Iris got up and unlocked the door.

“Creak-”

All of a sudden, a gigantic bouquet of roses materialized before her face. Before she could even figure out what went on, Leon already darted into the room and closed the door behind him.

“Leon, what...what are you doing here?” Iris’s expression turned cold as she realized that she was tricked by Leon and Louisa’s scheme.

“Iris, these beautiful flowers are for a beauty like you. I hope you’ll like them...” Leon held the bouquet out to her, grinning.

“Who cares about flowers?” Iris turned her head away, trying to ignore him.

“I know you’re still angry at me, Iris, but please listen to me. Nothing is going on between Janice and me, and that’s the truth... She kissed me on my cheek out of gratitude for my having rescued her, and that’s all it was...” Leon tried to explain himself.

“I don’t care what happens between you and her. This has nothing to do with me at all! I’ve already told you this; you don’t have to explain anything to me!” Iris snapped.

However, Leon’s explanation and the flowers he brought successfully managed to douse the flames of anger within her by half.

“Of course, I have to give you an explanation! Iris, I fell for you the moment I laid eyes on you. The sun, the moon, and the stars can bear witness to my love... Will you be my girlfriend?” Leon finally decided to seize the opportunity and professed his love.

“What?” Iris was taken aback by this. She never thought Leon would confess his feelings to her all of a sudden, and she was so shocked by this that she froze momentarily, unsure of what to do.

Seeing that Iris did not reject him, Leon immediately realized that she probably had feelings for him, too. An expression of delight crossed his face as he wrapped his arms around Iris’s slender waist and pulled her into his embrace.

“Iris, I love you so much, and you’re the only person on my mind. I know that I can’t give you a future as of now, but I truly love you more than anything in this world. Can you please do me the honor of being my girlfriend?” he asked earnestly, his arms wrapped tightly around Iris so that she would not be able to pull away.

“You...you’d better let go of me! Why are you hugging me when I haven’t even agreed to be your girlfriend?” Iris’s cheeks flushed scarlet, and she struggled against his grasp to no avail.

“I won’t let go of you! If you don’t agree to be my girlfriend, I’ll...” Leon began to get lost in the faint fragrance of Iris’s skin and her rosy lips.

“What...what are you going to do?” Iris asked, her heart thumping in her chest.

“I will kiss you until you say yes!” Leon could not hold himself back any longer; he lowered his head and pressed his lips against hers.

Iris widened her eyes in shock as she watched Leon’s face approach her, followed by the warmth of his lips on hers. She could not believe this happened.

A few moments later, she broke out of her stupor and tried to push him away, but Leon kissed her so forcefully and so greedily that no matter how hard she struggled, she could not get away from him.
