, and bring him to the Lightfoot family, did it mean that they could change their destiny and stop living the life of a fugitive?

This was too tempting.

This was too tempting.

It would be better to bet on this rather than hide all the time and constantly live in fear.

It was not every day they had this chance.

If they missed this, they would never have this opportunity again. Plus, didn't the warrant say that David was just about a thousand years old?

He was so young, so he would not be too strong.

If they were lucky, it would be easy to capture David.

Hence, once the Lightfoot family issued this warrant, the countless desperadoes of the Central Sacred Continent began to swarm to West End.

Plus, as the news spread, the wanted criminals of Star Kingdom also headed toward West End.

Not only them, as even the medium to small forces sent people to start looking for David.

No one wanted to miss the chance to form a close relationship with the Lightfoot family.

This clearly showed how strong the Lightfoot family's power was to be able to rally so many supporters.

The Lightfoot family not only controlled Splendor, one of the top five trading companies in the Central Sacred Continent, and had countless assets, they even had a few Saint Realm grandmasters.

Furthermore, they had the Ginger family, one of the six top major forces in Star Kingdom as support.

They had money, strength, and even background. Who would dare to offend such a family that was at the height of its powers?

Once the warrant was issued, David's name and portrait became popular in the Central Sacred Continent.

It was believed that it would spread through Star Kingdom soon.

Even though no one knew who this young man who was less than a thousand years old was, they knew this kid would not live long. How many of the people who offended the Lightfoot family survived?

They had completely neglected to consider whether David himself could fight against the Lightfoot family.

The forces in Star Kingdom that were not scared of the Lightfoot family could be counted on two hands.

Meanwhile, there were no direct descendants who bore the last name Laine in those forces. If David had the power to fight the Lightfoot family, they would not issue a warrant to look for him.

• • •