Chapter 240

Chapter 240

As for wanting to impress Janice—no matter how he looked at him, Cynthia was far better than Janice in every aspect, and if he could win over Cynthia's heart, why would he settle for Janice?

"Who do you think you are? What makes you think I'd like to get to know you?" Cynthia scoffed. She was a spoiled, arrogant woman who did not give people the time of day, so how could one expect her to entertain Dominic's request?

"You..." Dominic froze when he heard this. He always regarded himself highly, so naturally, he would not take Cynthia's insult in stride. "Who the hell do you think you are? You're just this good-for-nothing tyke's girlfriend, so how dare you act like such a princess?"

"Fuck off!" Cynthia rolled her eyes and, without any warning, raised her arm and slapped Dominic across his cheek.

Smack-

The sound of skin-on-skin echoed around the room, and Dominic was so taken aback that he almost fell backward from the impact.

"You... How dare you slap me?" he shrieked in disbelief, holding his cheek.

"So what?" Cynthia snorted in disdain, staring at Dominic in her high and mighty manner.

Rage surged through Dominic's entire body. Even though he was never an advocate of violence—especially not toward women, the idea of being humiliated in front of all his friends angered him so much that he, too, raised his arm to slap Cynthia in retaliation.

Thud-

Before he could even do so, however, Cynthia lifted her leg and kicked him squarely in his chest.

Dominic's legs gave out beneath him, and the back of his head slammed against the wall behind him, drawing blood.

Cynthia was not someone to be underestimated; she was already annoyed enough by Dominic's flightiness, and now that Dominic almost hit her, she did not even wait until he got up before slapping him across his face once more.

Leon was appalled at this; He quickly stepped forward and stopped Cynthia before she could advance any further. "That's enough, Cynthia. He's my old classmate, after all, and he didn't mean to disrespect you. Please don't hold him accountable for this."

Dominic, however, did not appear to be grateful for Leon's help. Instead, when he reached out to wipe his forehead and found blood, he grew even more outraged. "You assholes! How dare you gang up against me like this!

"Just you wait—my cousin's the manager of this hotel, and I promise that neither of you will get out of this place unscathed!"

Dominic, still thinking that Cynthia and Leon were an item, automatically assumed the two of them were in this together.

"Oh, is that so? Well, let me see what that cousin of yours can do!" Cynthia's face was etched with malice, but because Leon was blocking her path, she did not try to attack Dominic any further.

"Just you wait!" Dominic let out an eerie smile and dialed a number on his phone.

Leon hesitated for a moment when he saw this.

After his last encounter with Cynthia, he knew what a feisty and hot-headed person she was, and Dominic was the one who would suffer greatly if he crossed her.

Because of this, he decided to step up and resolve this fight before it got uglier, but not only did Dominic fail to get the message, he even insisted on holding Leon responsible.

Well, at least he tried.

"Leon, I think you guys should leave..." Janice said uneasily. She was worried that things would take a turn for the worst the longer Leon and Cynthia stayed.
