I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2139-The group continued heading toward Nightingale City.

There had been eight people in David's carriage, but now only five people were left.

In other words, three people died in that battle just now.

This was just one carriage and there had been many other deaths, adding to the death toll.

If David had acted earlier, he could have saved everyone.

However, he did not.

David did not feel guilty at all regarding this.

The law of nature was the survival of the fittest.

He could save them once, but what about the second time?

Moreover, not all of these adventurers were good people.

Many of them had a lot of bad records and had blood on their hands.

The carriage with three people missing did not affect the rest of the people.

Obviously, they were used to things like this.

As the name 'adventurer' suggested, they would risk their lives to go on adventures.

Whether it was looking for opportunities in the Endless Forest or escorting cargo, they might die at any time.

Of course, in comparison, it would be much safer to escort cargo.

The reason why everyone was willing to come to The Spirit Cage despite such a dangerous situation was that, firstly, the scope of activities here was smaller, unlike in the real world where Leila was hopelessly large, and countless people could only stay at a small place for their entire lifetime.

In addition, almost all of Leila's forces had invested a lot of manpower, material, and financial resources into The Spirit Cage.

As a result, it was easier to make money here than in the real world.

Therefore, some people in remote places wanted to enter The Spirit Cage. At the same time, they could also increase their mind power, so why not?

After some distance, David started another conversation.

Everyone knew that David was the son of a certain rich family and he came to The Spirit Cage in secret, so they flattered him and would tell David anything they knew.

From the gang, David learned another piece of information, which also resolved a doubt in his heart.

When he first came to The Spirit Cage and walked out of the Endless Forest, he had encountered some corpses along the way.

He was curious why they did not forcefully leave The Spirit Cage when they were in danger and dying.

It turned out it was not because they did not want to, but it was because they could not.

When people in the real world enter The Spirit Cage, they would descend to a fixed place, which was called the descending point. When they needed to leave The Spirit Cage, they had to be within the range of the descending point.

The cities above tier three in The Spirit Cage were all built around these descending points.

The bigger the city, the larger the descending point.

Countless people would come and go every day through these channels.

The place where the descending point was located was officially protected and did not belong to any forces.

Anyone who dared to seek revenge and kill people here would be completely obliterated by The Spirit Cage once they were found to have violated regulations.

This was a hard and fast rule of The Spirit Cage.

Therefore, when one was being hunted down, one would be safe as long as one ran to the vicinity of the descending point.

Those who were pursuing would also give up the pursuit.

The closest descending point to Crow City was Nightingale City.

Except for the descending point, there was no other way to leave The Spirit Cage.

When David learned this information, he immediately remembered that after he left the Endless Forest and saw the corpses, he had left The Spirit Cage once.

However, he immediately opened the system again and found the option to exit The Spirit Cage.

He wanted to make sure he could leave The Spirit Cage anytime, anywhere.

David did not seem too surprised by this.

After all, it was the system, something developed by a God Tier Civilization.

So, it was also normal for it to not be restricted by the rules of The Spirit Cage.

Along the way, the system shocked David too much.

It surprised him quite a bit at first, but slowly, he became used to it.

His horizons had broadened with something from the God Tier Civilization on him, so he did not seem to care much about other civilizations.

Inside another carriage, Beanie sat cross-legged with her eyes closed, recuperating from her wounds. When she was suddenly attacked by a masked man in black, she suffered serious injuries.

The strength of the opponent was not weaker than her.

Fortunately, there was a powerhouse who acted secretly and allowed her to barely escape the catastrophe.
