The Ex-Husband's Revenge By Dragonsky Chapter 37 "Understood!" The security guards that were beaten by Leon brewed with anger earlier, and after knowing that Joseph was the one at fault, they immediately channeled all their anger on Joseph. They all grabbed Joseph and Donald and dragged them forcibly like a dog being dragged to be euthanized! Upon seeing that scene, Lily's emotions were all over the place and she had difficulty trying to calm herself down. She never dreamed that Leon would be Iris's savior, and she was even more surprised when Iris unhesitatingly fired a company executive like Joseph to give Leon justice! If she knew that Leon had such capability and backing, she would have ignored her fear of Joseph and refrained from helping him frame Leon! It was such a shame that she realized it a little too late! "I'm sorry, Mister Wolf. I'm sorry for not repaying your kindness even though you saved me... I now know that I was wrong, and I wish to sincerely apologize to you..." Lily felt so overcome with guilt and regret that she bowed deeply to Leon and apologized sincerely. Leon snorted coldly and turned his head to ignore her. Lily knew that her actions hurt Leon deeply, and she did not expect Leon's immediate forgiveness. She then turned her head and bowed to Iris, saying, "I'm sorry, Miss Young. I'll send my resignation letter to the human resources department and resign willingly... There was nothing but bitterness on Lily's face. She did not feel the least bit happy even though Joseph, the man who acted inappropriately toward her, was fired. Her ungratefulness in response to Leon's help was extremely reprehensible. She lost her dignity completely and felt ashamed to face Leon. Moreover, Leon was also Iris's savior, and Lily's atrocious act would surely make it impossible for Iris to let her remain with the company! "Forget about it! I said that I'd give you one last chance, so I'll keep to my word! No mortal is without fault, and since you repented before it was too late, I will forgive you this once!” Iris said calmly and magnanimously. Lily’s behavior might have crossed the line, but she was a victim after all. Iris was willing to give Lily a chance to change for the better on account of how the latter came back on the right path in the end. “Does that mean...you’re willing to let me stay? Is that... true?” Lily was stunned and could not believe what happened. “Yes! I hope you’ll take this incident as a warning not to do something like that again in the future!” Iris nodded. “Thank you, Miss Young, thank you... I promise I’ll take your advice to heart from now and I’ll do my best to live up to your expectations...” Lily was so touched that tears of joy welled up in her eyes. She then bowed to Iris again and again as a sign of gratitude. “Alright, you may go back to your desk!” Iris smile. Lily hesitated for a moment, but she eventually gathered up her courage and walked up to Leon. “Mister Wolf, thank you for saving me...” Lily’s face turned red and she bowed deeply to Leon. Then, she turned around and left in a hurry, as she no longer dared to face Leon anymore. Soon, Leon, Iris, and Ariel were the only ones left in the office. “I’m sorry that I blamed you for what happened earlier, Leon. I hope you don’t take offense...” Ariel hesitated for a moment before gritting her teeth and apologizing to Leon. “It’s fine. I understand,” Leon said with a smile. “Well, look at what you did, Leon! You got rid of the top figure in the president’s department on your first day at work! I wonder what else is going to happen if you’re allowed to continue working in the company!” Iris came over and shot Leon an angry look. Leon’s heart was beating rapidly. “Joseph might be capable to some extent, but his character is questionable and our company has no place for scumbags like him! That said, your approach is rather ill-suited, and the ruckus that you caused will almost certainly have some negative impact on the company! I’ll forgive you this once because it was unintentional, but let there not be a second time or I won’t forgive you so easily again!” Iris raised her little fair-skinned fist at him and said angrily, but she only did so as a warning instead of being angry. “Don’t worry, I’ll listen to whatever you say as long as you don’t get angry at me. For Leon, seeing Iris not angry was more important than anything else!

The Ex-Husband's Revenge By Dragonsky Chapter 38 "Mind your conduct!" Iris rolled her eyes charmingly at Leon and saw the wound on his palm. Concerned, she asked, "How's the wound on your hand, by the way? We have an infirmary here in our company. Let me bring you there." Leon hesitated for a moment because the injury on his hand was just a skin injury and it was nothing serious. Then again, getting the wound cleaned up at the infirmary would be beneficial in preventing the wound from getting infected. "You have a pile of work waiting for you after your absence from the office yesterday. Let me bring him to the infirmary instead!" Ariel took the initiative to offer her help. "You?" Iris glanced strangely at Ariel. If she remembered correctly, Ariel seemed to be quite unhappy with Leon because of what happened earlier that morning. Furthermore, Ariel was a very proud woman who generally ignored most men, so it was rather unexpected of her to take the initiative and offer to help bring Leon to the infirmary. "I believe Joseph's lie at the expense of misunderstanding Leon, so I'd like to bring him to the infirmary as my way of apologizing to him..." Ariel blushed slightly because Iris's gaze made her feel a little uncomfortable. "Sure, you can bring him there then." Iris smiled and did not think too much about it. Leon got his wound cleaned and bandaged at the infirmary before returning to the president's office. Since Joseph was fired from the company, Iris reassigned another executive to oversee the operations at the president's department. He was a middle-aged 40-something man by the name of Shane Flanagan; he would later become the head of the president's department. There was a total of three secretaries in the department: Leon, Lily, and a young woman named Gracie Woodall. Gracie was in her early 30s and served the company for more than three years. Clad in a charcoal business suit and rimless eyeglasses, she gave off the aura of a sharp-witted and experienced individual. Shane arranged for Leon to work under Gracie and learn some of the work basics from her. Leon paid full attention to Gracie's careful guidance and an afternoon passed in the blink of an eye. When it was time to get off work, Leon was in a buoyant mood as his mind was filled with thoughts of Iris's beauty. He made his way to the parking lot while humming a random song. "Wait up, Mister Wolf..." a crisp voice came from behind. It was Lily, who trotted over from afar with a flush face. "Is something the matter, Miss Cameron?" Leon frowned and glanced unhappily at Lily. He did not take kindly to Lily anymore after her ungrateful behavior earlier. "I'm sorry for what I said earlier. It was all my fault. I'd like to apologize to you...” Lily bowed to Leon. “You don’t need to apologize again. You’ve already done so in the office,” Leon said indifferently. “I know that, but I genuinely hope to receive your forgiveness...” Lily bit her lip. Her mind was a complete mess all afternoon, and she continued to feel ill at ease. because she was trying to figure out a way to get Leon’s forgiveness. “It’s in the past, so whether or not I forgive you is no longer an issue!” Leon scoffed at her plea. He was no saint, and anyone who experienced what she did to him would surely find it difficult to just forgive her. Lily gritted her teeth and knelt in front of Leon with a thud. Leon was startled, and he immediately stepped forward to help Lily up. “Miss Cameron, what are you doing? Get up!” Lily shook her head and refused. “Mister Wolf, please just listen to me. I didn’t mean to make things difficult for you... “My father disappeared from home when I was very young, and it was my mother who worked hard all on her own to raise me and my brother... “She was admitted to the hospital a few months ago due to being overworked, and that incurred a huge amount in monthly medical expenses... “My brother has just been admitted to Springfield University this year and needs tuition and living expenses... “This job is very important to me. I was scared of losing my job, and I only helped Mister Conrad to frame you because my mind was a mess at that moment... “I know that I was wrong. All I ask is that you give me a chance and forgive me. Please...”

The Ex-Husband’s Revenge By Dragonsky Chapter 39 Lily burst into tears. Her expression was ridden with remorse and guilt. Leon was shocked, for he did not expect Lily to have such a sad backstory. As an orphan since young, his experience was not much better than that of Lily. He had an intimate understanding of how Lily felt, and he was also familiar with the kind of despair and helplessness she faced when encountering difficulties... They were both born in unlucky circumstances! Leon felt tremendously relieved at that moment, having understood and sympathized with Lily's predicament. It was already after-hours, so the situation on Leon and Lily's side immediately attracted the attention of many of their colleagues. "Look!" "That woman who's kneeling on the ground is Lily, right? The president's secretary? Who's the man she's kneeling for, though?" "Beats me. I've never seen him before." "That's weird. What are they doing?" The bystanders gossiped with each other while looking at Leon and Lily with strange expressions. Leon was startled by what went on. He did not want to be the center of attention, so he demanded right away, "Get up, Miss Cameron!" "No, I won't get up if you won't forgive me..." Lily insisted. "Okay, okay. I forgive you! Could you get up now? Let's leave this place first and talk elsewhere!" Leon helped Lily up as quickly as he could and fled the scene. Lily smiled. Tears might be streaming down her face, but she felt very happy. She could finally feel a sense of relief now that Leon finally forgave her. Leon brought Lily to the company's parking lot. "How do you get to and from work, Miss Cameron? Do you drive or take a taxi?" Leon asked a little hesitantly. "I take public transport sometimes, but I sometimes use QR codes for ride-sharing." Lily blushed. The company allocated a certain amount of monthly reimbursement for taxis, but the cost of hailing a taxi was too expensive and she wanted to save as much as possible. "Where do you live? I'll send you back on my motorcycle!" Leon pointed awkwardly at the pink motorcycle in front of him. There was no denying that the motorcycle had a tacky color, and it was not something that he was proud of. "This... is yours?" Lily was stunned and could not help herself from bursting out in laughter. "This color is really pretty..." "My friend gave it to me, so I'm driving it for the time being..." Leon laughed dryly, he already expected Lily to have that kind of reaction, and his guess turned out to be spot on. Fortunately, he could take it in good stride as Lily did not intend to ridicule him. "Hop on and I'll send you home." "Umm... I don't think it's appropriate..." Lily was a little hesitant as she never brought someone of the opposite gender home before. Worse still, being seen on a motorcycle together with him would open her up to all sorts of misunderstandings. "I'm not trying to hit on you or anything. I just want to visit your sick mother. I have little medical skills, so I was hoping I could help," Leon said with a smile. By inheriting the memories that his ancestors passed down to him the previous night, he obtained much medical knowledge that gave him a new understanding of medicine and medical skills. “You have medical skills? You’re not pulling my leg, are you?” Lily was surprised. “I do, but not much. So, don’t put too much hope on me. I’m just going to pay her a short visit on the off chance. that I might be able to gain some insight into her condition and provide you with some useful advice.” Leon shrugged. His medical knowledge was still rather shallow, and there was no guarantee that he could put that knowledge to use. All he wanted to do was help Lily out of sympathy for her. “That’d be great! Thank you...” Lily nodded excitedly. Her mother was admitted to the hospital several months now and the illness still showed no signs of improvement. She previously asked the doctor if her mother’s situation was alright, but the doctor’s answer was always very vague. If Leon did have medical knowledge, then she could at least ask for some pertinent advice from him. After Leon and Lily got onto the motorcycle, Leon started the motorcycle and rode it out of the company.

The Ex-Husband’s Revenge By Dragonsky Chapter 40 During the journey to send Lily back, vehicles and pedestrians filled the road to the brim because they were in the middle of rush hour when everyone was getting off work. When he reached an intersection at a traffic light, Leon had to brake suddenly to avoid the pedestrians. Her soft bosom bumped against his back and a wonderful sensation began coursing through his body. Leon was stunned and immediately realized that Lily’s chest was in intimate contact with his back. Although their skin was separated through thin clothes, he could feel the size of her supple bosom! A red flush appeared on Lily’s cheeks within a split second, and she tried to move back as much as possible to try and maintain a gap from Leon. Inertia had other plans for her though. The more she leaned back, the more forcefully her bosom bumped into Leon's back whenever he had to brake. Leon did not think much about it at first, but there was no denying that he was a normal man with strong vigor. As the frequency of braking and bosom-bumping increased, no amount of concentration could control the budding emergence of his arousal! He never thought that riding a motorcycle with a woman would be so amazing! It would be even better if he had the opportunity to bring Iris for a ride sometime in the future... Leon's excitement grew with every passing thought, and it was the first time he truly understood the wonders of riding a motorcycle! He previously shunned that motorcycle a little after Ariel teased him for being a sissy, and he even gave some thought to whether or not he should replace it. However, the experience of bringing a woman as a passenger led him to change his mind, and he would sooner kill himself than replace it! He was eagerly hoping to one day bring Iris for a ride on that motorcycle! Leon was immersed in his fantasies throughout the journey, while Lily blushed bashfully by the time they reached the hospital. "Miss Cameron, do you know if there are any pharmacies nearby? And whether they sell any disinfectant?" Leon asked, taking the lead to get rid of the awkward atmosphere between them. "This is a hospital, so there is one just diagonally opposite from here. They should have some there." Lily gradually regained her composure. Leon nodded. After going to the pharmacy to buy some special disinfectant, they went back to the hospital with that and some fruit that they bought from a roadside stall. When they reached one of the wards upstairs, Leon followed Lily there and met Lily's mother Serena Plumer. Serena was weak and she was half-lying on the hospital bed. Next to her sat a young boy that was about 18 or 19 years old- He was Lily's younger brother Jared. Since it was still summer break and school did not officially start yet, Jared would go to the hospital outside of his work-study program hours and take turns with Lily to take care of their mother. "Lily, you're back!" Jared stood up with a smile and was surprised to see Leon next to Lily. "Who's this?" "Oh, let me introduce you to each other. This is Leon Wolf, one of my colleagues in the company. Mister Wolf, this is my younger brother Jared." Lily smiled and briefly introduced them to each other. "A colleague?" Jared looked at Leon, then at Lily, and seemed to have a sudden realization. He then teased Lily by whispering in Lily's ear, "He's your boyfriend, isn't he?" Lily's pretty face turned red and she shot Jared a glare. "Jared! Don't just shoot your mouth off like that! He's just a colleague." "Oh, is he? Then why haven't you brought your other colleagues here before!" Jared had a look of disbelief. He understood his sister's character very well and knew that she was a relatively introverted person and seldom interacted with members of the opposite gender. Leon was the only person Lily brought to visit their mother hinting at a relationship that was more than just a colleague!
