Chapter 1301 Women Are Soft-Hearted

Gilbert tugged on his tie as he spoke, visibly irritated. His tone was full of resentment and a hint of saltiness.

“Honestly, I think you deserved it. She put you first a few years ago, but you dismissed it,” Kelvin sneered.

Gilbert instantly narrowed his eyes into a dangerous look and said, “Get out!”

“Tsk. Honest advice may be unpleasant to hear, but you know I’m right,” Kelvin said with a smile, not leaving the room. “Actually, you don’t have to be mad. Just be there through everything she does. If she’s worried about someone, pretend to worry about that person too. Listen to everything she says and obey her wishes. I’m sure she’ll change her mind about you.”

Gilbert looked at Kelvin expressionlessly. “I’m not you,” he said.

Jane’s face changed. She got up and stood aside, wiping her tears. Kisa watched the whole thing quietly. ‘Why can’t she stand before the Mullen family ancestors? Is it because the Mullen family did not accept her? Is it because she has no status in the family?’ Kisa thought.

Anthony clenched his fists, and the veins on the back of his hands bulged. It was unclear if he was angry or trying to restrain himself from doing something stupid.

Suddenly, Mr. Mullen Sr. threw a newspaper at Anthony's face. "Look at all the amazing sh*t you've done. I'm not going to comment on the incident at the bar, but everyone on the streets saw you and Karen hitting that woman in broad daylight. It's all over the news! Do you know what the headline reads?"

Anthony knelt with his back straight without moving an inch.

Chapter 1303 Caught in The Act

Suddenly, a loud voice sounded. Mr. Mullen Sr. had caught them in the act. Arthur was frightened to death. He kept pushing Kisa to go and show herself. Kisa gave him a contemptuous look and walked out boldly. 'There's nothing to be afraid of; I did nothing wrong.'

"Oh, Mrs. Kooper," Mr. Mullen Sr. laughed. The mottled light shone on his face, making the smile on his face look insincere and a little sinister.

Kisa greeted him with a smile, "Good evening, Mr. Mullen Sr. It looked nice out, so I decided to walk around the backyard." After saying that, she looked around with some suspicion and said, "What is this place? Seems rather mysterious."

"It's the Mullen family's ancestral hall," he replied, smiling. However, Kisa felt annoyed by his eyes trying to figure her out.

On the other hand, Jane hated Kisa to the core because of what happened at the bar today. She deliberately smiled and said, "Mrs. Kooper, what a surprise. I can't believe you stumbled across the ancestral hall of our family in the backyard. Did you not like the clear scenery in the front yard?"

"Oh, wow. That sounds mysterious." Kisa laughed meaningfully, "The thing is, the more mysterious you make it seem, the more curious I get."

"Curious, huh?" Mr. Mullen Sr. tapped his cane on the ground. "Then try to control yourself," he chuckled. "As my eldest son said, no one is eligible to enter that place except me. I even have guards standing by in there. So you should suppress your curiosity, Mrs. Kooper. My family won't be responsible if something unfortunate happens."

"Ha-ha. What kind of treasure do you have in there that you need people to guard the place?"

Mr. Mullen Sr.'s face was flushed red when he seemed to have thought of something. He stroked his beard and said, "There is a hidden treasure inside, but you people are not qualified to go in and see."

"What kind of treasure?" Arthur subconsciously asked. Albert immediately slapped him on the back of his head and shouted, "Don't ask! Even if it is the rarest treasure in the world, it still belongs to your grandfather."

"Well..." Kelvin felt a cold gaze staring at him, which made him panic.

"What's the matter? Are things not looking up?" Kisa could not help but feel anxious when she saw Kelvin's uncomfortable expression.

All of Kisa's attention was focused on Kelvin; it was as if Gilbert was not there. Kelvin felt the gaze getting colder and colder down to his spine.

"Well? Talk, Kelvin. Is there something you could do about Ms. Mullen's legs? Kelvin? Kelvin~?"

Gilbert smiled while he said those words, but Kisa and Kelvin were scared.

"Go on then!" Gilbert looked at the two expressionlessly and chuckled, "Why aren't you guys talking?"

Though his face was seemingly calm, his eyes showed anger. It would be foolish of them if they continued to speak ill of him.

Kisa lowered her head, her face buried into the collar of her shirt, while Kelvin drank out of the glass continuously. After a long time, the glass was empty. Gilbert pursed his lips coldly. He leaned close to the two and said, "Don't talk sh*t about others behind their backs if you guys don't have the guts to say it to their faces."

Kisa's entire body became stiff, and she did not dare to make a sound when the man's words fell into her ears.

'Who knew you would be back all of a sudden?!' she thought as the sound of footsteps gradually receded and the door slammed shut.

The oppressive and cold air in the room disappeared in an instant. Kisa took a deep breath and glanced at Kelvin as she said, "Why didn't you tell me he was back? I can't believe you let me say all those things while he was here!"

Kelvin froze and shook his head frantically, but Kisa knew he was lying. After all, they did grow up together. Kisa knew he usually paused to think about whether to lie or not before answering.

"You're telling me you don't know?" Kisa asked, her face darkened.

"I-I don't," he replied.

"It seems that Gilbert did not want her to know why since he didn't tell her. It's best if I don't say anything to save that man from going mad at me again. I can't afford to mess with him right now.'

Kelvin thought about it and shook his head to show that he really did not know.

Someone unlocked the door. Kisa’s body instinctively tensed up, and she turned to look at the door under her blanket. The door quickly opened and closed. A slender silhouette came into the frame, and Kisa saw it walk toward her slowly. She would have been scared to death if she was not already familiar with Gilbert’s figure. She knew that he was the one who had entered.

At first, Kisa thought that the Mullen residence was eerie and weird. She even had a terrible nightmare and was pranked by someone on her first day there. She would have had the shock of her life if someone else had entered the room.

The figure stood by her window for a while; she was unsure if he was looking at her. The figure did not speak, so she did not make a sound either. After a while, he walked quietly toward the bathroom.

Just as the figure was about to reach the bathroom door, a click sounded, and the wall lamp in the room turned on in an instant. The figure froze, and after a while, he turned to look at her.

Kisa wrapped the blanket around herself and sat up from the bed, watching him quietly. Neither of them spoke, and the air was eerily quiet. After a long time, Kisa was the one who said the first word. The man had always been able to stay calm when he wanted to.

The man did not respond at all.

However, Kisa refused to believe that he did not hear her crying out in pain. After all, sharp and alert

Regardless, the man still did not respond.

Kisa was frustrated.

'He's completely giving me the cold shoulder now? He's even disregarding his child's safety,' she

"It hurts! My stomach hurts so badly!"

Kisa said loudly and grunted out in anger.

Suddenly, the person beside her shot up. The man had sat up on the bed.

Before Kisa could react, the lights in the room were turned on.

Kisa stared at the man in front of her through teary eyes.

“You’ll never know how it feels like to be a mother. Back then, I loved that child more than myself How could I use it to threaten you? You, on the other hand, were cold-blooded and heartless. You kept calling it a b*stard and saying it shouldn’t live, you told me to abort it. You don’t know how hopeless I felt and how much pain I was in,” she said in a choked voice.

After she finished, she took a deep breath and wiped her tears. She continued, “Even though it’s all in the past, my heart still hurts when I think about it. This type of pain is something cold and ruthless people like you won’t understand.”

Gilbert stared intensely at her tear-filled eyes. He could not help but recall what Sharon had said to him outside of prison that New Year’s Eve.

“Kisa said she won’t let your child live if you don’t let her leave prison.”

That was what Sharon told me. However, I never once doubted whether these words truly came out of Kisa’s mouth. Looking back, it seems like I made a mistake, thought Gilbert.

The woman beside him lowered her gaze and had an angry and heartbroken expression.
