

Reborn 1598

Chapter 1598

Just like them, Jensen was a trainee here. Yet, there was an innate air of nobility about him. The sight of his stern face held an intimidating power. The women dared not speak. Jensen stood beside Mia, casting a faint smile in their direction.

"Has any of you seen Hayes worry about a woman? Has any of you seen Hayes embrace a woman? Even if she were truly sent away by Hayes, she would still hold a place in his heart. If you want to remain unscathed in the McCray family's backyard, you'd better not provoke her. She's not someone you can afford to mess with."

Although the women were reluctant to accept it, they knew Jensen spoke the truth. Of course, they understood Hayes treated this woman differently, but they were jealous and wanted to bully her.

Seeing the women still glaring at Mia with resentment, Jensen chuckled and snapped, "Leave, now!"

The women gritted their teeth in anger, but they only looked at each other without daring to be arrogant anymore.

"Because he likes you." He spoke quietly, his face devoid of any emotion, as if nothing or no one in this place could stir a single feeling in him.

Mia felt like she was on the verge of breaking down. She grabbed his arm. "What about you? You know he likes me, but do you know who I like? Jensen, can't you really see it? I like you, not him. It's only you that I like."

Jensen removed her hand and spoke gravely. "Though Hayes is dark and unpredictable, he's incredibly good to you. It's a good thing that he likes you, and you can be happy with him. At the very least, you could live a decent life here."

"I don't want that!" Mia growled. "I've never wanted just a decent life. What I want is you, and a pure, untainted love."