

Chapter 15

"She's really skilled! I'm also a mechanical engineering major, and I can tell she knows her stuff."

"From Lindsay's suggestions to now fixing the tractor, she doesn't seem like the airhead the internet says she is!"

"I agree, she doesn't seem like that at all. It looks like she could easily rely on her looks, but instead, she's relying on her skills."

"That's a great way to put it. Our Lindsay could just live off her looks, but now she's fixing tractors for dinner!"

"Our Lindsay is amazing, handling so many things!"

This surprising turn of events made many viewers develop a new appreciation for Lindsay.

The fans of Alex, Olivia, and Justin felt embarrassed seeing Lindsay's success.

Apart from a few rude and unreasonable comments, most of them fell silent.

After the tractor got fixed, Adam became even friendlier towards the group.

"You've fixed the tractor, so come over to my place for dinner this afternoon."

He had promised Lindsay that if she fixed the tractor, he would repay them with a meal.

He also heard from Charles that the guests doing the show in the village needed to settle their own food and drinks each day, which was why they were looking for tasks to do.

After discussing with the others, Lindsay smiled and thanked Adam, "We'd love to. But could you cook a bit more than usual? We have a task that requires..."

She explained the task of trading cooked food for bedding.

Adam laughed and waved his hand. "That's no problem at all. Getting someone to fix the tractor would have cost us at least a hundred or two hundred dollars, maybe even more.

"The important thing is, we thought it couldn't be fixed and we'd have to buy a new one, which would have cost much more. So, you really helped us out. A meal is the least we can do."

If they had asked someone from the town to fix it, they would have had to provide a meal anyway if it took a long time.

So, the reward Lindsay asked for was quite minimal.

He also decided to take extra care of Lindsay and the others during their time recording the show in the village.

With the plan to have dinner at Adam's house that evening, Lindsay and the group departed from the village committee office.

After stepping outside, Elric smiled at Leslie and said, "My decision to team up was a great idea. Today, we won without even trying."

Leslie laughed and praised him. "Absolutely. Not only did we complete the task successfully, but we also secured our dinner.

"Otherwise, even if we managed to trade for rice and vegetables by other means, for someone like me who is terrible in the kitchen, cooking to trade for bedding would be really difficult."

He had a cook at home, so he had never needed to cook.

Elric laughed. "Same here."

Wendy raised her hand. "I'm also hopeless in the kitchen."

When she was at home, her parents did the cooking, and when she lived alone, she either ate out or ordered takeout. 1

She added, "But I can manage to fry an egg."

She turned and asked, "Lindsay, can you cook?"

Lindsay smiled and replied, "Yes, I learned how to cook before."

She used to take turns cooking with Moses.

While living with the Harper family, she also cooked quite often.

Later, each time she traveled to different small worlds, she would study and experiment with new recipes.

Wendy's eyes lit up. "That's great!"

Luckily, their team had someone who could cook; otherwise, if everyone were hopeless in the kitchen, the upcoming week would be tough.

Leslie and Elric's smiles grew even wider upon hearing that Lindsay could cook.

They were glad they had teamed up with Lindsay.

Wendy asked, "Should we head back to our place to rest or continue looking for work?"

Leslie and Elric, hearing her question, instinctively looked towards Lindsay.
