Chapter 1261 Surrounded by Lies

“Grandma withdrew the lawsuit because of that letter?” Kisa was getting more and more confused. “Why did David help Sharon? Does he have a connection with the Case family?”

Gilbert shook his head. “I checked. My uncle had nothing to do with the Case family, but... Carolyn seemed to have a crush on him many years ago.”

“What?” Kisa was utterly shocked, and something flashed through her mind so fast that she could not even grasp it. She sat down on the chair with her mind all over the place. ‘Why did David save Sharon from the lawsuit? Could it be because of Carolyn? Does David like her? No, no, no. That’s impossible. If David liked her, she wouldn’t have married Christopher. With her personality, she would definitely choose David...

‘Did Carolyn beg him to write the letter? But, that’s rather unlikely... She wouldn’t be keeping quiet if she knew about David’s whereabouts. Plus, there’s no way she had a big fight with Christopher because of Adrien if she liked David. Unless... Unless Adrien and David are the same person!

The more I think about it, the more terrified and confused I feel.’ Kisa

Arthur’s suspicion was so apparent that Kisa was speechless. “I’m not lying; honest!”

“No one can be sure. You lie so much that you played your husband like a fiddle.”

Vivian immediately widened her eyes.

The burn scars behind Kisa's back were especially horrifying. Kisa had seen it in the mirror herself.

Everyone who had seen the burn scars on her back was all shocked.

"Your back..."

Vivian's voice was filled with shock.

Arthur was curious. He tilted his head slightly and glanced in Kisa's direction in embarrassment.

However, a single glance was enough to send him into shock.

'This shows that my word got through her,' Kisa thought to herself.

She thought again, 'If I want to learn about David, I can only start with Vivian. There's a saying that people with similar experiences feel sympathy for one another, so it'll be easier for them to reach out to each other. I need to make Vivian let her guard down if I want to get closer to her. That's why I told her about my messy and painful past. That way, Vivian might think she isn't the most miserable person.'

Seeing how Kisa did not move, Vivian darkened her expression. She said to Arthur, "Hurry up and scam with your friend!"

"Oh, oh, don't be mad, Aunty Vivian. We'll leave now, We'll leave..."

Arthur said while tugging Kisa's arm in a panic. Then, they walked out to the courtyard.

Kisa turned around and saw Vivian with one arm on the table and the other on her wheelchair. She had a dark expression on her face and a hint of hatred in her eyes.

Kisa smiled slightly.

Kisa said as she peered at Adrien's expression.

Adrien nodded, "I heard about this from Mr. Mullen Sr. too. He said the eldest son of the Kooper family had hurt Ms. Mullen back then, so it's no surprise the Mullen family don't like the Kooper family."

"Yeah. I want to atone for his sins, so I purposefully came over to console Ms. Mullen."

"You're... helping the Kooper family atone for their sins?" Adrien looked at Kisa in amusement.

He continued, "You don't have to atone for their sin. Isn't there Gilbert?"

Kisa shook her head. "Ms. Mullen is a good person. It doesn't matter who's atoning for the sins. I, too, went through similarly unforgettable and hopeless suffering, so it's better for me to console her instead. Rather than saying that I'm atoning for the sins in the Kooper family's stead, I'm merely standing in the viewpoint of a woman who's gotten hurt and wants to help Ms. Mullen get better."

Adrien nodded and said, "You're right."

Kisa glanced at him and said half-jokingly, "Nevertheless, why do I feel like you're being quite attentive toward Ms. Mullen?"

Adrien maintained his composure and laughed, "Ha-ha. Just as you said, Ms. Mullen is a good person. I felt sorry seeing her like this. Besides, I have a similar physique as her beloved, so I felt even worse. That's why I wanted to talk some sense into her and help her get better soon."

Seeing Arthur’s serious and panicked expression, Kisa grew even more curious about the things within the archway.

Arthur replied, “That’s my grandpa’s territory. No one’s allowed to go in there.”

Kisa’s eyes glinted slightly.

“Why is that? Don’t you all stay together? Why are there territories?” she asked in confusion.

“It’s not that we have territories.”

Arthur peered into the archway. Then, he walked toward the villa.

Kisa quickly forced a smile and said, "I'm curious, but I also love my life. So, I won't go seeking death."

"That's good. Go upstairs and get some rest, Kisa. Thank you for consoling my aunt today."

"You're most welcome. If you're free tomorrow, we'll go see your aunt again. We'll try to help her cheer up."

"Mhm, okay. Then, I'll ask you to come with me when I go see her tomorrow."

Gilbert stood by the window. He stared at the two silhouettes downstairs with a stoic expression. as they chatted and laughed. Then, his expression darkened.

Shortly after, Kisa returned to their room.

She opened the door, and the light in the room made her feel a lot calmer.

When she lifted her gaze, she saw the man standing in front of the window with his back facing. her.

Kisa subconsciously smiled at the sight of the man. She did not feel a hint of uneasiness and fear.

The man's tone had a hint of resentment.

Kisa was startled for a while. She could not understand the reason he was angry.

She said softly, "Since you came back early, you could have gone to sleep early. It's not like I asked you to wait for me."

"You..."

Gilbert immediately narrowed his eyes. In an instant, there was a ruthless look in his eyes.

Kisa quickly forced a smile, I know you're worried about me. Thank you for waiting for me. You don't know how reassured I felt when I opened the door and saw you in the room."

While my words sound ingratiating, they're also the truth,' she thought.

However, the man responded slowly in an icy tone, "Who's worried about you? Don't flatter yourself."

Then, he turned around and walked to the bed.

Kisa glared at the man's back and cursed at him in her head.

Kisa subconsciously turned to look. To her surprise, the silhouette was Gilbert.

"How'd he get to the courtyard within such a short period of time? He's still in his night robe," she thought.

Kisa then glanced at the courtyard behind him; it was pitch black. Only Vivian's place had some light, and the other places did not look different.

Her gaze was fixated on Gilbert. After the man entered the house, she finally shifted her gaze.

A while later, Gilbert finally returned.

"What were you doing just now?" Kisa asked curiously the moment the man entered the room. Gilbert shut the door and glanced at Kisa. A moment later, he responded indifferently. "Nothing." Then, he leaned onto the headboard and stared at a random spot in a daze.

Gilbert scrunched up his brows as his eyes darkened; he seemed to be thinking about something. Kisa could not figure out what he was thinking, but she sensed he had a heavy heart. She pursed her lips. Then, she suppressed her curiosity and did not ask more questions. "That's how he is. If he doesn't want to tell me, there's no use asking him," she thought. She climbed into the bed and started scrolling on her phone with her back facing him.

"Sometimes, this man would blame me for not telling him a thing. But isn't he the same? He's always hiding things from me. If he doesn't want to tell me, so be it!" she thought.

Kisa continued scrolling through her phone and tried her best to kill the curiosity she felt, how he appeared in the backyard just now was really strange. He wouldn't have gone down all of a sudden unless he saw something. After all, he should be getting ready for bed at this hour. So what in the world did he see? What should I do? The more I think about it, the more curious I

"Where is that woman? Is she in the backyard? I'll go find her. We must clarify everything that happened back then."

Gilbert was experiencing complex emotions when he saw how emotional that woman was. He knew she must have felt wronged when he misjudged her all those years back. He wanted to make up for it, but she refused to accept his efforts.

He pulled Kisa back and said, "There's no need to go after that woman. It isn't her."

Kisa was taken aback. "It isn't?"

"No, it isn't."

Kisa felt discouraged and leaned into Gilbert's arms. She had thought that it was her. "I was mentally prepared to confront the woman, but he said it wasn't her."
