I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2798-This meant that the fishermen of Village Pescado would no longer be able to catch fish.

Without fish, they would not be able to exchange other necessities of life.

The villagers of Village Pescado only knew how to fish and nothing else.

What happened at Lake Pescado quickly spread back to the village.

Then, an old man with a beard several centimeters long walked over with the support of a young girl and his cane.

When he saw all the fish in the lake dead, the village chief of Village Pescado burst into tears.

He knew exactly what this meant, but now was not the time to be sad.

There were more important things waiting for him.

Now that the fish were dead and the facts could not be changed, he must find a way to remedy it.

The old man said to the girl next to him, "Peach, go get me a dead fish."

"Okay, Grandpa!"

The girl came to the lake, bent down, and picked up a dead fish weighing about half a kilogram before returning to the old man.

After the old man took the dead fish, he examined it and put it in front of his nose to sniff it.

It was still fresh, and it did not smell.

Therefore, this could be regarded as a blessing in misfortune.

They needed to preserve the dead fish as soon as possible so that the villagers of Village Pescado could eat them for a long time.

The first thing to do now was to appease everyone, so the old man announced,

“Everyone, listen to me. This is a test God gave us, not a punishment. As long as we pass this test, we will be able to venture on a brighter road.”

The old man was the village chief and the most prestigious person in Village Pescado. Therefore, the fishermen all became quiet when he spoke.

“Don’t be sad, everyone, and don’t be discouraged! I just checked, and these fish are still very fresh. Let’s transport all the fish first. After processing the internal organs, we can pickle them and preserve them. That way, it will be enough for us to eat for a long time. As for losing Lake Pescado and how to proceed in the future, don’t worry. I will find a way.”

Soon, everyone began transporting the deceased fish home, doing so in an orderly manner.

Among the fish, there were small fry as well as larger ones, some weighing over ten kilograms and even others reaching dozens or hundreds of kilograms, necessitating the efforts of two people to carry them back.

The girl, Peach, supported the old man as they watched from the side.

“Grandpa, why did the fish in the lake die?” Peach asked curiously.

She was still young and did not quite understand what consequences the death of the fish in Lake Pescado would have on Village Pescado.

The little girl figured that since everyone had to work so hard to fish every day, wouldn't it be better if the fish could be delivered directly to their door instead of fishing them?

“Maybe it has something to do with the noise in the middle of the night last night,” the old man replied.

“What happened last night? I didn't hear anything.” The little girl looked confused.

She slept so soundly that she did not hear the sound.

“Forget it if you didn't hear it. If I was right, something should have fallen into the lake and caused so many fish in the lake to die.”

“Something fell in the lake? What?”

“We don't know yet. After everyone transports all the fish back, we will see if we can find anything. If not, we will row a boat to the middle of the lake to look for it.”

“Okay!”

The little girl's eyes were darting all over the place. Apparently, she was very interested in the unknown.

One would be the most curious during one's teenage years.

A naked body floated in the center of Lake Pescado at this time.

It was David who had been floating in the void for three years and was attracted by the gravity of this primitive living planet.

He still showed no sign of waking up, which showed how seriously damaged his mind power was from the battle with Lufian.
