

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1041

"Baby, listen to Mommy, you will only be with Malinda from now on, okay?" Emily touched his little face and said patiently, "People should be more constant. You can't like this person for a while and then another. It's not good."

"No," Kaden frowned. This expression was very similar to Vincent's frown, "They all want to be my girlfriend. I already told them to change next week."

Emily widened her eyes, "Them?"

"Yes, those girls," Kaden said with slight distress, "Girls are troublesome."

Emily didn't go on.

After returning to the room, Emily sat in front of the desk in a daze.

When Vincent came out of the study and saw her in a daze, Vincent couldn't help but ask, "What's wrong?"

Emily said with a blank look, "I think the child must have been carried wrongly."

Vincent, "What's mean?"

"Vincent, he is too fickle. He changes his girlfriend in a week!" Emily turned to Vincent, "One in a week! When he grows up, it will be one at a day! Do you not care about it?"

"He just hasn't met someone he likes," Vincent's lips curled into a smile.

"Oh, so you used to be one every week?" Emily squinted at Vincent.

Vincent pinched her chin and said, "I didn't have anyone in the past."

Emily snorted. Emily took out a pen and drew something to vent her anger. Then, Emily put the pen away and said, "No, I must go to their school tomorrow. I'll go see his ex-girlfriend," Emily couldn't help but hold her forehead, "ex-girlfriend! He had an ex-girlfriend at the age of three."

Polly did not transfer to a new school, she was just too sad for some time, and was just sent by her mother today.

Emily brought a consolation prize and apologized with all kinds of apologies.

Polly's mother was very knowledgeable.

Polly's mother said, "It's just a child game. Don't worry."

Emily replied, "My child is a bit naughty. He has made your child sad."

"It's okay. My daughter still likes your son a lot. She said that she wanted to compete with other students and then bring your son back," Polly's mother said with a smile.

Emily didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

Emily could not understand why so many girls liked Kaden, who was so shameless.

Could it be because Kaden was more good-looking?

In his kindergarten, only Kaden looked nobler. Kaden wore a small suit. Kaden was not very similar to other children. Kaden was too smart. Kaden saw that Vincent had dressed in a suit every day when Vincent went out. Kaden also demanded that he might wear the same clothes as Vincent.

In his kindergarten, Kaden was the most eye-catching.

Emily just smiled stiffly.

Emily thought that she might teach Kaden a lesson for being a playboy when got home!

Kaden was a smart kid. Kaden saw the look in Emily's eyes before Emily left. When Kaden went home, he deliberately made himself wet. Kaden looked at Emily with a pair of innocent eyes and said aggrievedly, "Mommy, I accidentally fell into the river. It's so cold."

Emily immediately forgot what happened during the day. Emily cooked ginger soup for Kaden, took him to the doctor, and accompanied him. When the child fell asleep, Emily exhaled and returned to her room.

After Emily finished washing up and went to bed, she suddenly remembered that there was no river on the way from home to school!

Concerns made bad!

Emily was fooled by Kaden again!

A new year came again, Emily raised her glass to Janessa and prayed devoutly, "I hope my son can be single-minded and not be fickle."

"I hope my son can be as fickle as your son," Janessa said, raising her glass to Emily.

Emily was speechless.

Levin was seven years old, but he didn't make any friends. It was said that because Levin was too poisonous, Levin was not likable, and Levin looked very ordinary. Levin did not have any relationships with girls at school, and boys felt that Levin was annoyed when Levin spoke. After a while, Levin was isolated.

Janessa bought a lot of snacks and bribed a group of little girls to play with Levin. But Levin said, "You study so badly that I don't want to play with you."

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1042

"Damn it! He deserves to be alone!" When Janessa mentioned Levin, she got furious. "I'd tried to buy off all the kids in the class, no, in the school, but no kid was willing to play with him! Then I asked him if the days of being isolated were bad. He said that it was okay because no one liked crap."

Emily, "...He described himself as crap?"

Janessa put down the wine glass, "Yes! Worse than crap! Last time, he described others as flowers that were not stained by mud, and he was mud."

Emily: "...Well, he's good with words."

"Believe me, Levin is not bad." Emma sat down with a glass of wine in her hand, "Bart...is much naughtier."

Emma sighed deeply.

Emily had heard that Bart had been fighting all the way from kindergarten to the second grade.

"Did Bart fight again?" Janessa and Emma clinked glasses.

Emma nodded and drank the wine before saying, "About fifteen fights a month."

Emily opened her mouth in shock, "Oh... kind of overwhelming."

Emma put down her wine glass and sighed again, "She beat her class teacher the day before yesterday."

Emily, " ... How old is her class teacher?"

"28 years old I guess. A man." Emma frowned, "When I was choosing the school, I heard that the class teacher had learned Taekwondo, so I thought it was okay to send Bart there. I also told the teacher that if Bart was disobedient, he could punish her."

"But I didn't expect him to be the one who got punished," Emma said.

Emily didn't know what to say.

"Bart is naughtier than a boy," Janessa laughed out loud.

Emily drank some wine and said, "With this comparison, I suddenly feel that Kaden is so cute."

"Stony is the most sensible one. I heard that he could help to do accounts, couldn't he?" Janessa tapped her glass and asked Emma.

Emma nodded.

Although Stony was only thirteen years old, ever since the kidnapping, he had been taken care of by Deon at the Alberton's. He was tutored by a private teacher to learn multiple skills.

He looked more and more like Jaquan, but his personality was exactly the same as Emma's, calm and methodical. Deon liked him very much. In the past, Deon thought highly of Korbin. But now, he decided to kick Korbin away so that Stony could inherit the Alberton family. However, Stony was not an Alberton.

At the thought of this, Deon wanted to kill Jaquan.

"When it comes to kids, I think Stephanie's daughter is the best one." Christy came over from the kitchen with the dessert. "Her daughter stays at home every day to study herbs with Mr. Spencer. Mr. Spencer is cultivating her. I guess the next Doctor Miracle will be her."

"Your kid is good too. Quiet and sensible," said Janessa.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1043

Everyone liked to go to Emily's home on the second day of the new year. There were a lot of people and the house was filled with laughter.

After drinking, Janessa saw Collin chatting with Jaquan. Janessa asked Emma, "Is Collin still single? What's wrong with them? Don't tell me Collin likes Jaquan!"

Emma thought of something and chuckled.

Janessa raised her eyebrows and asked, "What's wrong? Is there a story?" She was interested.

Emma put down her glass, looked at Jaquan, and said with a smile, "Collin once lied to Jaquan that he liked Jaquan. Jaquan didn't sleep well those days. On a certain weekend, he decided not to talk to Collin anymore but was scolded by Collin. Jaquan came back and told me that Collin lied to him."

"How stupid!" Janessa laughed aloud.

Christy and Stephanie also laughed happily.

Emily looked at Collin and asked with a smile, "Who do you love?"

Emma shook her head and said, "No one knows."

"Then, will he just stay single?" Stephanie asked.

Janessa, Emma, Emily, Christy, and Stephanie couldn't help but look at Collin.

Kaden was playing with Legos with Jacky. He heard the conversation. Then, he walked to Collin and looked at Collin up and down.

Collin and Jaquan were different. Jaquan looked like a playboy and his eyes were charming. Collin, on the other hand, was a gentleman. He wore a pair of glasses and looked reliable.

But...

They were also different in another way.

Kaden looked at Collin and asked, "Why are you still single, Mr. Collin?"

Collin didn't know how to answer.

Jaquan held back his laughter and said, "Kaden, don't talk about this."

Kaden didn't listen to Jaquan.

He looked at Collin and said, "You are not ugly, Mr. Collin. I can introduce a girlfriend to you."

Collin replied awkwardly, "Thank you. But there's no need."

"You are almost forty years old. If you don't hurry, you die lonely in the future, just like the guards!" Kaden pretended to be experienced and added, "If there are any difficulties, you can contact me. I can help you find a girlfriend."

The guards got hurt.

Collin said, " Okay. Thank you."

Kaden said shamelessly, "It's fine. I will make her like me. Girls will fall in love with me the minute they see my face."

Emily was shocked again.

She wanted to spank Vincent this time.

Although Kaden was very fickle and changed his girlfriend every week, he was excellent in all aspects, just like Vincent. When he was six years old, Kaden made his first money in stocks. While the other children were still learning how to count.

Kaden was smart, competitive, arrogant, and bossy. He would change his girlfriend once he was dissatisfied with her.

Emily hoped that the girls would break up with Kaden. But it surprised her that the girls were obsessed with Kaden. They even wanted to get back with Kaden after Kaden broke up with them.

Things changed at Collin's wedding.

It was the first time Emily saw the girl Collin loved. She was not very beautiful, but she had a different temperament. People would pay less attention to her face. And most importantly, her voice was sexy. When she spoke, everyone was intoxicated.

Kaden was bored and he was choosing a mango-flavored dessert. Vincent told him to take a mango-flavored cake for Emily when they went to a banquet.

Kaden wanted to pick up the mango-flavored cake, but someone else took it first.

Kaden looked up and saw a beautiful girl. She was about ten years old and was about the same age as Levin. Her hair was long. She was wearing a black dress. Unlike the other girls, she looked indifferent. She only looked at Kaden faintly and left with the mango-flavored cake.

Kaden stood there and thought to himself, "You have successfully attracted my attention, girl."

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1044

"Mommy, who is she?" Kaden walked up to Emily and asked.

"Who?" There were people everywhere, Emily looked up and did not find anyone special.

"The girl in the black dress," Kaden said, "She is beside Mr. Collin."

"That's his daughter," Emily smiled and said, "Let's go and say hello."

Kaden nodded.

Collin was talking to his daughter, Livia, "Isn't it fun here? Why don't you play with other children?"

Livia shook her head and said, "I'll stay here with you, dad."

Collin rubbed her hair happily. He wanted to kiss Livia but there were too many people.

Emily walked over with Kaden and said, "Kaden hasn't met your daughter yet, Collin."

"Right!" Collin patted Livia's shoulder and said, "Kaden, this is my daughter, Livia. Livia, this is your aunt, Emily. And this is her son, Kaden. He's three years younger, right? Is Kaden six?"

Kaden nodded and said suddenly, "It's fine. It's good to have a wife who is three years older."

Emily was shocked.

Was Kaden okay?

Collin laughed and realized that there was something wrong.

Kaden looked at Livia and said, "I like you. Be my girlfriend."

Emily was embarrassed.

She wanted someone to take Kaden away.

Livia looked at Kaden and said, "I don't like you."

Collin stroked Livia's head and said, "Well done!" He lowered his head and whispered, "He's fickle. Don't be fooled by him."

Livia nodded and whispered to Collin, "Don't worry, dad. I won't like him."

Kaden frowned and said, "What's wrong with you? I confessed. Why don't you like me?"

Livia ignored him and said to Collin, "Dad, I'll go to Mom."

"OK. Don't talk to strangers on the way," Collin warned.

But Kaden stayed single for a whole year. He skipped three grades in a row and got into the school Livia was in.

Emily did not want to go back to City Y, but Kaden was stubborn and wanted to go to the same school and the same class as Livia. Emily could only leave Kaden there alone.

When Emily sent Kaden to City Y, Kaden got off with his bag and wallet. And Emily said, "Take care, Kaden."

Then, the car left.

Kaden looked at the car and thought to himself, "Am I your son?"

Livia was not an ordinary girl. She was three years older. Perhaps she was used to meeting handsome boys. Or perhaps she had experienced far more than her peers. Kaden suddenly appeared in the class, but she did not notice him at all.

Kaden was the youngest in the class and was smart, so all the students were curious about him. And Kaden was handsome. Many students liked to play with him after class, except Livia.

A semester was over and Kaden came back. He complained to Emily, "Livia just ignored me."

Emily heaved a sigh of relief. "That's good."

Kaden was confused.

Emily drank some wine. In this way, it would not be awkward to meet Collin during the New Year. At least Kaden would not break up with Livia for the time being.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1045

She did not expect that Kaden would chase Livia for a long time.

Neither did she expect that Livia would reject Kaden for a long time.

It wasn't until the day Kaden came of age that Emily realized that Kaden hadn't had a girlfriend since he fell in love with Livia. That was when Emily was preparing for his adulthood ceremony.

Janessa and the others came over to chat with Emily after giving their gifts to Kaden.

"Hasn't Lord come yet?" Said Janessa.

"I didn't see her," Christy said as she scanned the surroundings.

"Where is her daughter?" Janessa smiled and asked.

Ever since Randy and Lord's son had been dressed up as a girl when he was a child, he had developed such a preference. Ever since he was six, he had started dressing up in girl's clothing. He had been locked up at home during festivals, but as long as he appeared, he would be dressed in girl's clothing.

It wasn't that there was a problem with his sexual preference, but that he felt that it was fun. When asked the reason, he said that girls enjoyed more benefits than boys.

Hearing the answer, Randy silently raised the keyboard in his hand and started typing again.

Everyone quickly changed the topic and talked about today's protagonist, Kaden.

"Kaden is still chasing Livia?" Janessa asked incredulously.

Emily nodded and asked hesitantly, "Do you think it's possible that they won't break up if they are ever together?"

"It is hard to say," Janessa analyzed, "He might enjoy the process. You can know that from his previous relationship. He would dump them as soon as the girls agree. He might grow interested in Livia because she keeps saying no. It gives him a sense of predateding. He must enjoy the process as he doesn't give up for all these years. It's better for Livia not to say yes."

"Better for what?" After Christy gave the gift to Kaden, she ran over to Emily and sat down. When she heard Janessa's analysis, she smiled and said, "Livia has dated three ex-boyfriends."

Emily was speechless.

Janessa let out a sound and said, "These three couldn't be compared to Kaden's ex-girls. Much more left behind."

"What you said does make sense," Emily said awkwardly.

"Your son hasn't gotten angry. I'm quite curious," Christy looked at Emily, "Kaden is very domineering. In the past, when his girlfriend spoke to someone else, he kicked the boys."

Emily nodded, "Yes, I also find it strange that he hasn't given up after more than ten years."

"I heard that Jaquan pursued Arabella for more than ten years. Don't worry. When he meets someone he likes in the future, he will naturally give up."

Livia glared at him, but her ears were extremely red.

Levin's voice came from not far away, "Kaden, can you do it? If you can, then hurry up."

"Damn it! Why are you rushing me?" Kaden roared behind him.

Livia suddenly laughed when she heard Kaden's angry words. She tried her best to suppress her laugh.

Kaden turned around and kissed her hard, "Wait for me tonight."

"Who's waiting for you?" Livia scoffed.

Kaden pinched her hard, "If you don't wait for me, I'll climb into your room tonight."

Livia reached out and hit him.

Kaden turned around and smiled at her.

Livia was wondering why he was so handsome.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1046

"Hey, can you calculate when he will get married?"

Doctor Green drove Collin and stopped in front of an old blind man who was fortune-telling.

The old blind man heard the voice and looked toward Collin. The old blind man's eyes were cloudy and nothing could be seen.

"Within three years," The old blind man asked about the birth characters, then made a calculation with his fingers.

Collin didn't show it on his face, but he scoffed in his heart.

"Where is his destined person?" asked Doctor Green.

The old blind pointed in a direction.

"Northwest?" asked Doctor Green.

The old blind nodded.

After returning to the hospital, Collin couldn't help but say, "He can't see at all. You rushed to talk about the northwest. Let me tell you, even if you said the southeast, he might nod."

"It's said to be very spiritual," Doctor Green stuffed a lucky charm that was bought from the old blind man into Collin's pocket, "Hurry up and put it on. It won't be long before you meet your fated person. You'll be in a relationship for two or three years, just about the time of your marriage."

Collin sighed and entered his office.

He sat in the office, opening the drawer.

Inside was the square electronic clock.

Collin twisted the time to eight, and a familiar muffled voice came from inside, "Doctor Mueller, it is now eight o'clock in the evening."

He put the clock back and closed the drawer.

This was the eighth year since Roxy had left.

When Collin got off work, he bought something and went home. The light bulb in his parents' home was broken and Collin changed the light bulb. His mother was busy in the kitchen. Seeing that he had changed the light bulb, Cora asked, "Are you eating here?"

Collin looked up and saw that Cora's hair was getting grey. He nodded.

At the dinner table, Cora no longer asked him when he would have a girlfriend and get married. She just reminded him, "Don't work too hard. Go out to play on the weekend. Don't stay at home alone."

Collin nodded.

After dinner, Cora looked at Collin and said, "Son, I don't know what you have experienced, but it is true that you have been unhappy for the past few years. If Mom had done something that made you unhappy before, you should forget it. Mom didn't mean to do it. Looking at you now, I don't feel good..."

In the end, there were tears in Cora's eyes, and she wiped them away in a hurry, "I'm sorry, son, I shouldn't have forced you too much before."

"I'm sorry, Mom. I made you worry. It's not your fault. It's my own problem. It's me... I made a mistake," Collin said as he went forward to hug Cora.

Mike was drinking tea when he heard Collin's words, "If you are wrong, think of a way to make up for it."

Collin nodded.

However, Collin was very depressed.

How could he make it up?

Collin had no idea where Roxy was.

When he returned to his residence in the evening, he smelled the pillow. It had been eight years, and the smell that belonged to Roxy on the pillow had been slowly diluted and could no longer be smelled.

In this house, the smell that belonged to Roxy disappeared little by little after she left.

Only the square electronic clock next to the bed made a hoarse and sexy voice at night.

"Doctor Mueller, it is midnight. It is time to sleep."

"Why do you suddenly want to go there?" Mike asked.

Collin was just about to say that Doctor Green believed in the fortune-teller. So Doctor Green took the initiative to register for Collin. Cora refuted, "Collin can go wherever he wants. You ask too much."

Mike shut up.

Cora hurriedly went to find some things for Collin to pack, and she sent him out after a few more reminders.

"Mom, I'm leaving," Collin hugged his mother before leaving.

Cora patted him on the shoulder and said, "Go. It's good to relax. You are busy working in the hospital every day, and you have lost a lot of weight. Go there and eat more," When it came to eating, she remembered that Collin went to the mountainous area and might not be able to eat anything delicious. Cora immediately became anxious, "Wait, I will cook something for you."

"Don't be. The food there is quite good," Collin stopped her and said something else before walking out with a bulging hiking bag in his arms.

When they got in the car the next day, Doctor Green looked at the huge backpack on Collin's back and asked curiously, "Is it all the food?"

Collin didn't sleep well all night. He threw his backpack to Doctor Green and took the lead to get in the car.

Doctor Green called his wife beside the car. He had married three years ago. The child was two years old. The child was very cute.

Collin leaned against the car window and watched Doctor Green hang up the phone with a smile. Then Collin gently closed his eyes.

When it was noon, the car stopped at the service area to rest for a while. They finally got to the destination at around eight o'clock at the night.

When Collin and the others got out of the car, they were all doing stretching exercises. They usually sat in the office. This time, they sat in the car for nearly eleven hours. All their muscles were almost numb.

The person in charge of the mountain area, the school principal, and the village chief were all at the intersection. As soon as Collin and the others got off the car, they came up to greet and shake hands with these new people enthusiastically.

The principal was a thin old man, his rough hands like cracked old tree barks.

The village chief was about fifty years old. He held his briefcase and did not speak much. The moment he opened his mouth, he spoke with a strong accent. Collin could not understand him. The principal could only speak lame Mandarin. It felt like a foreigner saying Mandarin.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1047

It was dark, and no one could see anything. The flashlight that someone used lit up people's faces. Collin did not wear glasses. He narrowed his eyes slightly and looked at the source of light. A little girl looked at him indifferently.

Her eyes made him slightly startled.

Soon, the child ran away.

"Let's go to our dormitory." The principal said as Collin tilted his head to take a look.

This remote school had a sanitation service station, but medical facilities, including medical personnel, were inadequate. Collin and his team's duty was to popularize the hygiene knowledge of residents in this mountain area, as well as the treatment of various simple diseases.

It was too late, and there was no light on the road. Everyone was tired and hungry. They followed behind the principal. They didn't walk for a long time but were tripped by stones. Some people had heavy luggage, dragging dust along the way. Everyone chatted in the dust, coughing as they talked.

After walking for about fifteen minutes, they finally arrived at a school.

It was better than they had imagined. At the very least, the school should have been newly built not long ago. It was still considered brand new, and the signs at the entrance were not painted. Collin carried a backpack and took a photo with a small flashlight.

"This place is a little stinky." Leon came over and pinched his nose, his tone a little muffled, "I'm about to faint from the smoke."

The principal actually heard his voice and smiled a little embarrassedly, "Well, we have a pig farm here. It's a little stinky. Sorry."

"It's fine. I've smelled a lot of different things in the hospital. I'm used to it," Leon said with a smile.

Everyone else laughed.

Collin took back his flashlight and followed everyone to the dormitory.

The so-called dormitory was about thirty square meters. It was full of bunk beds, which could be seen that it had been cleaned. They were clean, each layer covered with a plank and a quilt.

"This will be your room." The principal turned on the light. There was only a yellow light bulb in the room. It was not very bright. "As for water, it is available once a day, so it's all stored in the vat. If you want to use water, use the water in the vat. Don't waste it. The water in the vat can be drunk."

"You guys are drinking unboiled water?" Leon asked with his eyes wide open.

"Everyone drinks this way." the principal said, "We've all been drinking to this age, and we're not sick."

Leon gave him a thumbs-up in admiration. "You are healthy."

The principal laughed.

Collin put the hiking bag on the ground and began to pack up his luggage.

The principal pointed outside and said, "You guys pack up and come out for dinner."

Leon quickly thanked him.

As soon as the principal left, he collapsed on Collin's bed, "Oh my god, I can also smell the stench in this room. I can't take it anymore. I'm going to die."

"If you want to die outside, don't die on my bed." Collin placed the square electronic clock on the bed and pressed it under the pillow.

"Don't touch it!" Leon reached out to grab it but was slapped by Collin.

"Collin, you are really strange." Leon rubbed his hand that was hurting. "It's fine if you don't show it in the hospital, but why don't you show it to others when you bring it out?"

Leon went to Collin's office several times and could see this fellow sitting in front of his desk, holding the electronic clock very gently and putting it near his ear.

He was just a freak away from an examination report.

"Let's go and eat." Collin neatly put his shoes away and stood up.

Leon quickly put away his luggage next to Collin.

Although there were fifteen people, the others were not as experienced as Collin and Leon. They did not dare to get too close to Collin. They were like students who were afraid of meeting teachers and were respectful outside. This was the first time they were so close to each other. They lived in the same room. Everyone found a bed far away from Collin and arranged it. When they passed by Collin and Leon, they all lowered their heads slightly and said, "We go out first."

After Collin washed up, he was still talking about how bad the meat was.

At eleven o'clock, the lights were suddenly turned off.

Leon's phone was off. He asked Collin in the dark, "Why the electricity is off?"

Collin closed his eyes and said, "The principal said that there was a power outage at eleven o'clock at night. Didn't you hear it?"

"Fuck! I didn't hear it!" Leon held the charger, looking around blankly, "When the electricity is available tomorrow?"

"No electricity in the day." Collin took out the blindfold and put it on. "Electricity is available from six to eleven o'clock in the evening."

Leon, "..."

Life in the poor mountainous area had just begun.

Leon sadly washed his feet with cold water under the moonlight and then rushed into the bed.

Collin, who was in the neighboring bed, was playing with his phone. He looked over and was immediately shocked. "Your fucking phone is full of electricity?"

"Yes. It was charged before dinner," said Collin.

"Why didn't you remind me?" Leon asked angrily.

"I did it on purpose." Collin put down his phone and closed the blindfold again.

Leon, "..."

This guy deserved to be single!

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1048

Collin woke up before six the next morning.

Before the others got up, he went outside to wash, changed into a white coat, and got familiar with the area.

The principal got up early and cleaned up. There were four classrooms divided into four grades. There was a sign hanging at each door with the name of the grade.

Every blackboard was clean, but the tables and benches were messy. Many benches were long stools, which could involve three people.

After cleaning the classroom, the principal greeted Collin, "You're up so early?"

Collin nodded.

The principal took Collin to breakfast.

The breakfast included porridge cooked in a large pot with a little rice and a lot of water, one steamed bun, and one bottle of homemade chili sauce. However, everyone could only share a little bit.

Collin brought something to eat in his backpack, but he tasted the principal's homemade chili sauce under the invitation of the principal. The taste was much better than the stewed meat last night.

When it was almost half past seven, other doctors started to get up one after another. After putting on the white coats and having breakfast, they discussed it briefly at the temporary meeting place.

They were going to teach basic hygiene knowledge.

However, though the village chief informed the public through the loudspeaker, not many people came to the school. The principal suggested that Collin and the others should visit from house to house and see if people were sick or explain and ask people to come to school.

The principal and the village chief should be responsible for it, but it was obvious that the education here had broken off from society and no one wanted to come to learn. The principal and the village chief were at their wit's end.

Leon agreed. He couldn't stay in school all the time.

After getting a list from the village chief, Collin divided it according to the route, "Two people in a group. Divide into six groups. One more person will be in the sixth group."

The extra person joined group six.

Other doctors were afraid that they would be assigned to the group of Collin and Leon. After the division, other doctors were overjoyed.

Collin and Leon walked out of the school and lit a cigarette.

"It's a hard job. There are so many people here." Leon looked at the list.

"You should be glad that I don't kill you to vent my anger." Collin gently lit the cigarette in his hand.

Leon took a puff of his cigarette. "F*ck, why don't you kill me? What did we have in the morning? I should have brought a basket of eggs."

"Get to work." Collin took the list and took the lead to the first family on their list.

They were thinking about whether the villagers trusted them or not. Only when they knocked on the door did they change their minds. The real question was that they could not understand the dialect.

"Auntie, we are doctors. We teach hygiene for free in school. If someone in your family is sick, you can ask us."

The forty-year-old aunt's face was old. Her skin was the same color as a brown horse. She looked at Collin and Leon with a guarded gaze. After speaking, she closed the door.

Collin drew a cross on the first line of the list.

"Let's go to the next one."

Leon sighed, "It's over. I feel that it will be even harder."

The second one was an old man with his back hunched as he chopped firewood. He listened to Leon, but he couldn't understand what Leon was saying. Leon wanted to leave, but the old man stopped him and asked him to sit down.

"He hasn't met anyone in a long time and he wants to talk with you." Collin patted Leon on the shoulder. "Stay here with him. I'll go to the next one."

"Yes." The little girl looked behind, probably not far ahead.

Collin followed her sight and said, "Tell them to come to school for class. We will teach general hygiene tomorrow. If someone is sick at home, we can treat her for free, and the medicine is free."

"Can you cure a mute?" The little girl asked.

"Mute?" Collin asked, "Is it congenital mute or postnatal?"

"What does that mean?" The little girl was puzzled.

Collin smiled. "Tell him to come to school tomorrow. Is he your father?"

"No." The little girl shook her head and said, "It's an uncle who treats me very well."

That would be her father's brother.

"You can bring him to me tomorrow. Look for Dr. Mueller," Collin said.

"Okay." The little girl nodded.

"What's your name?" Collin asked.

"Livia." The little girl smiled, "Uncle, you look more handsome than those uncles."

"You peeped at us last night?" Collin couldn't help but laugh.

Livia smiled embarrassedly and ran back home with her bag.

Collin smiled gently.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1049

"What are you looking at?" Leon put his hand on Collin's shoulder breathlessly. "I was so tired. Seeing that I was about to leave, the old man blocked the door with the table. I was scared. I almost died inside."

"Then how did you come out?" Collin asked.

Leon let out a long sigh of relief and pointed to the room, "Climb the wall."

Collin shrugged.

The wall was not high, not even two meters.

They had the same pork that was not finished last night for lunch. Collin applied for the principal's homemade chili sauce.

Then all the doctors discussed in the dormitory about going out to buy something else to eat. Apart from a full cart of medicine, they only had some medical books.

The villagers here couldn't speak Mandarin, let alone read.

The newcomers unexpectedly found some people who promised to come to class tomorrow. As seniors, Collin and Leon were stressed and decided to drag a family to class tomorrow at all costs.

Thus, Collin and Leon set off with confidence in the afternoon.

Collin gave up after knocking on the door.

He smoked and leaned against a tree tiredly. "Go ahead. I will give up."

Leon refused to give up and knocked on the door. Then he shouted to Collin, "Hey! What is he doing? Is he dumb?"

Collin looked up. A short man stood at the door. He looked a little scary. His entire head seemed to be scorched. His face was covered by his long hair. One of his eyes was good and the other was blind, tightly closed.

He stood at the door and shouted something, gesturing with his hands.

"Hello, are you Livia's uncle?" Collin thought of the little girl and asked.

The mute seemed to understand and point in a direction.

It was the direction of the school.

Yes, the little girl went to school every day.

"Open your mouth and let me see." Collin stepped forward and opened his mouth to signal.

Mike took a step back and misunderstood what Collin wanted to do.

"Let's go to school tomorrow. We'll have class." Collin said to Mike.

"Will he come tomorrow?" After walking to the next house, Leon asked.

"I don't know. Maybe." Collin said meaninglessly, "It is too closed and the news is blocked. Education can't keep up. The environment..."

He glanced around. Life trash was everywhere.

It was fortunate that the little girl said that casually throwing trash was not allowed.

It seemed that the little girl had a good education.

"What's wrong with the environment? Is it great?" Leon poked the cigarette butt on the tree, "It is like a primeval forest. I saw someone peeing in front of the tree in the morning."

Collin looked at the tree and moved to the side with a frown.

"Not this one. But it should be the same." Leon shrugged.

Collin looked at the watch, "Let's go to the next one."

Fortunately, they did not give up. When they walked down, they found that many young people could speak Mandarin. Most of them were women. All the men went out to work to make a living. The women liked to gather at one person's house almost every day to chat. When Collin and Leon walked over, the women blushed.

"Let's go." Leon took out a cigarette and lit it for himself and for Collin. "The mute is strange. He is so ugly, but someone wants him."

Collin answered casually.

The voice reminded him of Roxy.

Too much time had driven him crazy.

"Is the mute literate? There is such a big desk in the yard," Leon said.

"A desk?" Collin thought of Livia and smiled, "It should be that little girl's desk."

"It's strange. This little girl's surname is Copley. Why is Nunn on the list?" Leon said vaguely as he smoked.

Collin didn't mind when he saw Livia running home with her bag. Many children chased her and shouted, "Mute Nunn! Mute Nunn! Mute Nunn's little mute!"

Collin stopped and frowned deeply.

Livia saw Collin and Leon, but she didn't say hello and ran straight out.

When seeing the doctors standing here, the children stuck out their tongues and ran away.

Leon said with disgust, "These children are lacking in manners. Their faces are so dark."

Collin agreed, "Livia should have a good education. Yesterday, she even reminded me not to throw trash everywhere."

"Education? She seems to be from a single-parent family." Leon thought.

"What?" Collin looked back. Livia had run away. He turned around and asked, "Where is her father?"

"How would I know?" Leon shrugged.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1050

"Mute Nunn! Mute Nunn! There's a little mute behind him!"

A group of children chased after Livia.

Today was the fifth day that Collin had arrived here.

Collin had just come out of school to smoke. Then, he heard the voices and saw Livia. Livia was walking quietly. It seemed that she could not hear the annoying voices behind her. She was still wearing a black dress with braids.

Collin noticed that her black dress was different from the one she wore yesterday. He even just found out that she wore a different black dress every time, but no one noticed.

Collin found that Livia was wearing a different black dress today because the skirt was embroidered with a small Pikachu. The color of Pikachu was very bright.

When the children saw Collin, they immediately pretended to be good.

When they walked past Collin, they were suddenly stopped by him.

These children were all very young and of different ages. They were dressed in rags and their faces were dirty, while Livia was clean and beautiful.

"You shouldn't bully her." Collin stopped these children. He glanced at every child, but the children were afraid to look at him. "Boys should be gentle and polite, and shouldn't bully girls. If you do this, you will be unable to find wives."

These children looked at each other and did not dare to refute.

Livia walked forward without looking back. Then, she suddenly looked back and saw Collin was still preaching to the children. Collin took something out of his pocket and gave it to the children. The children became very happy and ignored Livia.

"I'll show you something fun after class." Collin patted the dirt off one of the boys and warned, "Don't bully girls, ok?"

"Yes!" These children responded.

Leon lit a cigarette and said, "What are you doing? Are you cottoning up these children? It's time for dinner. Your favorite dish."

Collin sighed. He grew tired of the same food. The food was awful and he could only eat it with chili sauce, but his stomach couldn't stand it.

Collin frowned slightly. "I have some chocolate left to eat, so I won't have lunch."

"Why didn't you tell me you had chocolate? Give me some chocolate. I won't have lunch either!"

Collin refused, "Sorry, I don't have enough chocolate, because I have just given it to those children."

Collin had a piece of chocolate left and wanted to give it to Livia.

Livia was good and polite. Collin liked her very much.

"No!" Leon said in despair.

"Hold on, there are twenty-five days left," Collin said with a smile.

When Leon heard this, he was even more desperate.

Finally, Collin went to lunch and Davin warmly invited him to dinner. Over the past few days, people have come over to consult their disease one after another. Collin and the others were very busy every day. They explained the symptoms and distributed medicine to everyone. And they needed to register.

Davin thought that anyone who spread knowledge was a teacher, so he called Collin Doctor Mueller at first, but after a few days, he called Collin Mr. Mueller.

"There are four classes here, but why are there only three teachers?" Collin asked.

"I remembered! Her name is Roxy Copper!" Davin slapped his thigh.

"I'm done." Collin drank some water.

Collin walked out and habitually took out a cigarette. He smoked heavily these past few years. He seldom smoked when he was busy. But when he came here, he was very free, so he often smoked.

Livia came from a distance with a schoolbag on her back. Collin saw her and waved to her.

"Thank you." Livia ran to Collin and panted.

Collin knew Livia was talking about what happened this morning. He smiled and gave her a piece of chocolate. "Do you want chocolate?"

Livia shook her head.

"No, thank you."

"Children should like chocolate very much." Collin was puzzled and said half squatting.

Collin looked at Livia closely and felt that her eyes were familiar. 'Maybe because she is too good and clever.'

"I've eaten it." Livia was puzzled. Few people squat down and talk to her except her mom and uncle. She suddenly had a good opinion of him. "My mother said that there are many temptations, but as long as you have tasted them, you will not be interested in them. I have tasted chocolate, thank you."

Collin became more curious about Livia's mother. "Your mother must be well educated, and she is your good 'teacher' ."

"No, my mother didn't go to college. She often told me that knowledge can change one's fate, so she hoped I could study hard. I'm going to class. Goodbye." Then Livia waved at Collin.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1051

Livia, in Grade 4, seemed to be seven or eight years old.

Collin suddenly remembered something and said to Livia, "They told me that the teacher has taken a leave of absence."

"Yes, she is also my mother," Livia answered.

"Your mother?" Collin asked. He was surprised at first but also thought it reasonable. "Why didn't you stay home to take care of her?" Collin asked.

"She often says that students shouldn't skip classes even if teachers don't come," Livia said solemnly.

Collin suddenly laughed out and said, "Your mother is strict!" Collin thought for a long time but could only remember how Davin described Livia's mother.

As Livia turned around and was about to leave, Collin thought of the dumb person. "Why didn't your uncle come here with you? He doesn't need to pay for my treatment," Collin asked.

"He was too stubborn. Anyway, he is an adult, and he can make the decision by himself," Livia answered. Although Livia was still young, she talked like an adult.

Collin was speechless.

Davin blew his horn as if it was the school bell. Every day, Davin blew it under the sun on time. Hearing that, the students went to the classroom one by one.

Collin fetched some medicine. Seeing Leon was taking a nap, he told Leon that he would leave the school for a while. Then Collin went to Livia's home alone.

The door of Livia's home was not tightly closed, so Collin pushed it open without much effort.

Noticing nobody was in the courtyard, Collin should leave there immediately. However, Collin didn't leave immediately after being surprised by the tidiness of the courtyard. It was rare to see such a clean courtyard elsewhere.

There were a swing and a desk under the tree. Collin saw the dumb person carry some wooden boards several days ago. Collin also noticed two new small wooden stools beside the table. He guessed a couple would sit on the stools to supervise learning when their kid sat between them.

But that didn't make sense.

Livia lived with only her mother.

As Collin got lost in thought, he suddenly heard the sound of water splashing.

Collin thought maybe the dumb person was in the room.

"Hello?" Collin asked as he walked into the kitchen by following the sound. The door was closed, so he knocked on it and said, "Hello? I am a doctor. I came here before."

The water suddenly stopped splashing.

He felt it strange because he did hear the sound in the kitchen.

He tried to push the door, but suddenly a woman shouted, "Don't come in!"

The woman spoke Mandarin with correct pronunciation, but her voice was quite hoarse.

Collin's hair stood on end after he heard her voice.

Collin thought, 'Did I hear it wrong?

Could this woman be her?'

Collin stared at the door for a while and pushed it open.

The woman had her back to Collin. She probably was taking a shower since she fumbled with her clothes. Collin was also shocked to see her back.

Collin instinctively turned around and apologized, "I'm sorry, I..."

He suddenly stopped speaking.

Slowly, Collin turned around again.

The woman still had her back to Collin even if she got dressed.

There was only one woman whose body Collin could be so familiar with that he could recognize the woman from a glimpse of her back. That woman was Roxy.

Collin knew the shape of her back well, especially when she was topless.

Collin liked to appreciate her back as he held her hands behind her back. Her neck raised high. Helplessly, she was unable to grab anything with her hands.

"Why don't you turn around?" Collin asked with his eyes fixed on her hair coiled up with a pen.

The woman picked up the towel, wiped her neck and face, and took off her wet clothes. Probably she didn't wipe off the water on her body, and her clothes turned wet.

Could it be possible that...

Could it be possible that I'm the father of her child?'

Roxanne just raised her head to look at Collin. In the past eight years, her gaze was inane and calm, but her voice was sexily attractive as always.

She entered her room.

Collin followed her.

Collin wondered, 'Her child! Livia!

Am I her father?'

The moment Collin closed the door, he asked, "Livia! Is she my daughter?"

Roxanne sat down and poured herself a cup of water. Then she looked at Collin indifferently and asked, "If she is your daughter, what will you do? Do you want to go to law and take her from me?"

Collin was stunned.

He had never thought things would be so complicated when they met again.

"Why didn't you tell me that?" Collin asked. If he had known she was pregnant, Collin would have ignored all the objections, asked her to be his wife, and taken good care of Livia.

Then they could avoid confrontation.

However, they were sitting face to face.

Between them was a large gap. After living separately for eight years, they acted like strangers.

"Why didn't I tell you that? Well, Doctor Mueller, I have never hidden it from you. But at that time, I wanted to leave you. Do you want to know why?" Roxanne asked after putting the cup down.

Collin was stunned.

"Because you asked me to leave. You told me you were going to get married," Roxanne said clearly while looking into Collin's eyes.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1052

"Hey, Collin, what happened to you?" Leon asked after finishing the phone call with his wife. Noticing that Collin had been sitting on the bed for an hour, Leon said, "Are you not going to wash up? The lights are going out very soon!"

Collin remained motionless, like a stone statue.

"Tell me! What happened?" Leon asked again. With no response, Leon stood up and asked the newcomer, "Do you know what happened to him?"

The newcomer replied nervously, "No! I don't."

"He only went to visit the dumb person this afternoon. What happened? Did the dumb person beat him?" Leon murmured to himself.

Collin suddenly raised his head.

Shocked by Collin, Leon asked, "What are you doing? Did the dumb person hit you?"

"Livia is a beautiful girl. Don't you think so?" Collin suddenly asked.

Frightened, Collin said, "Collin, let me tell you something. Yes, she is beautiful, but she is too young to be your wife. Abandon that thought. There are so many grown women out there. You shouldn't have such perverted ideas. Ouch! That hurts!"

Collin withdrew his hand used to pinch Leon's arm and said, "Are you crazy? She is my daughter."

"Oh, I see." Leon rubbed his arm and sat back on the edge of his bed. Just as he sat down, he suddenly jumped up and shouted, "What? What the hell did you say? Who is your daughter?"

All the people in the dormitory were shocked by the news.

The newcomers showed great interest in the news.

Leon covered his mouth with his hands and quietly approached Collin. "Are you kidding? How can you have a daughter before having a wife? Besides, she is already a big girl. Why? Did her parents ask you to raise her? Be careful! You are a rich bachelor, but if you raise her, it would be more difficult for you to get a wife," Leon said.

"I also found my wife here," Collin said. Remembering something, he suddenly frowned.

Leon looked out of the window like a creepy guy and said, "You are so weird! Is there anything to do with your desire for women? I heard that those ghost stories often happen in distant mountains. A beautiful woman often appeared on the road where men were walking. Don't be fooled! The beautiful woman is a fox spirit that sucks men's blood! Are you okay? Did the women suck your blood?"

Collin glanced at Collin and said, "Shut up and leave me alone!"

Leon sighed and sat next to Collin. "You've been in this dull environment for too long, and it is not strange if you had that kind of illusion. Don't worry! I'll introduce more women to you when we get home," Leon comforted Collin.

Collin didn't say anything. Instead, he suddenly jumped up and opened his backpack, looking for something.

"What are you looking for?" Leon asked.

"Livia! Don't forget to lock the door! You did not do that yesterday," Roxanne said.

"That is impossible! I locked it yesterday. It must be my uncle who did not lock it," Livia said naughtily. It was easy to tell that she was bullying the dumb person who could not defend himself.

The dumb person tried to explain with nonsense.

Roxanne pretended to be angry and said, "No matter who didn't lock the door, both of you should remember to do that today."

Standing at the entrance, Collin thought Roxanne wanted to stop him from entering the house again.

Soon, Livia walked out of the house first.

Collin looked at the child with red eyes.

When he returned to the dormitory last night, Collin lost his mind and thus missed the time the school let out the students. When he remembered to pick up Livia at school, it was dark.

Collin indeed held back his feelings the entire night. He was afraid of scaring Livia, but he really wanted to hug her, especially when he knew the truth and found there was an uncommon likeness between Livia and him.

"Mr. Collin! Good morning!" Livia greeted him and walked away with her backpack.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1053

Collin followed her.

"You live in the dormitory. Why are you here?" Livia asked when she saw that he had followed her.

Livia also had a child's curiosity, but if Collin didn't follow, she would never ask.

Livia had the same indifferent personality as her mother.

"The air here is fresh. I came out to take a walk." Collin rubbed his eyes. He was getting older, and when he saw his daughter, he wanted to cry.

Collin never knew he had a daughter.

Collin and Roxanne had a daughter.

This child was very beautiful, and Roxanne had taught her well and everything was good. It was just that Collin had never known of her existence.

"Where is your father?" Collin asked softly.

Livia slowed down and turned around to ask, "Why are you asking? Did you hear what they said?"

Collin thought, "They?"

"Has there been a lot of people talking about them behind their backs?"

Collin was speechless.

"I have no father. I live with my mother, Mike. The three of us live together," Livia said. She had lost her childishness a long time ago.

Collin knew it.

Collin found out when he entered the courtyard yesterday.

Mike Nunn lived in a small wooden shed. He had a quilt in there. Everything was very tidy, and there was a book at the bedside. Collin didn't know if it was Roxanne's, or Roxanne gave it to him, or ... Roxanne read to him every day.

Collin wanted to know a lot of things. How did Roxanne give birth to a child by herself, did she get bullied, did she ... did she ... suffer... did she secretly cry?

Collin's eyes were red.

A pregnant woman showed here with the villagers gossiping behind her back and giving birth to a daughter without a father.

It was probably the first time Livia talked about this topic with someone. Livia thought for a long time before saying, "Mike is our savior. Although the villagers say that he is my father, he is not. Mike is very good to me. If possible, I am willing to call him father, but he doesn't want me to. Every time I call him, he will cry in fear."

Mike felt that he wasn't worthy of Roxanne, so he was naturally overwhelmed. Or perhaps it was because he was unable to even make a sound, he desired but also feared to be treated like that.

"Mr. Collin, can Mike talk in the future? Mom said he could talk before," Livia suddenly asked.

"In the past? What happened?" Collin looked up at the sky and forced his tears back.

Livia thought for a moment and said, "There was a fire. Mike saved my mother. I wasn't even born then."

"Fire?" Collin recalled that Roxanne did not have any scars on her back, and what about the front? He did not see if she was injured.

Finally, Collin stepped on a piece of wood, and as soon as he poked his head out of the wall, he met Roxanne in the courtyard.

Roxanne was speechless

"Open the door for me," Collin waved his hand and said.

Roxanne looked down and continued to read.

As expected, the swing was made for her. And she was sitting on it, holding a book in her hand, and watching him climb over the wall.

"Roxanne!" Collin could not hold on. He could not climb the wall at all, and the leather shoes restricted his performance.

Roxanne walked over with a book, looked at him over the wall, and said, "Dr. Mueller, what can I do for you?"

It was that tone again.

She was like this every time. Collin didn't know how he could have stood that before.

Because, when Collin heard her cold tone now, he only felt that all the blood in his body was boiling up, and he was angry.

Collin said, "Open it."

Roxanne said indifferently, "If you have something to say, say it here. The door is locked, and I can't open it."

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1054

Collin was so angry that he almost couldn't speak. "We... We're talking like this?"

Roxanne said, "So, let's cut to the chase." Roxanne held the book and was about to head back.

The wooden plank under Collin's feet was only enough for one foot. At this moment, he staggered to one side, and he jumped to one side.

Collin wanted to go up again. After thinking for a while, he went out a little further. He found a few stones and piled them under the wall. This time, it was a little higher. Collin put his hands on the wall, and he kicked hard against the wall with his leather shoes. Then he was on the wall.

Roxanne, who was sitting on the swing, only looked up when she heard something, and then she continued reading.

Collin looked at the courtyard next door and suddenly said, "Roxanne, someone saw me."

Roxanne was speechless.

"Dr. Mueller, what are you trying to do?" Roxanne asked as she walked over.

Collin pretended to jump down, but Roxanne stopped him and said, "You'll break your leg."

Collin said, "It's better this way." In that case, he could stay here.

Collin smiled.

Roxanne moved the stool over, and Collin stepped on the stool to get down.

As soon as Collin stepped onto the ground, he held her in his arms.

There were many things he wanted to say, but at this moment, all he wanted to do was hold her tightly.

"Are you hurt?" Collin touched her arm. He knew that many years had passed, but he still wanted to know, "Are you hurt anywhere?"

Obviously, what Collin wanted to say more was that it must be very hard to take care of a child alone.

At the time when Jaquan's daughter was just born, he could not sleep even at two or three o'clock in the morning, because he was either feeding the baby or changing diapers, or the child was crying, and he was comforting her.

Jaquan said that when Emma gave birth to Stony, he did not participate, so every day after his daughter was born, he accompanied her, which was a kind of compensation.

Collin was unable to imagine that sort of suffering, and he was unable to imagine exactly how much Roxanne had suffered for the sake of his child.

Collin was so surprised yesterday that he forgot to tell her that he was sorry. Collin now said, "I'm sorry... I'm sorry..."

Roxanne said, "There's nothing to be sorry about. It was my choice, and it had nothing to do with you." Roxanne pushed him away, and she was always calm.

"It had nothing to do with me?" Collin asked with his eyes red.

Roxanne nodded.

"The child is mine. How can it have nothing to do with me?" Collin pointed at her heart. "You care about me. Otherwise, you wouldn't have given birth to my child!"

Roxanne looked at him in silence.

Collin noticed something from looking into her eyes.

It was clear that Collin cared about her.

But...

Roxanne didn't.

Collin lowered his head to kiss her, and only when they kissed would make him have the illusion that Roxanne loved him very much.

Roxanne struggled to push him away, and then she slapped his face.

Roxanne was still not angry. She looked at him calmly and said, "If you want women, go and look for them. I am not someone you can sleep with just because you want to."

Collin wanted to kiss her and Roxanne wanted to turn away. When she saw that face, she suddenly stopped.

Collin lowered his head and kissed her. He said, "I have been looking for you."

Roxanne felt some tears.

When Roxanne looked up, Collin had already left.

Mike nervously rushed in and gestured something.

Roxanne waved her hand and said, "It's fine."

Mike gave out a lot of gestures.

Mike asked Roxanne why she didn't drive him away, why she put a stool under the wall, and whether she liked him or not.

Rozanne looked at Mike for a while.

Then Roxanne finally answered, "He is Livia's father."

Mike was completely shocked.

Mike didn't even know how to make hand gestures and fell unsteadily onto the threshold.

"Are you leaving?" He gestured and asked.

Roxanne did not answer.

The only thing left in her mind was Collin's face with tears when he kissed her.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1055

Collin ran to Roxanne's house one time after another. Leon thought that he was crazy. He actually started to make friends with the "mother-in-law" in advance!

In order to effectively stop Collin's abnormal behavior, when Collin visited Roxanne's house again, Leon quietly followed him.

It was around ten in the morning, but the smell of food was already coming from Roxanne's house.

Mike was sawing wood at home. Collin walked in and up to him. Collin said, "Open your mouth."

Ever since Mike found out that this person was Livia's father, Mike listened to him.

He obediently opened his mouth and allowed Collin to pick up a pen and lightning to shine it at his throat.

In the past few days, Collin had come over to give Mike a check-up. In fact, he had almost finished it on the first day, but he was just coming up with excuses. Sometimes, Collin forgot to bring his laptop. Sometimes, he forgot his glasses and couldn't see clearly.

In short, every time Collin went over, he would stay until noon. Mike would invite him to sit down and have lunch together, and Collin really stayed to eat.

Livia thought it was strange at first, but when she heard that Mike agreed to let Collin check on him, she dispelled her confusion.

"How did he get hurt?" Collin asked a few questions every time he came over.

Mike of course couldn't answer these questions, so Collin had to ask Roxanne.

Roxanne always spoke with no expression. She answered, "He was smashed by the beam of the house that was on fire, and the charcoal that was on fire entered his mouth. When he was rescued, he was unable to speak anymore."

Collin nodded.

Mike had missed the best treatment time, so there was no cure.

The burnt areas in his throat had grown together. Even if there was an operation, there was not much hope of being cured. There were also other risks from the operation.

Roxanne said, "If there he can't be cured, just say it." Then she walked into the bedroom. She had a computer inside, and even though she couldn't connect to the Internet, she was always writing something.

Collin followed her into the room and sat beside her.

Many years ago, when Collin's wrist was broken, she was the same.

Roxanne only took care of him when he was eating, and she did her own things at other times. Collin couldn't move his hand, so he accompanied her. Sometimes he watched her play games, sometimes he hugged her and they watched TV together, and sometimes he accompanied her to admire the starry sky.

Tonight ... Collin didn't want to go back.

Collin wanted to see if these habits of hers had changed.

"Dr. Mueller!" The voice of Leon came from the door.

Collin frowned in frustration and wonder why he was there?

Roxanne turned around and said, "Your colleague is looking for you."

"Then what are you doing?" Leon was confused.

Collin said, "He likes it. I'm giving it to him." Collin turned around to face Mike, but his eyes were looking at Roxanne in the room.

Leon said, "That watch is worth more than 200 grand. This Mike likes it, and you just gave it to him?" Leon showed the watch on his wrist to Mike and moved closer to him. Leon said, "Hey, what do you think of my watch? Give me your watch and I'll give you mine. My watch is better..."

Mike was flattered and waved his hand repeatedly.

"Why are you here?" Collin pulled Leon out.

"I just want to see why you are here all day. Isn't that watch of yours..." Before Leon could finish his words, he saw a woman walk out of the room. Roxanne saw that Mike was so anxious that he was about to cry. She walked out, took the watch, and skillfully put it on the Mike.

Mike's entire arm stiffened, and he was making some sounds as he was overwhelmed with fear.

Roxanne said with a rare smile, "He gave it to you, so you should keep it,"

It was rare for Leon to meet a rather beautiful woman here. When Leon recalled that this person was Livia's mother, Ms. Roxy, who didn't want a salary, his admiration for Roxanne grew deeper. He took the initiative to extend his hand over and said, "Ms. Roxy, right? Nice to meet you."

Roxanne glanced at him and said, "Hello."

Collin kept Leon's hand away from Roxanne.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1056

Leon suddenly remembered that people here were not used to shaking hands, so he withdrew his hand. He stared at Roxanne's face, saying, "You look very familiar. Have we met before?"

Collin thought, 'Of course, you have met me. It was you who asked for the phone number.'

Roxanne smiled slightly. Collin didn't know if Roxanne remembered Leon, but Roxanne smiled at Leon more times than at him, which made him a little unhappy.

In the end, Leon stayed for lunch and asked Roxanne shamelessly after dinner, "Ms. Roxy, can I come to eat tomorrow? The food you cook is the best I've ever tasted. When I came here for the first time, I ate the dish at the school canteen. It made me sick and I almost vomited to death that night. If you don't believe it, ask Doctor Mueller about it!"

"Really?" Roxanne laughed.

For the first time, Collin noticed that Roxanne had other expressions, such as a smile, in front of outsiders when they exaggerated something.

"Of course, it's true!" Leon took a sip of water. "Even the water here tastes better than that at school. Can I bring some when I leave?"

Collin couldn't stand it anymore, "You..."

"Sure." Roxanne stood up and walked into the living room. She then brought over a large glass cup that looked like a fish tank. "But we have no bottles here. Take this when you leave."

"Thank you. It's so kind of you!" Leon said happily.

He walked out with a glass in his arms, "Thanks for everything today. Let's get going."

"Well, I'll leave later," Collin said, still standing there.

"It can't be. Will there be dessert?" Leon asked, his eyes lit up.

Collin felt speechless.

He held Leon's collar and brought him to the door and said, "No, there's nothing to eat. Please leave here now. I have something to talk to Roxanne in private."

"Fine." Leon left.

Livia stood up to help clean up the dining table. Seeing that Collin had returned, she asked, "Mr. Collin, is there anything else?"

Mike stretched out his hand to make a gesture but was hit by Roxanne. He withdrew his hand and looked at Roxanne, feeling a little scared.

"Mom, why did you beat him?" Livia asked in confusion.

"There is a mosquito," Roxanne answered, carrying the dishes to the kitchen, expressionlessly.

Livia was there, so Collin didn't dare do anything excessive. He followed behind Roxanne and said, "I'll help you."

He squeezed into the kitchen, which was not big, but every corner was clean and tidy. The bowls and dishes were all kept in the cabinet. These cabinets must have been personally made by Mike and looked very new.

"What do you have to say? Say it." Roxanne put the bowl into the basin that washed the bowl and turned to look at Collin.

Collin glanced outside the door, and when he was sure that Livia wasn't looking over there, he silently moved closer to Roxanne. He pulled her to a position no one could see behind the door, pinched her chin, and kissed her.

He did that for several days. The kisses often came out of the blue, sometimes it happened in the room, in the courtyard, or in the kitchen.

He then gestured to Roxanne as if asking if Collin kissed her."

As soon as his thumb met, Roxanne, blushed and threw the towel on his face, saying, "Don't tell anyone about it!"

Mike had a silly grin on his face.

At the other place.

Because Collin had eaten a few meals at Roxanne's place, it looked like he was familiar with Livia. When Livia came out with her bag, he took her bag naturally.

"I'll take it for you."

"No need." Livia took the bag into her hand again and continued, "My mom told me not to trouble an outsider."

Collin thought, 'I'm your father, not an outsider.'

He stood there and did not say it out.

Livia had already walked forward. She was a quiet girl. She would not run unless she was chased by those bad boys.

Collin remembered that when she first came here, she ran here. He thought, 'Was she bullied by those children at that time?'

"Mr. Collin, do you like my mom?" Livia suddenly asked, and the question shocked Collin. He did not expect such a young child to ask that.

"Yes." After thinking for a long time, he could only admit it generously.
"But she doesn't seem to like me."

"But I don't think she doesn't like you," Livia said like an adult.

"Why do you say that?"

"If she hated you, she wouldn't let you in and cook for you." Livia turned back to look at Collin and said, "If you can make my mother happy, I will agree to you two being together. If you can't, don't come here again."

Collin walked over, squatted down, looked at her eyes, and said, "I swear, I swear on my life, from now on, I will let you live a stable life. I will make her happy, and also give you a happier life."

"Me? Will you treat me well too? I'm not your child." Livia pointed at herself.

Collin raised his hand and touched her face. He wanted to say that you were my daughter. But he was worried that it would scare her. So Collin did not say anything.

"Mr. Collin, what happened to you?" Livia looked at him suspiciously.

Collin shook his head. "Let's go to school."

Livia waved at him.

After Collin saw her walk into the school, he turned around and walked toward Roxanne's house again.

When he reached the door, he found that the door was locked again.

He knocked on the door and no one answered.

Collin climbed to the wall and saw that Mike was sawing wood.

"If you were inside, then who locked that door?" Collin asked curiously.

Who else could lock it?

He did not lock the door when he came out with Livia, so it was locked by someone who came out after them.

Mike was in the room, so it was Roxanne who came out.

Collin walked around but did not find anyone. It was almost dark. Leon called everyone to have a meeting. Everyone had to report the situation of these residents to the chief.

Collin heard and walked over.

When he passed by the door of Roxanne's house, he climbed the wall again to see inside. At this glance, he saw Roxanne sitting on the swing.

Collin finally understood.

He stood against the wall. Not long after, Mike climbed over the wall, took out his key, and was about to unlock it when he looked up and saw Collin.

They looked at each other.

"She asked you to do this?" Collin stared at the lock in Mike's hand.

Mike opened his mouth and wanted to say something.

Collin hinted at him for being quiet. He took Mike's key and opened the lock. Then Collin threw the lock back to Mike and stuffed the key into his pocket.

Though they lived on the mountain, it was not as scary as living on the mountain top.

There were many wooden houses built on flat terrain. They lived next to each other. Because they had not moved for generations, they were even more backward than people living at the foot of the mountain. Because their children did not go to school.

It was more difficult to communicate with these villagers. Collin was too tired to speak and listened to newcomers knocking on the door and communicating. He was responsible for explaining on the back.

After a whole day, these newcomers were exhausted that they fell asleep as they lay on the bed.

Collin rushed to Roxanne's house after he put down his bag. He didn't even take a shower.

At night, the door was locked from the inside.

Collin stood at the door and smoked. Leaning against the tree, he did nothing but look at the door in front of him.

When it was almost twelve o'clock, Leon called. Collin said a few words, crushed the cigarette, turned around, and left.

Collin didn't know that there was someone behind the door.

After he left, the person behind the door also walked into the room.

"Mom, did you go out?" Livia asked.

Roxanne went into her bed. "No. I went to check if the door was locked. Good night."

Livia nodded in a daze.

Billionaire's Reborn Baby novel Chapter 1058

"That woman is really familiar. Where on earth have I seen it before? Why can't I remember?" Leon thought.

Collin didn't want to respond as he lay on the bed.

He went to the mountains. When he came back, he had no strength. Five newcomers went, and all of them passed away. Davin said that the place was strange, so basically no one dared to go.

Collin wanted to curse, but he couldn't.

After lying on the bed for two days, he wanted to get up. As soon as his feet stepped on the ground, he fell. He was carried to the bed by Leon and fell asleep in a daze.

Six doctors got ill at once, and it must be a joke.

Davin came to see him a few times and comforted him, leaving a bag of cooked red eggs.

"Ah, open your mouth." Leon peeled one and handed it to Collin.

Collin reached out to take it, and suddenly asked, "Is it hard to eat eggs here?"

"Yes, do you want to eat it? If you don't, give it to me. There are only six eggs," Leon said with a little jealousy, "He is indeed here to comfort you."

Collin didn't eat and held the egg in his hand. "No," he said.

He got up again to put on his clothes. He still had a headache, and his limbs were weak. Trembling, he fastened his white coat.

"What? You can't even stand properly and you still want to see a doctor?" Leon supported him.

Collin removed his white coat.

Leon could not help but reach out and touch Collin's forehead. "Doctor Mueller, do you lose your mind? Do you remember who I am?"

Collin slapped his hand away and said, "Find me that suit."

"It's almost nighttime. Are you still going out?" Leon was puzzled, "Still wearing a suit? Are you fascinated by ghosts? Are you going to the mountains to find them?"

Collin didn't want to hear his nonsense, "I'll go find Roxanne."

"Who is Roxanne?" Leon asked.

"Suit," Collin frowned.

"If you don't tell me, I won't give it to you."

"..."

Enduring it, Collin suppressed his frustration and said, "The woman you find familiar, her name is Roxanne Copley... About ten years ago, in a coffee shop, you asked me to ask for her number. In the end, she took out a dumbphone. I wonder if you have any impression of her. In short, I hit on a woman for the first time because of you. And that woman is her."

Leon's mouth slowly opened wide, "Oh my gosh!"

He remembered!

He quickly found the suit that Collin wanted and quickly changed it for him. "So, you don't like her, but your mother-in-law?"

Collin said, "..."

"Oh, I'm wrong," Leon said, patting his mouth.

Collin placed the peeled egg on the table and put a new egg in his pocket.

Leon came to a sudden realization. "You're taking it to..."

It was definitely not for Roxanne, and it ought to be for her daughter.

"Why did she come here?" Leon was very curious. "And she even had a child here." He thought about it and suddenly remembered something. "No, why did you like her? Didn't you..."

"The child is mine." Collin managed to shut Leon's mouth with one sentence.

Until he put on his shoes and walked out the door, Leon did not come to his senses.

She sat on the bed in a daze, his gaze still unfocused.

Collin had been lying down for two whole days, and he wanted to see Roxanne every night, but she would not come to school. She had taken a month off, so during this period of time in school, he could not see her at all.

Collin nodded. "Do you like it?" he asked in a weak voice.

Livia nodded. "I like it. This is a gift you made with your heart. I like it."

This child, so he liked this kind of gift.

Collin had an idea in his heart.

Livia! Roxanne shouted in the room, "Finish the meal."

"It's here! Mr. Collin, have you had your meal?" Livia asked Collin.

Collin was a little tired. "No, I'll be leaving soon."

"Oh, then goodbye." Livia walked home.

Collin looked down at the lighter on the ground, thought for a moment, and then looked down to pick it up.

In that instant, he felt his head spinning.

When Livia heard the noise, she turned around and had a look. She was so scared that the egg in her hand was almost crushed. "Mom! Mr. Collin fell down!"

Collin fell to the ground. He was in unawareness.

He knew that he was being helped up, and someone was carrying him. It was Mike. He smelled the scent of plants on his body.

Someone was talking. His mind was buzzing and he couldn't hear anything clearly.

With a towel on his face, he opened his eyes in a daze, and when he saw it was Roxanne, he vaguely said something, but even he himself didn't know what he had said. And he held her hand and refused to let go.

He occupied Roxanne's bed, and Roxanne could only sleep on Livia's bed. They shared the room. Livia's bed was slightly smaller, but it was sufficient for two people to sleep on.

"Mom, Mr. Collin didn't have to come here so late at night to give me eggs, did you?" Livia asked softly.

"I don't know," Roxanne replied indifferently.

"He definitely wants to see you." Livia turned to face Roxanne, but the lights in the room had gone out and nothing could be seen, "Mom, don't you like him? Mr. Collin is better looking than the other uncles."

"Just so-so." Roxanne said, "If you go outside, you will know that many people outside are more handsome than him."

Livia seemed to be convinced, "I see." Thinking of something, she added, "But Mr. Collin, he swore to be good to you."

"When a man likes you, he can say anything sweet. If he doesn't like you, he will leave you ruthlessly, so don't have to care too much about those florid speeches, because they are all fake. He may say the same to other women." Roxanne closed her eyes. Her voice was hoarse and a little lazy.

"Is that so?" Livia was once again convinced.

After a few minutes of silence, she asked again, "What if Mr. Collin always comes to find you?"

"How long has it been?" Roxanne asked, "In this lifetime, the average lifespan of a person is sixty or seventy years. Will he do it until he dies? He doesn't know what the future is, so there's no need to take a man's promises and oaths seriously."

"Mom, I won't easily believe what other men say to me in the future," Livia said with a nod.

"Livia." Roxanne touched her face, "In the future, when you meet someone you like, you can boldly chase him. You don't have to be afraid of getting hurt, because people always have to experience it. After you experience what is pain, you will cherish the person you love."

"I don't want to experience it. If it's painful, I don't want to experience it," Livia shook her head.

"Silly child." Roxanne muttered, "I hope that the boys you meet in the future will show their hearts to you from the beginning, and you don't have to wait too long..."

Livia seemed to understand.

From the beginning to showing the heart?

Did Mother know Mr. Collin before? Why did she say it like that?

There was already the sound of even breathing in her ears. Roxanne had fallen asleep.

Livia lay on the bed and swore to herself that even if she met a man who was even more handsome than Mr. Collin, and he swore to her, she would not believe him.

For a lifetime.

Mother was right, as everyone did not know what was going on, so how could they make such a guarantee?

Not reliable.

Livia closed her eyes and went to sleep sweetly.

When Collin woke up, he felt numb all over. He tried to move and found that his forehead was in great pain. He frowned and hissed.

Footsteps came from the door. It was Roxanne that walked in with a towel.

"Are you awake?"

Collin wanted to speak, but his throat was sore.

Roxanne handed him a towel.

Collin looked at her.

"Are you waiting for me to wipe it for you?" As soon as Roxanne finished speaking, she looked at his body, "Can't you move?"

In fact, he could move, much better than yesterday.

However, Collin pretended to be paralyzed. His voice was very hoarse, "Yes."

Roxanne wiped his face with a towel.

Collin uttered the voice of a dying old man, "Water..."

"What happened to your throat?" Roxanne was stunned.

She went to pour water and helped Collin to feed him. Then, she wiped his mouth. "How was it?"

Collin was so happy but he still pretended to be in pain, "Uncomfortable..."

"Where?" Roxanne raised his hand to touch his head, "You hit a rock here, and the swelling hasn't subsided yet. Where else does your body hurt?"

She reached out to his knees and legs.

Collin almost turned on.

"Is there any food?" He asked on and off.

Roxanne went out to bring breakfast, a bowl of porridge, and a fried egg.

Wasn't it said that it was difficult to get eggs?

Collin looked at the egg and sank into thought.

Collin looked at her calmly. "Before they come over, do you wish us to... face to face?"

Roxanne let out a breath, went out for a while, washed the towel, and passed it to him.

"I can't take it," Collin refused.

Roxanne wiped hard in return.

Then she helped him put on his pants and dragged him out.

"I have a headache and want to lie down for a while." Seeing that Roxanne was going to drag him to the yard, Collin frowned and said with a painful expression, "Go to bed."

Roxanne had to resign and dragged Collin onto the bed.

When they got to the bed, she pushed him hard on the bed.

Unexpectedly, Collin still held her and directly pulled her, and they fell on the bed together.

By the time Roxanne reacted, Collin had already pressed down on her and kissed her.

"Mueller..."

She couldn't make a sound.

Collin took off her clothes quickly, unlike a completely paralyzed patient.

A sound came from outside the door, but they both had feelings.

"Doctor Mueller," Roxanne gasped for breath.

He did not care.

"Collin!" Roxanne shouted.

Collin stopped.

"Go back." Roxanne tidied herself up and got up to look at him, and her eyes were hollow with no emotion, "Return to where you come from."

Like a bucket of cold water being poured over his head, Collin's enthusiasm was completely extinguished.

"Doctor Mueller, you can leave yourself. Didn't you say that you can't move?"

When Leon came over, Collin had already stood up. His head was lowered, and his forehead was a little swollen. When he came over, he looked as if he was lost his consciousness.

"What happened to him?" Leon noticed that something was wrong and looked at Roxanne, yet Roxanne didn't say anything and passed him directly. At that instant, an image flashed past Leon's mind, and he pointed at Roxanne's back. "I ... I seem to have seen her somewhere else..."

Collin crossed the threshold and said expressionlessly, "Let's go."

After walking out, Leon lit a cigarette and handed it to Collin, "Do you want one?"

Collin took a breath and looked back at Roxanne's home before stepping forward.

"I thought the two of you had sex last night. What happened? The atmosphere was not quite right just now. I dare not to make a sound... What happened between the two of you?" Leon asked as he looked at Collin.

"We lived together for a while. Later, I told her that I was going to get married, so she left. She left for so many years and raised her child alone." Collin took a drag on his cigarette and coughed. "She said that I asked her to leave."

"You're so wicked! Why did you chase her away" As an outsider Leon was angry when he heard this. "She had slept with you for so long without a decent reason. You didn't give her anything. After you got married, you chased her away. No one would be able to accept it. But now that you have found her with a child. So now you want to be a father. No way!"

"What should I do?" Collin stopped.

"What to do? Kneel and kowtow to her. Then beg her for forgiveness." Leon touched his chin.

Collin, "..."

"I was just joking. Let me think about it. What should we do?" Leon coughed.

Collin did not speak. After he finished smoking, he touched his swollen forehead covered with gauze. It should have been bandaged by her. Unfortunately, he fell asleep at that time.

"Tell me, what happened just now?" Leon asked.

Collin recalled what Roxanne said earlier and raised his hand to rub his brows, "I kissed her, and then..."

"Well, you have thought on her. But she won't let you, right?" Leon asked.

Collin nodded.

Collin did not move.

"Let's go and have a good rest. We should make some changes in the plan." Leon pushed him forward.

"..."

"Why are you so excited?" Collin looked at him suspiciously.

"Is that so obvious?" Leon touched his gloating face, "I don't know. Even the first time I found out that you fell in love, I feel so pleased!"

Collin said, "..."

Collin did not rest much when he went back. Because he always went to Roxanne's house recently and he had taken a trip to the mountain, he had been lying in the dormitory for a few days. The hospital director called to tell him to well-behave with the newcomers. After all, the annual evaluation depended on volunteer teaching activities in these poor villages.

He was at ease in the school and had classes all day long for the students of Grade Four because Livia was at home.
