

The Ex-Husband's Revenge By Dragonsky

Chapter 263

Chapter 263

This was way out of her budget.

"I don't think it's that special. Never mind. Let's go check out some other store..." Janice handed the clothes back to the salesgirl after changing out of them.

The smile froze on the salesgirl's face as disappointment seeped through her heart.

She hoped that a few of the items would catch Janice's attention, but on second thought, Janice was a gorgeous woman, and it was not surprising if Janice was considerably pickier when it came to fashion.

At this thought, the salesgirl's face lit up as an idea popped into her head. She strode over to a clothing rack on the other side of the room and announced, "Miss, there's a beautiful dress here in the store. It's the brainchild of one of the most famous fashion designers in this country. Its quality is unsurpassable when it comes to fabric or design, and is one of the most beautiful items we have on display in this store..."

Leon and Janice turned to glance in her direction and came face-to-face with an intricately designed short dress with tasseled edges and pearl shoulder straps. The exquisite pearls dazzled under the store's light as though beckoning for Janice to try them on.

"What a gorgeous dress!" Janice could not help exclaiming.

"Miss, please let my friend try on this dress," said Leon.

The store did not usually allow people to try on such a tasteful dress willy-nilly, but considering that Leon was such a generous customer, it only took a moment's hesitation before the salesgirl decided to abide by his request.

"That's okay, Leon." Janice shook her head.

She could tell that this dress was one of the finest in the store, and it was impossible that she could afford it.

"It wouldn't hurt to try it on, would it?" Leon replied, smiling.

"Well..." Janice found it difficult to turn this down. She never tried on such a beautiful dress before, and she was curious as to how she would look in it.

Besides, beautiful clothes like this were almost irresistible to any woman, and finally, she could not stand it anymore and decided to take the dress from the salesgirl.

After a short while, she emerged from the fitting room in the dress. Her entire being seemed to radiate grace and charm.

It was as though this dress was tailored just for her, sliding over her curves gracefully yet not revealing anything. The color complemented her skin tone and features so beautifully that it was as though she sparkled underneath the lights.

"You look stunning!" Leon gasped.

Even though Janice was a beautiful girl, she still faltered when it came to grace and confidence, especially when compared side-by-side to Iris or Cynthia. At most, one could agree that her beauty was on-par with Lily or Ariel. However, this dress seemed to elevate all her assets.

"What a beautiful woman!" some of the customers in the store stopped in their tracks to admire her.

The men's eyes all lit up with longing and adoration, whereas the women seethed with envy.

"Does it look that good on me, Leon?" Janice could tell from everyone's reaction that this dress was far more amazing than she initially thought.

"Yes. This dress is made for you! Let's buy it!" Leon nodded.

"What?" Janice gasped in horror.

She checked the price tag in the fitting room just now, and almost fainted at the figure; this dress cost almost 10,000 dollars!

This was no longer a question of whether her wallet would be able to take the hit—she could not even afford. this dress at all!
