

The Ex-Husband's Revenge By Dragonsky

Chapter 286

Chapter 286

He felt awkward.

"I thought that you were useless, but you are worse than I originally thought!" Louisa rolled her eyes. "It's a good thing that I just got my license during the summer vacation, unlike you!" She lifted her chin proudly as she opened the door of the car next to her and went inside.

Leon flushed, slightly taken off-guard by Louisa's odd temper; however, since Iris had entrusted her cousin with him, he had to follow through and reluctantly went into the car.

In Springfield University, Leon and Louisa arrived early, but it still took hours for them to complete all the necessary procedures for admission.

Louisa ran into two of her high school schoolmates that got into Springfield University as well.

Both of her schoolmates were young women. One of them was called Annie Holt, a woman with an above- average look, but a tall, slim build complimented by fashionable clothing, so one could assume that she came from a rather wealthy family; the other by the name of Lacey Paul was extremely beautiful, but seemed to come from a family that was less sufficient. She tied her hair in a ponytail and though her dress looked slightly worn from washing, she looked innocent and refreshing overall.

The three had been in the same high school and felt extremely happy to run into one another, so they immediately erupted into heated discussion.

"Louisa, who is this?" Annie glanced at Leon curiously.

"Oh. This is Lewd. A servant at my cousin's." Louisa shot Leon a look of contempt.

Leon came close to having a heart attack from the way she described him. Though it did seem logical for Louisa to consider Iris's secretary a servant, he still felt slightly irritated by it.

"Who would call themselves Lewd?"

"That's such a weird name."

Both Lacey and Annie were stunned and were about to believe what Louisa said.

"My name is Leon, not Lewd. She is kidding." Leon smiled bitterly and explained.

The two came to a realization and started giggling.

"Hello, Leon. My name is Annie, Louisa's high school schoolmate," Annie introduced herself confidently.

"My name is Lacey..." Lacey muttered sheepishly with a blush on her face.

"It's late now. You all haven't eaten after running around all morning, right? Come, I will buy you girls lunch," Leon said with a smile.

Though he did not like Louisa, she was still Iris's cousin and he had to take care of Louisa at his best effort instead of holding a grudge toward her.

"Forget lunch. I don't want it!" Louisa rolled her eyes at him.

Slightly stunned, he asked, "what do you want, then?"

"We have time and there's nothing else to do later, so let's go to a bar! I've never been to a bar before so I want to take this opportunity to check it out!"

"A bar? No way! That's where adults seek entertainment. You three are students and you can't go to a place like that!" He objected immediately.

He had not been to a bar before either, but based on television shows and novels, bars and clubs were filled with all different types of people and he could not allow Louisa to go to one.
