Chapter 1381 That Will Be Your Final Resting Place

Back at Mr. Mullen Sr.'s birthday celebration, Kisa had caught a glimpse of a woman who looked exactly like Sara from the back. Despite Gilbert's insistence that the woman was just a friend of Vivian, Kisa knew Vivian did not have any friends. So, she suspected that the woman could be hiding in this restricted zone.

While Kisa was deep in thought, Mr. Mullen Sr. chuckled and said, "What's with all the fuss? This land is vast, and the real special place is still ahead." He then turned to Mrs. Mullen Sr. and added, "No matter what my treasure is, your status as the lady of the Mullen family will never be shaken."

nearby, the ropes that it hung on and even the seat were covered in by vines; it was a beautiful sight. To the right of the swing was a lounge chair with an umbrella, and in front was shining down on the garden. 'But once it gets dark, will the cold

'Who was the woman with the cold, sinister laughter haunting me by the bedside, putting me into a hypnotic trance? It was Sara, wasn't it? If it is Mr. Mullen Sr., he has no reason to harm me. But if Sara is working with him, then who knows what's really going on? Maybe Sara asked Mr. Mullen Sr. to poison me with the tea, and to bring me to this creepy, restricted zone. And now, it seems like there are traps everywhere, all set up to get me.'

As she thought about it more, fear began to grip her. She could not help but steal a glance at Mr. Mullen Sr., but his expression was as serious as ever. A shiver ran down her spine. Suddenly, she clutched her head and pretended to go mad, running wildly toward the garden.

"Aah... aah, a ghost! There's a ghost!"

Because of her scream, the Mullen family were all stunned, staring at her with confusion. Only Mr. Mullen Sr. remained calm, steadily observing her. This only solidified Kisa's suspicion that the tea was Mr. Mullen Sr.'s doing, so she had to keep up the charade and make sure Mr. Mullen Sr. did not see through her. She wanted to find out what exactly he was trying to pull by bringing her to this restricted zone.

“Shh, she’s right behind you... long hair, no face, she is... right there... behind you,” Kisa’s eyes widened with fear, her expression so genuine it was almost as if she had actually seen a ghost.

Carrie shuddered in fear, her scalp tingled with terror. “Aah...” she cried out, quickly scurrying behind Leon, pointing at Kisa and shouting, “You scared the crap out of me! What’s wrong with you? This is the Mullen family, a respected household. We don’t tolerate such childish pranks!”

“I’m not lying. I really saw her,” Kisa replied, her voice sincere. Suddenly, she pointed at the sky. “Look, it is the moon! The cold, icy moon.” Everyone looked up, but instead of the moon, they saw the setting sun.

Mrs. Mullen Sr. quickly looked to Mr. Mullen Sr. “What do we do now?”

Mr. Mullen Sr. remained cool and collected, offering a reassuring smile. “I think Mrs. Kooper hasn’t been getting enough rest lately. She’s just experiencing hallucinations.”

If Kisa wanted to unravel the mysteries within this restricted zone. This was her one and only shot, so she could not afford to back down. The entire Mullen family is here, and Mr. Mullen Sr. wouldn't dare to take my life, would he? If I were to meet my end at the hands of the Mullen residence, they wouldn't be able to escape the consequences. Surely, Mr. Mullen Sr. isn't that foolish."

While she was in thoughts, Leon and Isaac appeared out of nowhere and clamped down on her arms, one on the left and one on the right.

Kisa pretended to struggle frantically. "No, don't touch me... Oh my, that woman is here! She is here! Let go of me, quick!"

Leon flustered and called out to Mr. Mullen Sr., "Dad, I think she is possessed. Let's call a doctor to take a look!"

In the basement, the Mullen family was all shocked. 'This isn't just any basement, it's a palace! they all thought.

"What a waste that such a beautiful place isn't used for living in," Carrie said regretfully.

Mr. Mullen Sr. chuckled. "Who says no one lives here? I stay here occasionally."

Carrie opened her mouth to voice her thoughts, but she hesitated. She wanted to say that as members of the Mullen family, they should all live in such a wonderful place together, instead of Mr. Mullen Sr. living here alone, only occasionally, wasting all this space. She glanced at the other members of the Mullen family, who were all gazing in amazement and regret, but no one dared to speak up about wanting to live here.

While Mr. Mullen Sr. was not looking, Kisa quickly surveyed the area.

As Leon and Isaac heard about the mysterious mechanism that Mr. Mullen Sr. had just mentioned, their eyes widened in hesitation.

Isaac chimed in. "The contraptions on the other side of that archway..."

"Listen up boys," Mr. Mullen Sr. warned, "as long as you don't act like wild monkeys, those contraptions won't even know you're there. So, after you tuck Mrs. Kooper in for a little nap, you'd better not go snooping around out of curiosity."

Leon and Isaac eagerly nodded their heads in agreement and took Kisa toward the right archway.

Kisa pretended to resist. "What are you doing? Where are you taking me? Let go of me... Let go! Ahh! There is a ghost inside. I won't go in... I don't want to go in, ahhh!" Kisa shrieked and struggled vehemently at the entrance of the right archway. The basement was deep, and the ceiling was tall. Leon looked at his sly smirk at the corner of his lips and then at Kisa. With a curious expression, he asked, "Bro, are you trying to get this crazy woman to test those contraptions?"

"Hey, bro, I have to ask, aren't you curious about this place?" Isaac asked with a look on his face that showed he understood Leon very well.

Leon scratched his head. "I'm curious, after all, this place is so big, and the construction's so strange. Dad's been hiding this place for six years, so there must be some secret. It's just not good to let this crazy woman test the contraptions. What if something really happens? How will we explain it to Dad? And Mr. Kooper from Calthon is not someone to mess with."

"What are you afraid of? She's a nutcase We'll just say she broke free from her restraint and then ran around, triggering the contraptions. Besides, she's probably had sudden fits of madness like this before. Mr. Kooper must be aware of her condition. So, if she triggers the contraptions while in a fit of madness, we can still explain it away."

Leon was still hesitating. Isaac continued to egg him on. "Think about it; crazy people usually have a lot of strength. We just need to hold back a bit, and she will be able to break free. So, it won't be intentional, we just accidentally let this crazy woman break free. What do you say?" With that, he gave Leon a sinister and wicked smile.

Kisa’s eyes lit up at the thought. She ran wild in the garden like a madwoman. “Ahh... Something is after me! Go away... Help me! Help me!” she shrieked, pushing Leon and Isaac as she ran past them. At times, she would run to the large tree and hug it, crying and laughing in turns.

She tilted her head, speaking to the tree, as if it was a person, “How pitiful! Are you hung to your death? What are you doing up there? Come down. Let’s play together,” she called out, gesturing toward Leon and Isaac. “And bring them with us. They can play, too.”

Leon and Isaac exchanged a look, the chill on their spines only getting stronger in the already cold surroundings.

‘Forget curiosity, staying alive is the priority!’ Leon barked at Isaac. “Let’s just get the crazy woman into the first room and get out of here. I’m outta here!” With that, Leon started making his way to the hall.

Kisa was stiff as a board, her heart skipping a beat. With a determined gleam in her eye, she continued to pound away at the door. “Let me out of here! Come on, open the door already!”

“Save your breath. You’re not getting out of here.”

A voice echoed from behind her, one that was hauntingly familiar. It was a woman’s voice, sounding just like Sara. Kisa’s heart skipped a beat, and she cautiously turned around to see who it was.

As she faced the screen, she saw the outline of a slender figure. Kisa's back was pressed tightly against the door, and her eyes were fixed on the shadow, trying to act as if she had gone crazy, faking a scare. "Ghost! You're terrifying! Don't come any closer!"

"The man responsible for putting you behind bars and causing the fire that injured you and claimed your child's life is Gilbert," Sara whispered in Kisa's ear, her voice filled with hatred. It appeared that even though she went into hiding all those years ago, she had always kept a watchful eye on her.

"He wants you dead, and he won't stop until he sees it through. He's tampered with your food, trying to drive you mad, and he wants to burn you alive once again."

Sara continued to repeat these words, trying to instill a deep-seated hatred in Kisa.
