

Chapter 0010

Layla's POV

My father carried me to my room after that and I can't remember much of the rest of the night except for the pain I felt. I knew that the pain now was being caused by Lucas being with Brittany as I heard them tonight being louder than ever. It was apparent that he wanted me to hear everything that was going on between them like he deliberately wanted to hurt me. I took that as my cue to leave in the morning to head to Shadow Moon.

There was nothing left here at Moon Star pack for me. Lucas had made his choice clear with the sounds coming from Brittany next door and the pain that I was feeling within me from his actions. But for some reason the pain was more bearable and I knew it had something with me telling him to go and take Brittany as his mate. Maybe in not so many words that was my way of rejecting him as my mate and the Moon Goddess saw it that way too.

In the early hours of the morning before anyone woke from the aftermath of the ceremony, I made my way out of the packhouse and to the garage where I threw my bag that I packed in the trunk of my car and got into my car that Lucas had bought me and started the ignition and began to back the car out of the garage.

I took one last look towards the packhouse, the place I had called home my whole life. A tear began to slide down my cheek as I thought about leaving this life behind me and moving on somewhere else. After everything that happened last night and Lucas clearly choosing Brittany, there was no place here for me anymore.

Just when I went to turn my head to leave, I saw him. Lucas walked out the front door of the packhouse and stood there staring in my direction. As if I could feel his eyes on me, I felt pain reach the depths of my soul and my wolf let out a whimper of pain from our rejection from him. Closing my eyes, I took a deep breath and told myself that I had to do this. Turning my head back around, I put the car in drive and made my way down the lane leaving Moon Star in my rearview mirror until it disappeared from my sight. A series of howls filled the air and I knew it was Lucas but I had made up my mind I was leaving and it was best for both of us.

Shadow Moon was a few hours' drive from Moon Star and I was hoping to make it there before lunch. I had no clue what my plan was when I got there but I did know being the Alpha's daughter for the last eighteen years it was customary to announce my arrival on pack lands and to ask for permission to be there. So, my game plan was to go straight to the Alpha of Shadow Moon and seek his approval first. Hopefully he will be accommodating to my requests and I will be able to stay on his lands for as long as I need to get to know my real family if any of them are still alive within his pack.

I was grateful for the GPS in my car since I had never been this far from home before. I had to give out a chuckle as I thought that since Moon Star really wasn't my home, at least anymore. The GPS finally told me to turn left onto a lane and that I had reached my destination. As I turned onto the lane, my heart began to race as Shadow Moon's packhouse came into view and I was overwhelmed by the size of it compared to Moon Star's. I had always thought that our packhouse was grand but Shadow Moon's put Moon Star's to shame and I wondered if I would be greeted with open arms here or I would be sent on my way.
