I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2632

This wasn't just a matter concerning an individual but an entire force.

Even if David was willing to assist the Elves, would the force supporting him be willing to do so?

Would it jeopardize David's relationship with the force backing him? These were all factors that required careful-consideration.

"Evie, listen to me. I have carefully observed David. He is a very enthusiastic person and he's very good to the friends-around him. I believe you know this too. In addition, he's not arrogant and proud like the heirs of those big powers. We definitely can't ask him for help directly, but if he encounters an enemy attack while he's staying here and it happens to be the place where he lives, judging from his character, David will not stand idly by,"

"But... But in this case, aren't we taking advantage of him? Mother, I... I don't want this," Evie resisted.

"Evie, you have to know that this is the closest opportunity we have to get revenge. Once we miss it, we don't know when we will get another. Since we're in the same area, those beasts will not let us develop. Are you willing to let all of our clansmen who were tortured to death die with remaining grievances?" Isa asked in a deep voice.

"I-I-I..." Evie stuttered for a long time without saying anything.

She was so anxious that she almost cried.

She wanted to avenge those clansmen, but she did not want to take advantage of David either.

In a dilemma, her eyes welled up and tears began to fall.

Seeing this, Isa walked to Evie and stretched out to touch her head. She comforted Evie softly, "Good girl, just do as I say. I will plan this matter carefully, and I guarantee that David will never find out. It won't affect your relationship with him."

“Mother, David is my savior. If it weren’t for him, my fate would be no better than those of the trafficked clansmen.

Aren’t we repaying kindness with enmity by doing this?” Evie asked, sobbing.

In her opinion, using her savior was equivalent to repaying kindness with hatred-“No way! Don’t think about it. I will play it by ear when the time comes. I will make sure that those beasts are just ants to David and he will not hurt himself while wiping them out before I take action. If the force behind David is not as powerful as I imagine, we can just give up the whole plan, what do you think?”

After Isa finished speaking, she stared at Evie closely, waiting for her answer.

Evie wanted to say no, but she suddenly saw a trace of begging in her mother’s eyes.

This shocked Evie.

Her mother was the Elven Queen.

Relying on her strength, she led the Elves to change their fate from being prey to being able to walk out of the Elven Forest. At the same time, she also achieved unparalleled achievements.

The most admired leader in the eyes of the clan actually had a pleading look in her eyes.

As soon as Evie’s words of rejection reached the tip of her tongue, she swallowed them. In the end, she could only say helplessly, “W-What should I do then?”

Upon hearing Evie’s answer, a smile immediately appeared on Isa’s face.

Evie was a very important part of her plan.

Her consent was necessary to ensure the perfect implementation of the plan.

‘Thank you, Evie!’ Isa said seriously.

“Mother, you don’t need to thank me. Not only am I a member of the Elves, but I am also the Elven Princess so I must do something for the Elves.” Evie replied.

“I am speaking for the tens of thousands of Elves who were sold as commodities. As far as I know, less than one percent of them survive. The rest are all dead, and they were all tortured before they died. One can even say that they died with hatred.”

Faced with her mother’s pleading eyes. Evie had no choice but to reluctantly agree to help her implement the plan.

They would use David’s strength and background to avenge the Elves’ blood feud.

She did not want to take advantage of David, her savior, but she could not resist her mother’s pleading eyes.

That was when Evie discovered that the omnipotent mother in her heart could also be weak and powerless at times.

Hence, she had no choice but to agree.

The plan was not complicated.

After David arrived, they would arrange for him to stay in an independent place, with Evie accompanying him.

Then Elven Queen Isa would lead people to attract the Vingean.

The two sides would then have a brief battle not far from where David lived.

When David heard the sound of fighting, he would definitely ask the reason.

Then, Evie would explain to David what the Vingean did.

How they had been secretly capturing Elven women and selling them in Leila for profit.

They even captured tens of thousands of Elven women at a time and sold them all to unscrupulous businessmen.

While explaining, Evie would also show David some pictures.

They were all about the inhuman torture that Elven women suffered after being sold.

They could not even commit suicide so they endured endless pain and torture in silence until they died.

After almost every Elven woman died, their bodies would be scarred and they would die with grievances.

As per Isa's observation, judging from David's character, he would definitely not sit idly by.

If he still did not want to intervene, Isa would lead the Vingean to where David lived and trick the Vingean into attacking David.

In that way, David would have no choice but to take action.

As the heir to a superpower, David had no reason to tolerate when someone was blatantly bullying him.

As long as they created conflict between David and the Vingean, the plan would be a success.

Isa figured David should be an heir secretly cultivated by a superpower of Leila.

The status of this kind of heir was very high.

There was a chance that he would become the controller of his own force in the future.

Even if he failed, he would still be at least the number two or three.

If both sides fought for real, or if David was injured, the force behind him might go ballistic and eradicate the Vingean, causing those beasts to disappear from the universe.

In this way, the Elves' sworn hatred would be avenged.

Although the Elves were not the ones who destroyed them, they would be happy as long as the Vingean received the punishment they deserved.

Isa realized that with the Elves' current strength, seeking revenge was nearly impossible.

They wouldn't have a chance even in thousands or tens of thousands of years.

The Vingean and the Elves lived together in the southern district of Five Continent, and the two clans were very close by. The Vingean could not possibly watch the Elves develop to the point where they could be a threat.

So, they would find a way to stop the Elves before they could reach that stage.

This would further diminish the Elves' chances of seeking revenge.

Therefore, they did not want to pursue the goal of killing their enemies with their own hands.

They would be fine as long as the Vingean received the punishment they deserved.

The mother and daughter discussed details about how to make it seem natural so that David could not tell.

Isa understood that with David's intelligence, he might not have the time to think when the time came.

However, once he calmed down and recalled what happened, he would guess that the Elves were using him.

Isa was just comforting Evie by saying that David would not notice.

At this moment, Isa could not care anymore.

Initially, she only wanted to get Evie and David together.

I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2634-If that happened, Isa reckoned that it be easy for them to cause trouble for the Vingean, with David and the force behind him as backers.

However, that was not to be. It had been several years since David contacted Evie.

One could see that David was not serious about Evie after all.

He had always been Evie's unrequited love.

Since that did not work, Isa could only use David.

Even though David was Evie's savior and it was unethical, there was nothing Isa could do about the blood feud involving all of the Elves.

If she missed this chance, there would not be another one.

At worst, after everything was done, she would give maximum compensation to David and the force behind him.

Anyway, David would not suffer any loss.

After the mother and daughter discussed the plan, Isa went about her business.

The Elves' once-in-a-century sacrificial ceremony was about to take place.

As the Elven Queen, she was certainly very busy.

They needed to be well prepared and not make any mistakes at such a huge event.

In the following days, Elven Princess Evie, originally lively and innocent, became depressed.

Her previous warm smile was gone, and she would often frown and sit alone in a daze.

Some Elven women familiar with Isa wondered what happened to their princess.

Among the Elves, only Elven Queen Isa knew that Evie still could not accept using her savior, David.

There was nothing she could do about it.

What needed to be said was said, and what needed to be done was done.

Now it was up to Evie to convince herself.

At this point, Isa could not give up this plan anymore.

As long as the Vingeans could be defeated, Isa was willing to step down as the Elven Queen or face a trial.

When Isa was still the Elven Princess, she experienced tens of thousands of her people being trafficked.

At that time, Elven women were slaves bought and sold by everyone.

Some people even got tired of the Elven woman after buying them, so they would sell them again at a cheaper price.

They did not see Elven women as human beings at all.

Many Elven women were tortured to death after changing hands many times.

At that time, Isa silently swore in her heart that it would be her duty in this life to bring down the Vingeans. No matter how high the price, it would be worth it.

Yet after serving as the Elven Queen for so many years, she still could not find a chance to annihilate the Vingeans, even as she led the Elves to change their fate of being treated as prey.

When David appeared, Isa saw hope.

So that was why she was trying to grasp it at all costs.

Time passed like this day by day.

In the blink of an eye, half a year had passed.

Even at David's speed that could ignore space, he had not reached Leila still.

So, one could see how far Leila was from Earth.

This distance could no longer be measured in units.

Having been on the road non-stop for more than half a year, David felt a little tired.

Not physically, but mentally.

With the strength of a partial Heavenly Overlord, he would not be tired even on a thousand or ten thousand years' journey, let alone half a year's journey.

Yet, this was just the first time in such a long time that David did not have anyone to talk to.

An unprecedented feeling of loneliness swept over him.

To protect his mental health, David decided to stop and find a planet or continent with intelligent life to rest.

He wanted to find someone to talk to and relieve his boredom.

I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2635-The distance was unimaginable for ordinary people; from Earth's Milky Way to level 9 civilization, Leila.

It could no longer be calculated in specific units.

Even with David's partial Heavenly Overlord strength and changing of space multiple times, he could not arrive even after half a year.

There were countless civilizations along such a long distance.

Of course, most of them were low-level civilizations.

High-level civilizations were rare, and they were all level 7 and level 8 civilizations.

The only nearest level 9 civilization was Leila.

Among the vast galaxies, a level 4 civilization was located halfway between David and Leila.

Since David could not stand the loneliness of not having anyone to talk to for half a year, he stopped his journey near the vast galaxy.

As he looked at the starry civilization ahead and felt the breath of living creatures, David dived in, ready to talk to some humans or other intelligent life forms.

After not speaking for more than half a year, he almost forgot how to speak.

David had only lived a few dozen years since he was born.

If he had not obtained the system, he would have been a middle-aged man.

Earth could not compare with civilizations like Star Kingdom.

For example, the grandmasters of the major forces in Star Kingdom might need hundreds of years to break through a realm in seclusion or to practice a secret technique.

David's every breakthrough in seclusion would not last more than three days.

Naturally, he was not used to being alone for more than half a year without anyone to talk to.

If other intelligent beings knew that David had become a true Overlord in less than a hundred years, and he was near the final Heavenly Overlord Rank in Overlord Realm, it was unknown what their reaction would be.

Perhaps no one would believe him.

After all, this was too exaggerated.

Which one of the Saints did not take thousands or even tens of thousands of years to achieve the rank they were in, let alone a partial Heavenly Overlord?

They still needed to cross the Divine Realm!

Even Sylvio, an old man who had lived for endless years, would be shocked if he knew this.

After David entered the Boundless Galaxy, he did not go deeper and landed directly on the nearest living planet. He now urgently needed someone to talk to to relieve his boredom.

Planet Brechen was the living planet David came to.

Although it was only the outermost planet in the vast galaxy of a level 4 civilization, it was still much larger than Earth.

It was comparable to the Sun in size.

At this time, three carriages were moving quickly on a wide public road in Planet Brechen.

Dozens of cattle-like beasts were at the front and rear of the team of carriages, as well as around. Each beast would have a man riding on them.

These men were in uniform.

They were outside to protect the people in the carriages while acting as guards.

When David arrived at Planet Brechen, he saw the carriage team.

David, who had not spoken to someone for half a year, suddenly felt happy that he finally saw a living person. So, he immediately stopped in front of the carriage team.

“Stop!”

Seeing someone blocking the road ahead, the head of the guards waved his hand and signaled the carriages behind him to stop.

All the carriages were parked neatly on the wide public road.

“May I know who you are? Why are you blocking my way?” The captain asked, staring at David with lightning-like eyes.

At the same time, his body was tensed and ready to take action at anytime.
