

Reborn 311

Chapter 311 Touched

Susan drove herself to the café. As soon as she entered, she saw Henry sitting next to a window. Just like every date before, Henry would always be the first to arrive. No matter how busy he was, he would go for the date first and then continue with the work later. Susan found it hard to understand why their relationship started to fade away.

She walked over there. Henry stood up to pull out the chair for her just like usual. Seeing that, Susan even felt a bit more upset.

Henry smiled bitterly. The two of them sat down face to face.

"I have ordered a cup of cappuccino with extra milk and sugar for you. That's your favorite." Henry took the initiative to break the ice.

Susan nodded and said frankly, "Henry, I am here to talk about what happened last night."

"I know." Henry nodded, "Just keep going."

"Was that you who took me out of the nightclub last night?"

"Yes."

"Why weren't you with me in the hotel when Hannah came to me?"

"I left on my own." Answered Henry.

Tears started to fill up her eyes. She didn't understand why he left. If he had stayed, she would have given her virginity to him as she wished. However, it turned out that Manuel took it away.

"I found that I couldn't bear to hurt you. I know you needed me last night. But I couldn't. I was afraid you would regret after you woke up." Henry seemed a bit upset.

"Have you ever wondered I would also regret after sleeping with another guy?"

"Susan, you have married. It means to hurt you if I were to sleep with you. If that happened, you would be accused of cheating on your husband. I can't bear to let you take the blame."

"Compared with the accusation, do you think I would feel better after I had my virginity taken away by a man I didn't love?"

"You slept with another guy last night?" asked Henry, with a kind of bad feeling inside his mind.

Susan nodded. She had sex with Manuel, for hours. It was she who took the initiative. Thinking of it, tears streamed down her cheek.

"I thought you would do it yourself if I left you alone in the hotel..." Henry seemed too upset to continue.

"I couldn't stay with you. I was afraid I would lose control. But I didn't send you back home. Nor did I want you to sleep with any other guy. Just blame me for being selfish. In my eyes, you have been the purest even after you married. I don't wanna know you already have slept with another guy. Yes, I am being selfish. I know I can't sleep with you but I still have that desire to do so." He looked like he was at the edge of breakdown.

Before what happened last night, she considered herself pure. But now she couldn't

"Henry, to be honest, this is my first time to hate you for being a coward! Even if you had been a little braver, you would have been the one staying by my side right now. It would have been both of us to face Manuel altogether! However, it turns out that I am facing you all alone at this moment." Susan finally let out her grievance.

Silent, Henry waited to take the blame. However, Susan had no idea what to continue. Since she had figured out what was on his mind just as Hannah suggested-it was all because of his cowardice, now she gotta leave.

Susan stood up and was about to leave. But Henry suddenly grabbed her arm to stop her, "Wait."

Susan paused.

"I will be waiting for you." Henry suddenly said.

Touched, she could hardly believe what she just heard of.

Ever since Henry sat by when she married Manuel, plus he walked away last night while she was burning with desire, she thought her relationship with Henry was over, especially after the sex between her and Manuel happened. She thought it was a clean cut with Henry.

Actually, she asked for this talk not to figure out what happened last night. Instead, she was here to inform Henry that the story between them had ended ever since last night.

However, what Henry just said went beyond her very expectations.

"I don't care about what happened between you and Manuel. Nor do I care about your marriage. I am willing to wait till the end of my life."

Susan burst into heavier tears. She found it impossible to turn him down while he was compromising. She turned around and threw herself into his arms. After what happened last night, she was hungry for a warm hug and someone to rely on. She buried herself into his arms. They clung to each other just like lovers faithful to each other.

Not until minutes later did Henry let go of her. They looked into each other's eyes.

Henry said gently, "Don't cry. You are making me heartbroken."

"You'll wait for me, but why don't you stand by my side and fight with me?"

"Because I am not powerful enough. There are a lot of things I am incapable of. The only thing I can do is to wait for you."

"Henry,"

"I don't feel sorry for myself. After all, I don't think I will fall in love with any other ladies for the rest of my life but you only. You don't need to feel sorry for me. I made my own choice. Even if you may fall in love with Manuel in the end, I won't regret for my choice."

Susan was too affected to utter. She totally fell for him at this moment. She swore she would return to Henry one day in the future.

Inside the office, Hannah made a call to Manuel after some consideration.

Noticing it was Hannah calling, Manuel picked it up, "Hey, Hannah."

"Did Susan leave?"

"Yes." He nodded.

"She went to talk to Henry." Hannah said frankly.

"I know."

He knew it at the very moment when Susan walked out of the door. After the shocking thing happened to her last night, she needed someone to rely on.

"Actually, I have investigated what happened last night. It wasn't Henry's idea to philter Susan. It was one of her friends at the nightclub." Hannah didn't tell Susan about it. She believed it was more suitable to talk about it with Manuel.

"I knew it wasn't Henry. He wouldn't philter himself if it were him."

"Why?" Hannah was a bit surprised.

Chapter 312 Danger (1) The Accident in Langley Town

“Back into the day when her father and I convinced Henry to break up with her, we promised him the initial share of the Phillips Bank coupled with a big sum of money. But there was a limitation for him—he had to promise that he would never have sex with Susan.” Manuel told Hannah the truth.

Not until then did Hannah finally realize what happened.

“No wonder he didn’t sleep with Susan last night. I just can’t figure out why he left her alone. Was he trying to protect Susan? But if that was the case, he wouldn’t have sat by when Susan was sleeping with another guy.”

“That’s right.” Manuel nodded.

If it weren’t because of that limitation, Henry would probably have slept with her. Susan wouldn’t turn him down as long as he wanted.

“He’s not easy to be trifled with.” Hannah sighed.

He swallowed the humiliation that Susan, the one he used to love, was having sex with another guy.

What a scheming man!

Hannah still remembered even though Charles didn’t love her at that time, he would never let another man sleep with her. Every man was born to be possessive. However, Henry could hold back his pride so as to get what he wanted.

“What are you gonna do?” asked Hannah.

“Since I have had sex with Susan, there is nothing else I can do.” Replied Manuel.

“At least you can learn to take the initiative. You gotta strive for it.” Said Hannah.

“But that would make her hate me even more.”

“Manuel, You attach too much concern about her feelings. That’s why you never express how much you love her. She can’t tell if you don’t show it. Just like what happened last night. To be honest, Susan doesn’t have the right to blame you. Think about it, you are the victim. Don’t be confused because of her. You have the very reason to claim that. And she has married you. Having sex is common between couple. You don’t need to feel sorry for her. That’s the duty between couple.”

Manuel couldn’t help smiling, “Well, you convince me.”

“No, you gotta convince yourself. Do as I told. From now on, take the initiative. Don’t try to stay away from her just because you are afraid that you might piss her off. Susan even complained to me last night that you didn’t even come to her. Perhaps deep within her heart, she wanna experience that kind of duty between couple.” Hannah talked fast. After a short pause, she continued, “You said you will tell her the reason why Henry got close to her after you capture her heart, right? Since you have decided, why don’t you take actions? If you don’t struggle for it, she will never fall in love with you.”

“Okay, I will take the initiative.” Manuel nodded.

He was totally convinced. Indeed, he attached too much concern about Susan’s feelings, for the fear that her disgust against him would grow. That was why he always stayed away from her. However, he almost forgot that even though the distance might help to stop their relationship from getting worse, there was no way it could get better.

“Besides, you’d better collect some evidence against Henry. When it’s needed, you gotta expose his plot. I worry that stupid girl will fall into his trap.” Hannah reminded.

“Okay.” Manuel nodded.

“Alright, that’s it. Remember, you gotta strive for her love on your own.”

“Thank you.”

After hanging up the phone, she let out a breath of relief. At least Susan’s current life was still sticking to the path she planned. There wasn’t too much to worry about. Now it was up to Manuel.

However, as soon as she put down her phone, she saw a news shown on the screen.

'Unexpected Explosion in a factory located at Langley Town. Many casualties have been reported.'
Langley Town?

That was exactly the town Oscar paid a visit to. How came such an explosion? What about Oscar? Was he there when the explosion happened?

Worried, she hurried to dial his number. However, his phone was off.

Was it because of the explosion? Perhaps he was far away from the spot of explosion.

She clicked on the phone to read the news. It read "A firework factory suddenly exploded. A hundred workers were trapped. The fire afterward had burnt down the whole building. 21 of them were killed while 52 of them were seriously injured and 23 of them were merely injured. The police were still investigating the accident..."

Though it seemed reasonable that an explosion would happen in a firework factory with lax security procedures, Hannah felt like it wasn't just a simple accident.

Gritting her teeth, she dialed Oscar's number once again. However, it was still off. Oscar had ever promised that he always had his phone on. Now the answer was obvious-there was something happening to him.

Hannah told herself to remain calm. Oscar must have survived, she believed. After some consideration, she called Theodore, "Theodore, do you know about the explosion in Langley Town?"

"I saw the news."

"Do you know about Oscar's schedule today?"

Theodore didn't reply.

"Was he gonna visit the factory?" Hannah expected his answer.

"I don't know. He didn't tell me."

"But I can't reach him. His phone is off!"

"Neither can I."

"He won't turn off his phone by himself." Hannah was worried.

"Perhaps his phone is out of power."

"No. He won't be that stupid."

However, Theodore didn't intend to continue, "Sorry, I have something else to deal with. I gotta go."

"Theodore..."

He hung up the phone without waiting for Hannah's words to finish. Frowning, she noticed there must be something weird about it from Theodore's unusual indifference about Oscar's situation.

After some consideration, she turned to look at Jimmy. Noticing her gaze, Jimmy felt a bit uneasy, "Mrs Wells, what can I do for you?"

"Take me to Langley Town half an hour later."

Jimmy was a bit surprised. Hannah then made an internal call, "Rose, prepare a meeting for the department in two minutes. I got works to assign."

"Yes."

After carefully assigning the works, Hannah left the office. She didn't tell her father about it through the phone until she set off to Langley Town. But she didn't tell her father where she was going in case he would be worried. Perhaps she asked for the leave because of tiring work recently, Miguel supposed so.

Chapter 313 Danger (2) Looking for Oscar

Looking at the street outside the window, she hung up the phone. Even she herself didn't expect that she would be willing to put aside everything without hesitation when she learned that Oscar might be in danger.

Biting her own lips, she told herself to calm down. After all, the marriage between them should be still considered a kind of cooperation. Once something dangerous happened to him, the cooperation would be gone.

While contemplating, she saw Jimmy was about to reach the expressway. However, a black car suddenly stopped at the front. Frowning, then she saw Theodore get off from that car. He walked over to her car and knocked on the window. Hannah opened the door.

"You don't need to go. Let me do the job. I will let you know if there is any news about him."

It took her a few seconds to notice that he was talking about Langley Town.

"Why?" she asked.

"Aren't you busy? You should be dealing with your work first."

"I am busy. But I gotta check what's going on with Oscar. He didn't answer the phone. His phone remains off till now. That's quite unusual."

"That's why I will go there to see what happened to him."

"Why can't I go with you?"

"It's dangerous there!" Theodore replied frankly.

Hannah paused out of surprise. As expected, it must be something unusual.

"Oscar doesn't want to see you in danger. Just stay. I will let you know if there is any update."

"You said it's dangerous over there. And that's my reason to get there. As his wife, I can't sit by if anything bad happens to him!" Hannah insisted.

"You will only bring us trouble!" Theodore said frankly.

"I will leave myself if I turn to be the trouble. I promise I won't trouble you!" Hannah guaranteed.

"You don't even know what the world is like! Oscar has been showing you the nice version of the world. As for the evil..."

"You mean death? I don't care!" Hannah suddenly interrupted.

Surprised, Theodore paused for seconds by her unexpected courage.

"I know I look like a trouble in your eyes. But from my perspective, I can never sit back into the house while enjoying my leisure time if anything bad happens to him! If the worst consequence falls on him, do you think I can continue with my life alone? Theodore, if you ever experience the feelings of true love, you can never sit by."

At this moment, she admitted that she truly fell for Oscar. That was why she would rush to him at all costs. Theodore hesitated but he was convinced.

"Theodore, I believe Oscar also wanna see me do something as return to his love for me. I am sure he doesn't mean to simply give away his love while asking for nothing from me." Hannah stared at him.

After a few seconds of silence, he replied, "Alright, but if there is any danger, you gotta leave as long as I require! Don't bargain!"

"Okay." Hannah agreed.

Then Theodore took the passenger seat to join them.

At the very beginning, Hannah reckoned it might just be an accident. And Oscar wouldn't be likely to be at spot. However, the seriousness of Theodore grew her alert.

About five hours later, they reached the hospital in Langley Town. It was said that all casualties were sent there. Then Hannah asked for the list of casualties.

After carefully checking it, she fortunately noticed that Oscar was not included in but her hands still trembled.

Thank god, there was no name of Oscar. She carefully read it again to make sure. Luckily, Oscar survived it.

Hannah hurried to tell Theodore, "He's not in the list of the dead."

"Nor in the list of those with serious injury." Theodore nodded to say.

Then she started checking the list of those with minor injury. The same was true on this list-she didn't find Oscar's name.

"Wait." Hannah suddenly took out the list again.

Theodore turned to look at her, "What have you found?"

"Thoth! He's Oscar's assistant! He came here with Oscar."

That was to say, they were in the factory when the explosion happened. Hannah soon fell into panic.

Theodore hurried to walk to the ward where Thoth rested. Hannah followed him.

The hospital was filled with casualties and there were three injured people inside every ward.

Hannah saw the police there when they arrived.

One of the cops stopped them, "What are you doing?"

"Thoth, we are his family. We wanna visit him." Theodore replied.

"Thoth? Oh, by the way, he needs to be transferred to another ward. Just come to assist us."

"He needs to be transferred? Why?" Hannah looked confused.

"Stop asking." The policeman seemed a bit annoyed. She could tell that there must be something wrong.

Together with medical workers, they helped to get Thoth into another ward.

Of course, Thoth recognized Hannah. As soon as he saw her, he said, "Mrs Wells, Mr Wells chased after the drug dealer on his own!"

"What?" Hannah was stunned.

Drug dealer?

How came there was a drug dealer?

"Here is the case. After we finished the lecture tour here, we were about to leave. But we found there was something wrong about the firework factory. After scrutiny, we noticed that it was a drug manufacturing factory. Mr Wells wanna have it exposed. When he lurked into the factory, he got noticed before he filmed some evidence. The drug dealer blasted the whole factory to destroy every evidence. Mr Wells and I survived. While I was waiting for ambulance, he told me to stay and he went to chase after the drug dealer on his own. But now we have lost contact with him." Thoth hurried to explain.

Hearing that, Hannah was rendered greatly frantic.

"The police noticed that I wasn't part of the factory workers. So they separated me apart from them. All those inside the hospital are part of the drug dealing. But their boss has escaped. That's why Mr Wells went to chase after them." Thoth added.

Was he insane?

All drug dealers were dangerous outlaws!

Chapter 314 Danger (3) Kidnap

Hannah was totally startled. However, Theodore still seemed composed as if he had already expected it.

"What should we do?" Hannah asked anxiously.

"Just go for him."

“Where to go?”

“I don’t know. Whatever, we gotta set off.” Theodore himself had no idea how to start. He just tried to keep himself calm.

So did Hannah. Oscar wouldn’t be risking his own life to fight against a bunch of drug dealers, she supposed.

“We gotta go.” Said Theodore.

Hannah turned to look at Thoth, “Just stay here. Remember to tell your family to pick you up. Theodore and I won’t be leaving so soon.”

“Okay. Be careful.” Said Thoth.

“Don’t worry. Take care.”

Then Hannah left the hospital with Theodore. They returned to the car.

“We gotta settle down in a hotel.” Theodore said to Jimmy.

“Why? We should be looking for Oscar.” Hannah frowned.

“Do you know where to find him?”

“Just go for him like you said.”

“But we gotta have a destination.” Said Theodore.

“But it’s not a time to rest in hotel. We gotta do something.” Hannah was speechless. Theodore was being too incredibly self-possessed. Burning with anxiety, she felt like she couldn’t wait any longer.

“We will talk about it in the hotel.” Theodore insisted.

Hannah finally compromised.

“I need a room.” Theodore said to the front desk lady.

The lady took a weird look at the three of them. Obviously, she might have considered Hannah a whore. Hannah didn’t understand why Theodore only asked for one room. But at a second thought, she decided to follow his choice. She could tell there must be a reason.

After check-in, they got the card. Then they walked into a room full of musty smell.

“Try to get used to it. There is no nice hotel in this small town.” Lying on one of the bed, Theodore said to Hannah. He seemed to be used to it.

Commonly speaking, Theodore, widely known as a high-born gentleman from the Wolds, should find it quite unpleasant to stay in a place like that. Even Hannah herself felt a bit uneasy staying here even though she could bear it.

“Just take a rest. Don’t worry. Both Jimmy and I will maintain a distance from you.”

Of course, Hannah never worried about that.

“We will take action tonight. Now we gotta rest for it.” Said Theodore.

Hannah nodded. She lay down on one of the beds.

The mattress felt hard with musty damp quilt. Frowning, Hannah still managed to close her eyes.

However, Oscar’s face started popping out inside her mind.

‘What a man of trouble! Who did he think he was? Some kind of savior? How could he try to fight a drug dealer on his own?’ Tossing and turning, Hannah felt annoyed. She felt like slapping on his face if she could. She was so worried that she lost both her sleepiness and appetite.

It was Jimmy who took the dinner back into the room. After dinner, Theodore started to get himself changed. Before they left, he handed over a black vest to Hannah. Surprised, Hannah took it over. It felt much heavier than a common vest.

“It’s bullet-proof.” He explained.

Her hands couldn't help shaking.

"Are you afraid?" Theodore let out a smile of scorn.

"No. I was just wondering what it was." Hannah put on the vest.

"Don't worry. Both Jimmy and I have our owns." Theodore had put it on.

But what about Oscar, she worried. She soon recollected herself and put on the vest. Then they set off.

Jimmy was still the driver. This time, they headed to the hospital.

"What are we doing in the hospital?" asked Hannah.

"We need one of them to extract information from."

"You mean one of those drug dealers?"

"Yes." Theodore nodded.

Hannah realized that Theodore was expecting a chance in the daytime.

"Are you sure anyone of them will listen to us?" asked Hannah.

"Commonly speaking, they are addictive to drugs. We can control him with drugs." Theodore explained.

Hannah nodded and proposed, "We gotta capture one of the leaders. A small fish won't know about the whereabouts of their boss."

"That's why we are gonna aim at someone important."

"Who?"

"Jason, the sub-leader among them. I noticed that from the list. So I paid special attention to him. He should be in the hospital right now, severely injured and monitored by the police." Theodore replied frankly.

"How do you know that he's the sub-leader? You have them investigated?"

"Oscar and I have them investigated before he took action."

"So he has told you about that?"

"Yes." Theodore nodded.

Hannah suddenly fell into silence.

"Don't be mad at him. Oscar won't tell you anything dangerous. But don't worry. It won't kill him."

Theodore soled her.

"It's okay. I feel like I don't wanna know who you both are."

"It doesn't matter. What matters is that you gotta remember Oscar loves you."

Soon, they reached the hospital. Fully armed, Theodore disguised himself with a white gown, "Just wait here." After that, he walked into the hospital.

Watching his back, Hannah was surprised, "Is he gonna go alone?"

"Yes." Jimmy nodded. He also seemed to be used to it.

Hannah found herself quite a bit uneasy staying in the car. About two hours later, Theodore hadn't returned.

"Hasn't he finished?" Hannah didn't want to wait any longer.

"Not so soon."

"We gotta get in."

"No, you will alert the others. And, you will trouble him."

"We just pay a visit to Thoth. I won't alert any of them. Trust me!" Hannah insisted.

After some hesitation, Jimmy agreed. He also thought that it took too long for Theodore to finish. Both Hannah and Jimmy walked into the hospital. Then they headed to Thoth's ward.

On their way there, they kept looking around to search for Theodore. However, Jimmy suddenly pushed her into a corner. With her eyes wide open, Hannah then noticed that Thoth was kidnapped by someone else.

Chapter 315 Danger (4) Save Him

Long after, Jimmy let go of Hannah. Hannah was too stunned to utter, "He got kidnapped! Who did that? Why did they take him away?"

"I don't know. My duty is to protect you." Jimmy remained indifferent.

Hannah was about to rush over. Before Jimmy could stop her, Theodore suddenly stood in her front from nowhere, "Come with me."

"Theodore, Thoth got kidnapped! We gotta help him." Hannah looked anxious.

"No, we can't. Oscar is our priority."

"Theodore!" Hannah looked a bit mad.

However, Theodore spared her no chance to continue. He made Jimmy take control of her and went back into the car. Then he took off the mask.

"Theodore, don't you think it's weird? Why did he get kidnapped? They just took him away in front us!" staring at him, Hannah found it hard to understand why he remained impassive.

"Nothing weird about it. He knew too much he shouldn't know. He will be killed."

"What?" Hannah was furious. She couldn't believe Theodore could be so cold-blooded.

"Jimmy, take us to somewhere else. The hospital is under guard. We will do it later." Theodore said to Jimmy.

Jimmy did as he told.

"Can we save him? Or at least we can notice the police."

"Hannah, are you being too stupid to find out? Do you think those drug dealers avoid being noticed just because they are careful enough to cover up themselves?" Theodore added impatiently.

Hannah paused for seconds. But soon, she realized what he meant.

"You finally got it." Theodore confirmed.

Not until then did she realize why Theodore had never noticed the police but to look for Oscar all by himself. She used to reckon that it was because he worried if those drug dealers would be alerted once the police got noticed. However, it turned out that the local police had been part of this game.

"Now even if you wanna leave, I am afraid you can't. Now we can't send you home. I need a hand.

That's why Jimmy has to stay. So no one is gonna drive you home. And we can't let you go home alone. So you gotta stay with us."

"I didn't say I wanna leave. But I need you to save Thoth."

"If we save him, they will be alerted. If we fail to capture Jason tonight and leave as soon as possible, the local police will start paying attention to us. What happened to Thoth will then happen to us." Cold as always, Theodore didn't seem to care about Thoth's life.

"Theodore, I have no idea what you have experienced in the past. But I can't sit by while he's in danger. And, Thoth is Oscar's assistant. Oscar will be guilty of that if Thoth dies because of him." Hannah tried to convince him.

However, Theodore simply replied with a scornful smile. "I don't mean to speak ill of him. But he's way too much more cold-blooded than you ever expect."

"I will call the cops if you refuse to save Thoth! I mean it!"

"Hannah! You're getting us in trouble!" Theodore huffed seriously.

"I don't mean to bring you trouble. But I can't simply watch him dying unless it was Charles."

Of course, for those who had ever conspired against her, she would show no mercy. However, as for those innocent, she couldn't sit by. She couldn't be as cold-blooded as Charles. She still reserved the greatest humanity ever since she came back to life this time.

After a few seconds of eye contact, Theodore could tell how determined she was.

He finally compromised, "Jimmy, take us to Blue River."

Though Hannah didn't know where he referred to, she could tell that Theodore must be quite familiar with this place. As Theodore required, Jimmy drove them to a deserted area.

"Stay in the car." Said Theodore.

"Where are you going?" Hannah felt a bit frightened. She thought he was gonna do something dangerous.

"As you required, I am gonna bail him out." After that, Theodore walked away.

She watched his back fading away in the darkness.

Hannah was rendered nervous. She found herself being too rash when making that decision. Though she wanted to save Thoth, she didn't mean to risk Theodore's life. She couldn't afford to pay the price once something bad happened to Theodore.

Half an hour had passed. Both Hannah and Jimmy felt like it had been a century. Then, they saw someone appear in the darkness. She couldn't help holding her breath.

It was Theodore, who got drenched all over while carrying Thoth over his shoulder.

After putting Thoth onto the backseat, he hurried to say, "Jimmy, drive!"

Jimmy soon stepped on the gas.

Hannah took a look at Thoth, who was still trembling out of fear all over.

"What happened to him?" asked Hannah.

Theodore answered while drying his own hair with a towel, "He got dumped into the river with his feet tied by a stone. He's fine except for panic."

"How do you know?"

"It's a common mean among those drug dealers." He answered casually.

How did he know that much? She could tell Theodore must have planned for it.

"Ten minutes left, we gotta head to the hospital to continue with the action. But I will leave him alone even if you don't understand why."

"Okay." Hannah agreed. Theodore didn't expect that Hannah didn't intend to argue.

"Now he's safe. That's enough. Oscar should be our priority right now."

She had her own bottom line but she knew when to adjust it.

Hannah turned to look at Thoth, "Now you have been rescued. They may believe that you are dead.

Now you should be safe. Going back to Kensbury is what you gotta do next. When you return home, don't call the police and wait for order."

Not until then did Thoth finally collect himself. He raised his head to look at Hannah.

"You are on your own." Said Hannah.

Thoth nodded.

Jimmy stopped the car halfway. Then Thoth got off the car himself. His body was still shivering. Never had he expected such horrible things to happen to himself. Jimmy hurried to step on the gas as soon as he got off.

They headed to the hospital.

Theodore put on that medical outfit again.

"Theodore, let me help you."

Theodore frowned upon hearing that.
“Trust me. Let me help you.” Hannah insisted.

Chapter 316 Danger (5) Resourceful Hannah

Theodore finally agreed to let Hannah help. Because it wouldn't be easy to take the second in command of the drug ring away without a hitch. So it would be better if there was help.

Theodore went to the hospital first and then returned with two sets of clothes, a nurse's uniform and a doctor's. Hannah and Jimmy changed into them.

Getting out of the car, they walked into the hospital with heads held high. And they stopped at the traumatology department.

Seeing these strange faces, a nurse behind the nurse's desk came up to ask. Theodore walked over and took advantage of the nurse's inattention to give her a shot to the back of her neck.

“Half an hour coma.” Theodore reminded Hannah as he dragged the nurse to the nurse's desk to hide. Hannah should stand in place of the nurse. In other words, if they didn't return in half an hour, she should go first.

Theodore and Jimmy walked straight to the ICU. Two policemen were standing at the entrance, guarding. To be exact, they might be protecting the one in there.

So far, all the news had only released the explosion of the fireworks factory and not a word about drugs was in it. Maybe they just wanted to keep it down. And the only people who knew the truth were Thoth and Oscar. Once they were silenced, the problem was solved.

“What are you doing here?” A cop asked when he saw Theodore and Jimmy.

“Again?” The policeman suspected their motives because Theodore had been here before and doctors must have come too.

“The leader said that this patient needs to be taken care of carefully with no single mistake, so we must make sure nothing goes wrong.” Theodore said without batting an eyelid.

The policeman scanned Theodore for any sign of lying. But Theodore looked pretty calm.

Then the policeman seemed to be convinced, “Fine. Check it out carefully. If anything happens, we are all to blame!”

“Don't worry.” Theodore said.

Just when he was about to take Jimmy with him, “Wait,” the policeman stopped him suddenly.

There was a moment when his previous calm gave away to dread. Theodore turned his head.

“You just go in alone, he'll stay outside.” The policeman was wary after all.

Theodore did not insist. “You wait here.” He said to Jimmy.

Theodore went over alone. At this moment, two police officers were standing outside, watching Theodore.

It looked like Theodore was giving Jason a checkup, professionally.

Out of the corner of his eye, Theodore glanced at the policemen on guard from time to time. Given the current situation, it was impossible to take Jason away under the noses of these two policemen, and if he did anything rash, all the policemen in the building would come. It would be easy for him to get away alone, but with Jason, he was not quite sure.

Just when Theodore was getting a little cranky, suddenly he saw Hannah in nurse uniform standing outside, wearing a mask.

The policeman saw Hannah and said, “What are you doing? Don't you know you can't come here without permission?”

“I’m here for my boyfriend.” Hannah replied, looking innocent.

“Who’s your boyfriend?” The policeman’s face darkened.

“He.” Hannah pointed at Jimmy.

Wearing a mask, Jimmy got his face red instantly. Before the cops spoke again, Hannah had run next to Jimmy, pulling his hand, “It’s dark outside and I’m afraid of being alone. Didn’t you promise to be with me?”

Completely confused, Jimmy couldn’t be more awkward and just let Hannah drag him away. Then Hannah took Jimmy to a corner, quietly.

Seeming hidden, but in fact, it was just within the sight of the two policemen.

Hannah whispered to Jimmy, “Just follow my lead.”

Jimmy was completely muddled, only to find Hannah standing on her tiptoes and moving closer to his face. Touching Jimmy’s face, her hands blocked their mouths.

It looked like a kiss. The two were just close together, actually, even with their masks on.

“Undress me.” Hannah said.

Jimmy was stunned by her words.

“Hurry up.” Hannah urged, “And be careful, don’t get the bulletproof vest spotted.”

Jimmy gritted his teeth. Still following Hannah’s instructions, he untied her uniform and the bulletproof vest, wrapped them down together, and removed her top below those smooth shoulders.

“Damn.” Not far away, the two policemen were attracted by that. They thought the doctor and nurse were too bold.

‘Isn’t it neglect of duty?’

‘She is hot...’

The two of them were completely captivated by the action of Hannah and Jimmy.

Then at the next second, when they were out watching, Theodore made them pass out instantly by giving them a shot each.

Once they fell, Hannah and Jimmy walked to the ward hurriedly. Jimmy helped Theodore take Jason away, who had also been shot into a coma by Theodore. The whole process of taking Jason away was done without any letup and amazingly fast.

The drug ring probably never expected anyone to take Jason, so there were not so many precautions taken.

Back in the car, Jimmy drove away as fast as he could. Hannah was still in shock long after they left the hospital. Theodore took off the clothes and said to Hannah, heartily, “You’re way more useful than I thought.”

He had just come close to taking a desperate step. That was, to go straight out and have a fight. But to his surprise, Hannah was so resourceful that she bought him the best time. He just needed one chance to make it at that time, but never found the right moment.

Hannah took a deep breath which gradually calmed her down and she said, “Theodore, we can’t nail it by ourselves.”

Theodore frowned slightly.

“I mean, it won’t work if only we go after Oscar. None of us knows how many people this drug kingpin Oscar has gone after got, how dangerous he is. If we go, we might be useless and give away a few more lives.”

“What do you think?” Theodore asked.

He could basically trust her because of the wit she showed just now that she made a quick decision and helped him take Jason away in such a short time.

What's more, the woman that Oscar adored couldn't be empty-minded, could she?

"Because they're protected by the local government, we can't rely on the local police. However, we can borrow from the police of Kensbury City or even Northfield. As long as we expose that the fireworks factory in Langley Town is actually a hideout of the drug ring, more people would be dispatched to help, so that we're not on our own!"

"So you mean that we report it to the police of Kensbury City?"

"First, we must get evidence, cause it's an allegation for us now and it may backfire instead by the local police. So I want to stay here to find the evidence that Oscar hasn't gotten yet, while you and Jimmy take Jason to find Oscar."

Chapter 317 Danger (6) Out of the Woods

It took Theodore a few seconds to see her point.

"You mean, you came here for evidence?"

"Yes, that's it." Hannah nodded her head. "Now you go to find Oscar and I stay here to investigate the evidence. When all is done, I'll call the police in Kensbury City for assistance immediately. What you need to do is to protect yourselves. Trust me, I'll help you out."

Theodore hesitated.

He pondered for a while. "Fine. You stay here with Jimmy, and I go to find Oscar."

"No, it's only me here."

"No way!" said Theodore.

"Listen, Theodore. They haven't noticed me right now because no one expects we would look for the evidence, and that's also why we succeed in taking Jason away. Things are easier for me now. But your task is nothing simple like this. Your task is to find out the brain behind and that is full of danger. How could it be possible for you to control Jason while driving alone? You must be assisted by someone else."

"Oscar wouldn't allow me to leave you alone." Theodore was sure of this.

"It's not leaving me alone. I have my plan. Theodore, I'm not with Oscar because I want to take any advantage, instead, what I want is to help each other when in need. Trust me, I can protect myself and help you out."

Theodore didn't respond.

Say no more, Hannah said to Jimmy. "Pull over here."

Jimmy was waiting for a sign from Theodore. But Theodore still did not give any response.

"Theodore, you don't want the one with Oscar to be a good-for-nothing woman, do you?" Hannah was asking him seriously. Hannah knew Theodore had huge respect for Oscar. Or never would he follow all of his arrangements. Accordingly, Theodore would never want a burdensome woman to be Oscar's lover. He believed, Oscar deserved a competent partner, to back him up.

Theodore agreed. "Okay, you stay here for evidence and assistance. But Hannah, remember, take good care of yourself. Your life matters most at any time."

"I see."

Jimmy pulled over and Hannah went out. Theodore turned his head and took a look at Hannah, then called Jimmy to drive away.

To him, Oscar was more important than anyone and anything. His actions would follow the instructions of Oscar first.

Hopefully, Hannah was not as weak as they thought.

After they left, Hannah went back to the hotel they stayed. They hadn't checked out yet so she could directly go into the room.

She was wondering how to find the evidence.

'Was everything in the factory burnt in ashes in the fire? Did Oscar succeed in getting the evidence?

Where did he put it then?' Hannah thought a lot, hence she was sleepless.

However, due to this, she was aware of the footsteps from outside. She was startled.

Someone was coming for her. Hannah didn't hesitate, and she opened the window and climbed out.

Clutching the window tightly, she kept herself hung outside of the room. It was not a big hotel and Hannah's room was on the third floor. She comforted herself that she would not die even if she fell. Her hands kept grabbing the window tightly.

All of a sudden, the door was kicked down.

Hannah held her breath. The room was full of the sound of footsteps, and it seemed that there were more than one person. They walked around in search of someone. Around 5 minutes later, a strange voice came. "They didn't check out, and no suitcase here. They might have left here."

Hannah could not hear what the man on the phone was saying. Later, she felt they had left the room, and, only silence reigned.

Gritting her teeth, she was trying to climb back to the room by her arms but failed. She was not strong enough to do so.

Was it the only choice to jump down?

She checked around. It was risky to jump from here to the ground and it was possible to get hurt and even die. Hannah felt she could not take it anymore.

All at once, the window downstairs was opened. Hannah didn't think twice, she shouted at her, "Help, help!"

A woman was probably shocked by her sudden voice but it took her some time to look out the window and find Hannah.

"How come you are there?" She was apparently scared.

"It's hard to explain in just a few words. Ma'am, would you please pull me up? My room should not be locked. I cannot hold on to it anymore."

"Girl, give me a moment." The woman called her husband immediately. "Hurry up! Let's go upstairs."

Not for a while, Hannah heard another sound from the room. Then, a couple came to the window and pulled her up together. Hannah was soaked in the horror sweat. She could have died if she was not lucky enough.

The woman was still a little shaken up. "How could you get there?"

"I had a quarrel with my husband and he wanted to beat me, so I ran out. But he found me. I was so scared that I hurried to climb out of the window." Hannah made an excuse. "Anyway, thank you for the help tonight."

"Should I call the police?" Asked the woman, looking concerned.

Hannah shook her head immediately. "No. I'm going to leave here for Kensbury City. He won't be able to find me there."

"All right." The woman didn't ask more. "It's good to know you are safe. We'll be back to our room then."

"Okay. Thank you a lot, really."

"That's nothing, you're welcome."

The couple left. Following their leave, Hannah also left instantly. She knew that she had been targeted by them. Now this put her in a terrible position and she was running out of her time.

Hannah rushed to the fireworks factory immediately. She called a taxi for it was a bit far from here.

The cab driver was shocked when he heard the destination and asked her, "Why are you heading there alone at such a late time? Don't you know there was an explosion days ago?"

"My husband was once working there. He died in the explosion, so I want to go to see the place he worked for the last time."

"The past has gone. Nothing will change." Said the driver.

"For better or worse, I have to go."

The driver shook his head and said nothing. He thought Hannah could not face the truth. Hannah did not say anything more either.

Oscar might have sneezed for many times as she kept speaking negatively about him today, Hannah supposed.

Chapter 318 Danger (7) Finding Evidence

The car arrived at the fireworks factory. The driver asked for confirmation a few times, and Hannah answered with certainty that this was the place. Only then did the driver drive away.

Hannah turned on the flashlight on her phone and walked in with help of the light.

The building in front of her was in ruins. Obviously, it had undergone a terrible fire. Basically speaking, only the frame of the whole factory remained. Hannah went in carefully.

It was past eleven o'clock in the evening.

The fireworks factory was located in kind of a remote rural area and was a little far away from the downtown. In such a dark night, it was gloomy and somewhat terrifying.

The thought of fear was more than she could handle. Besides, there were so many people losing their lives here today. Thinking of this, Hannah couldn't help but quiver. But she still forced herself to enter the factory and started to examine it as carefully as she could.

She thought that since it had been a drug trafficking base, there would be some clues left. However, it was too dark in the factory and the light of the flashlight was limited, so she could not see everything clearly enough.

Keeping a power bank, she still worried that her phone would run out of battery sooner or later if she continued to use her phone like this.

After a moment of hesitation, she decided to stay in this place for the night and search for what she wanted the next day. Having made up her mind, she found a rather clean place and sat down.

Since she had nothing to do, the surroundings became eerily silent, which made her feel afraid.

Sometimes one was easily spooked by one's own imagination.

Hannah gritted her teeth and comforted herself with the thought that it would be fine as long as she held on for a few hours.

Over the past night, she had been sitting there all the time.

Finally, it was dawn. Hannah couldn't sleep a wink all night. She was also afraid that she might catch a cold if she slept here. When she saw dawn break, she moved her stiff body and got up, then she started doing her work in the factory.

She was very careful about the search. However, unexpectedly, everything was cleaner than she had imagined. Someone must have cleaned the scene beforehand.

After all, a day had passed since the accident. There was enough time to erase the evidence at the same time as the rescue operation was carried out.

Hannah was a little discouraged. She thought that all efforts might be in vain while Oscar was risking his life.

'But Oscar would not do anything he was not sure of. Could it be that he had already found the evidence and he just did not have time to expose it because of an emergency? If he had found the evidence, where would he keep it?' Hannah had a lot of questions.

She managed to calm herself down. And she remembered that Thoth said Oscar came here for evidence and he was discovered before he could send out the evidence. Then, someone exploded the bombs to destroy everything in the factory, including all the evidence. In such a short time, suppose that Oscar had collected the proof and hid it somewhere, where would he hide it? He couldn't have brought it with him since if anything went wrong, the truth would never come out. To be on the safe side, Oscar would not keep it with him.

Hannah suddenly quivered.

Ever since the explosion, Oscar's phone had been turned off. There was a possibility that Oscar turned off his phone because he was afraid that he would be located by someone. On the other hand, he might have possibly stored everything on his phone. After all, a phone was the best storage tool.

At the thought of this, Hannah shifted her attention to searching for a cell phone. She knew in her gut, if Oscar wanted to hide the evidence somewhere, the factory was the place. On the one hand, he did not have much time to take it out to some other places. On the other hand, the most dangerous place was the safest place. It would hardly occur to people that Oscar would leave the evidence at the scene. If that was the case, he would probably bury it underground. All she needed to do was to rummage through the ground.

It cost Hannah a long time to search every corner at the factory, from day to night. It was not as simple as she had thought.

Hannah was a little disappointed. After spending the whole day bending over and searching without a break, she was so tired that she could not straighten her back at all. She thought that her speculation was too idealistic. Nothing would happen in the way she imagined. Just when Hannah was about to give up, she suddenly spotted a small part of an object under a broken floor.

She hurriedly went over and removed the tiles, seeing a familiar black cell phone underneath. It was Oscar's.

Hannah felt excited at once. But she tried hard to conceal her excitement to act calm.

She sat on the ground and was about to turn it on.

"What a pity. It's all wrecked anyway."

Suddenly, there came a voice of a strange man. Hannah was startled. She held the phone tight and quickly hid behind the ruins, not daring to make any movements.

"Who knows how much we have lost?" Another man said angrily, "I told you not to buy shares in the first place. Getting a share of the net profit would be enough. But you were just so bold and insisted on buying shares. Now, it's great. I'm even losing my own money."

"Don't worry. As long as this thing is kept a secret, we will still have a chance to get everything back. Now, the most important thing is not to draw the attention of the police in Kensbury City to this matter. We can treat it as an accidental explosion at the fireworks factory and muddle through. After everything returns to normal, we can continue to make money!"

"I know it, but I heard that Oscar, the guy who is from the City Hall came here a few days ago, appears to be investigating this matter. It's said that he's chasing after Chester now!"

“If he could catch Chester, I’ll say he’s quite capable. But even if he did, he would just end up dead! You don’t have to worry. As long as he’s in here, he would not be able to escape me.”

“Have you dealt with his assistant, the guy called Thoth?”

“Yes, I have. I sent someone to throw him into the Blue River last night. He thought that he had helped me crack a big case. How stupid!”

“Don’t take it lightly. Last night, Jason was taken away and has not been found yet. What’s worse, the surveillance cameras had been tampered with. We have no idea who did it at all! I suspect it was Theodore and his people. But now we’ve lost track of them. Every time I think of this matter, I’m deeply troubled.”

“Take it easy. I’ve arranged for our guys to guard the way leading out of the town. They won’t be able to escape. Once they’re caught, they’ll be thrown into the Blue River.”

“Anyway, I lost too much money this time. You must compensate me later.”

“I will. You can count on it!” The man said, “All right, we can go now. We have done enough to keep up appearance here.”

The footsteps of those two gradually went away. Hannah’s heart was racing. She looked at the recording app on her phone and pushed stop with a trembling hand.

She was so careful in case the voice recording would suddenly disappear. After a long while, Hannah was finally certain that the recording had been successfully stored in the phone. Then, she let out a sigh of relief and turned on Oscar’s phone.

Chapter 319 Danger (8) Hannah’s Emergency

Hannah saw a picture of a child on the screen.

She felt puzzled for she never thought that Oscar was the kind of people who liked cute kids. But as she observed the picture, she found the child was so familiar.

Then it suddenly occurred to her that this was a picture of herself when she was a kid! Oscar used her childhood photo as a screensaver.

How did he get this photo?

She did not remember having seen this one before. Hannah’s mind was somewhat brought away. Oscar was exactly a guy who could easily distract others.

In such an emergency, she should not think of these irrelevant things after all. Then she concentrated her attention and thought about the password to unlock Oscar’s phone.

The first one came to her mind was “XX0202”. Luckily, Oscar had told her about his birthday that day. But, it was not the right password. Hannah thought about it again and then entered her birthday “XX0808”.

Entering the code numbers, her heartbeat somewhat quickened. However, a warning of “wrong password” appeared on the screen.

She had indeed thought too much. Oscar would not go so far as to use her birthday as the password of his phone. But except for their birthdays, she could not think of any other passwords.

She was wondering if the recording she got just now could serve as valid evidence. According to the laws in Northfield, recordings could not serve as an conclusive evidence. After all, there were plenty of voice changing software and voice actors. It was difficult to decide the legal credibility of the recordings.

On a second thought, Hannah entered “022088”, which was composed of their birthdays.

She did not expect much. But miraculously, the phone was successfully unlocked and she entered the home page. Hannah was stunned for two seconds.

She was kind of surprised by such a childish password, which also gave her a warm feeling.

Hannah took a deep breath and clicked the photo album.

After looking through the photos, she saw no suspicious photos. Instead, there were all her photos, some of which were her head shots; some were taken from a long distance; and some were taken when she had taken a shower and removed her makeup. One thing these photos had in common was that they were all taken secretly when she did not notice.

Some pictures were even ugly because of the angle. But Oscar kept all of them stored in his phone. Must he be so perverted? This guy had taken so many candid pictures of her, not to mention using her childhood photo as a screensaver. She would be deceiving herself if she still refused to believe that Oscar loved her.

Hannah kept her calmness and logged out of the photo album. After some thought, she clicked on his mailbox. The password was the same as that of the screensaver. She found quite a few photos in his network drive. Obviously, those were taken when the transaction took place in the fireworks factory. It was a drug transaction.

The pictures were very clear, on which there were both parties of the transaction that could be recognized at a glance.

Hannah was a little excited when seeing these and she was so surprised by Oscar. She was just hoping for the best, but she did not expect that Oscar succeeded in doing these things.

Now, she had these photos and the recording, which meant the evidence was pretty conclusive, for the fact that there was a drug trafficking base in this fireworks factory and the fact that the local forces were protecting a gang of drug dealers.

Hannah collected all the proof to one phone, and she picked up her phone and made a call to Manuel.

The call soon got through, "Hannah, I heard you've gone to Langley Town?"

"Yes." She did not ask how Manuel knew it. Anyway, he had a close relationship with Oscar. She had been used to it.

"Are you okay?" Manuel asked with concern.

"Don't worry. I'm all right. But I need your help in an important matter."

"Just tell me." Manuel felt her anxiety and didn't say any nonsense.

"I'll make it short. Oscar discovered a gang of drug dealers during his visit here. Now, the gang is being sheltered by the local forces, so we cannot bring these people to justice. So we need to count on the strength of the police in Kensbury City. I'll send the evidence to you right now, and I want you to call the police for me. It would be the best if you can find someone who has a relationship with the Balderston family. You know what I mean."

"I know." Manuel did not raise any questions.

"In addition, considering that the local forces here go so far, I'm worried they might have a backer in Kensbury City. To prevent the one in Kensbury from helping the local forces here, I suggest you make this matter public. Once it's exposed, they won't dare to take any action easily because of the fear of getting themselves into trouble. Only in this way can the police of Kensbury come over quickly to help." Hannah said, "We're now trapped here by the local forces. The longer we stay here, the easier it will be for us to be found. Once we're discovered, it'll be difficult for us to escape. So, we're counting on you."

"OK." Manuel agreed without any hesitation.

After explaining these things, Hannah hung up the phone and sent the evidence to Manuel.

At that time, the night had come. Only then did she realize that she hadn't eaten anything for a day.

After dealing with everything, Hannah felt extremely hungry.

When she was about to leave the factory, she suddenly froze.

A burst of rapid footsteps were coming towards her.

She was discovered! Hannah was frightened and she began to run the next second.

It was at night, so it was relatively easy to hide. Hannah ran out of the factory, went straight to the fields, and ran fast across the fields.

The people behind her kept chasing after her. Hannah was scared. And all of a sudden, she failed to pay attention and tumbled heavily into a deep ditch beside the field. After falling into the ditch, she did not have the time to stand up. She just took advantage of the darkness and hid in the ditch. Then she heard a burst of crazy footsteps running past the field above her head.

The moment when Hannah was a bit relieved, those people suddenly returned. They walked back and forth around her. Flashlight beams probed around her. Obviously, they were searching for her.

Hannah huddled in the ditch. She was so nervous that she felt that her heart almost jumped out of her chest. She repeatedly told herself to calm down.

In her last life, she died ten years later. In this life, it was impossible for her to die at the age of 22.

She trembled with nervousness. The guys did not leave, but they did not find her, either.

About five minutes passed like this. Suddenly, a man among those people entered a phone number.

Hannah's phone suddenly rang. To be precise, it was Oscar's phone rang and Hannah was holding onto it.

As soon as it rang, Hannah knew that she was doomed. She thought that she might be killed and buried in the next second.

Unfortunately, she was found in an instant. There were four guys in front of her pointing their guns at her. If she made any movements, she might be shot dead at once.

Sure enough, she was not as capable as she had thought. She finally became a drag on Oscar! Hannah was wondering if Oscar would be heartbroken after getting to know about her death.

Chapter 320 Danger (9) Her Savior

Hannah was not shot dead on the spot. She was bound by those men and was taken into a black car. At that time, her mouth was gagged with a cloth, so she could not make a sound.

In that quiet night, this poor town looked so solitary against the dark night where there was a crescent moon hanging ethereal. There was very little foot traffic.

Hannah did not have a clue where she would be taken to. Her heart was filled with extreme fear. It turned out that no matter how many times she had experienced death, she could not stay calm when facing death.

The bumpy car suddenly stopped. The halt of the car made Hannah's body tremble. Her fear was even more obvious.

She glared at the men in front of her with her eyes wide open. Since her mouth was stuffed with a cloth, she could not say a word, making it impossible for her to convey her thoughts. It was out of the question for her to escape by herself now.

Hannah got off the car while still being tied up. The somewhat familiar place made her stunned. If she remembered correctly, this was the place where she and Theodore saved Thoth last night.

She would be thrown into the Blue River too, she supposed. As Theodore had said, it was a common mean among those drug dealers.

It was indeed an undeniably great way to kill someone and cover the crime. Not a single bullet was needed, and not a single trace would be left behind. After the victims were tied up to stones and thrown into the river, it would never be discovered by others, unless the river dried up.

No one knew how many people had been drowned in Blue River and how many innocent souls had been buried in it.

The more Hannah thought about it, the more she hated these people.

Even fear was not as strong as the hatred. She had never thought that there would be such a dark side and such crimes at such a place. When she was thinking, she felt that a rock was being tied to her body. Hannah looked at the people in front of her. Their faces were cold and indifferent. It seemed that they had gotten used to it.

Was a human life nothing to them?

If she still had a chance to survive, she must bring these people to justice and give fair back to this place, she thought.

Hannah quivered with fear. She was rudely pushed to the bank of the river. Below the high dam, there was the gloomy river. Tonight, the moonlight was dim and the river sank in the dark. Hannah could only vaguely feel the tumbling rapids below. Once she was thrown down into the river, she might be immediately washed away.

Trembling all over, Hannah was immersed in all kinds of terror and terrible guesses.

Finally, she was flung into the river with violence. Those people were very strong, and she even did not have a chance to resist.

Her body was instantly entrapped in the water. Hannah could swim. But with a rock weighing hundred pounds, she could not get any chance to struggle. Her body was being dragged deeper and deeper into the river by the rock, sinking nonstop.

She held her breath, trying to prevent herself from choking on the water, and trying to find chances of survival. However, as she was sinking deeper, she gradually began to feel suffocated.

Suddenly, she felt sad. It was a kind of desire for life everyone would have before death. It was the longing dying people would have for their living loved ones in this world.

Hannah looked back at her whole life.

She was reborn, and her life was short.

She had enemies, but she had not finished taking revenge.

She had beloved older family members, but she had not fulfilled her filial duty to them.

As for beloved man, she had a beloved man, but she had not even told him that she loved him.

She had regrets.

Hannah gradually began to drift into unconsciousness.

The scene of her being stabbed to death in her former life seemingly appeared vividly before her at the moment. It turned out that the feelings of death were exactly the same.

Hannah became completely desperate. Then, she saw a figure swimming and rushing towards her.

Hannah, who was about to lose her consciousness, suddenly quivered and felt like she suddenly came to life in an instant again. She widened her eyes and watched the figure growing big before her eyes and getting closer to her. Soon, that figure came to her side. As he grabbed onto her body, he used the sharp dagger in his hand to cut off the rope binding her body. At the same time, the stone left her body.

Hannah felt much more relaxed at once. The next second, she frantically swam towards the surface of the water.

The man who saved her followed her and swam towards the surface of the water. He even lifted her body, so that she could swim faster.

Hannah breathed out with relief. Her head was finally out of the water. When she took the first breath, her eyes turned red. Hannah thought she was going to see God. Surprisingly, she survived. For the first time, she thought it very reasonable to say that the secret to longevity was to keep breathing. So she tried as hard as she could to breathe and tried as hard as she could to survive.

Suddenly, her body was dragged towards the river bank. Only then did Hannah realize that the man who saved her life was Oscar, who had been suddenly gone and then suddenly appeared and saved her life. Every time she was in danger, Oscar always appeared in front of her.

Her vision blurred. She just felt that happiness was so simple, but it was not easy to get. She reached out her hand and grabbed Oscar's clothes, tightly.

Oscar seemed to feel her fear and he carried Hannah to the bank. Theodore and Jimmy were waiting for them there. Seeing Hannah and Oscar appear from the water, they hurriedly helped them get ashore.

In the dead of night, a cold wind kicked up and brought a chill.

Hannah suddenly sneezed. When Theodore was hesitating whether he should put his dry clothes around Hannah's shoulder, he saw Oscar hold Hannah's hand and take her back into the car with a cold face.

Looking at his unhappy face, Theodore did not dare to speak to him at all. Jimmy was also afraid and dared not to say a word.

Seeing that Oscar and Hannah had gotten into the car, Jimmy had no idea whether he should get into the car. So he just looked at Theodore, seemingly asking for his opinion.

Theodore and Jimmy just stayed put.

Then they heard Oscar suppress his anger and say coldly, "Get in the car!"

Theodore immediately ran towards the car. Seeing Theodore run to the car, Jimmy hurriedly followed him. The two of them separately sat in the front seats. Jimmy started the car but he didn't know the destination.

Just now, he had just been told to come here and wait. Now, he did not have a clue where he should drive the car to.

"Drive back to Kensbury City." Said Oscar.

Jimmy could finally let out a sigh of relief and do his job. At this moment in the back seats, Oscar put a clean coat, which he put in the car before, around Hannah's shoulders. The same as Hannah, Oscar was drenched all over, but he did not take any measures to keep himself warm.

Theodore suddenly asked him, "Do you need a towel?"

Oscar just took a look at him, which made Theodore feel his hate and displeasure.

Oscar was very scary sometimes. Theodore felt that it was wrong for him to speak, no, even just to breathe! Anyway, he was not the one who made Oscar mad and it was Hannah who led to this, he complained to himself.
