Furious, Samuel itched to slap Marilyn across the face again.

“Dad, stop!”

Brody's weak voice calmed Samuel immediately.

“Brody, you're finally awake. How? How do you feel now?” Samuel hurried over to the bed, all the while suppressing his anger.

“I-” Brody opened his mouth to speak but felt a lump in his throat when he remembered the fact that he was no longer a whole man.

“Brody, I know that you're upset right now. Even if it cost every last penny in this family, I'm going to tear Leon into pieces to avenge you!” Samuel slammed his fists onto the table and gritted out.

“Dad, don't!” Brody gaped, coming close to leaping out of the bed if he did not have an injury.

“Brody, what's wrong with you?” Samuel asked in confusion.

“Dad, you don't understand. Leon might be an orphan, but he somehow managed to befriend the Shears, the Youngs, and Fane Poole. Three of the Five Forces in Springfield City are even willing to risk crossing Jacob Lowe and Anson to protect Leon.”

Brody explained the situation with fear all over his face, his heart still racing as he recalled what happened.

Behind the Five Forces of Springfield City were the most powerful families that could easily destroy the Sullivans.

With Harvey and Iris to back Leon, not even Jacob Lowe and Anson could do anything to Leon, so the Sullivans could only be more powerless on that front.

It was almost certain that if the Sullivan Family attempted to hurt Leon again, they would suffer much worse and Leon might utilize his connection with the Shears to crush them.

“What? Did that happen?” Samuel's jaw dropped, finally understanding why even the Flying Tiger, Xander, struggled to deal with Leon.

They underestimated Leon.

Naturally, Marilyn was equally as shocked.

She used to be married to Leon for three years and she thought she knew everything there was to know about Leon. She never expected the good-for-nothing husband that she knew to obtain such influence three months after their divorce.

Even the Sullivans would have to treat Leon respectfully, which meant that the Mansons would not be considered a threat to Leon.

She was instantly overwhelmed by regret.

“Brody, are we just going to let this go?” Samuel asked darkly. Though he resented Leon for what he did, the Sullivans could not overpower Leon and if they refused to give up, Leon might bring their family to doom.

The cost of revenge was simply far too high and Samuel knew that the other members of the family would not agree to gamble with the future of the family.

However, Leon injured Brody to the point that he could never be whole again, and Samuel could not live with himself without avenging his son.
