Chapter 111 Head to Jayvion's House

Felipe didn't drink coffee anymore and stood up in fright.

"B-Boss?! Are you, are you sure?"

"Did you do it or did I do it?"

No matter how anxious Felipe was, he could not go against Kieran's wishes.

I could only look at this outrageous contract, print it out, and directly stamp it with the official seal.

"Ah, I wonder what the other chairpersons would have known and how they would have reacted."

After all, 40% of the shares... Does this mean they practically gave away everything?

This position had already surpassed all the directors of the company.

And...

Who exactly was this girl named Bowman?

This appearance, why does it feel a bit familiar?

Felipe held the hot potato in his hand.

He sighed deeply.

Did you finally find someone to figure out the madness?

Felipe shook his head in resignation, thinking to himself that he was just an employee and there was nothing more to say.

He put the contract on the desk and continued with the work at hand.

Kieran contacted the manager of the mall while in the car and obtained Valerie's employee information.

"This address... is indeed Jayvion's home address. Let's drive there."

"Okay, boss."

The driver heard the three words "Jayvion" and froze.

Back then, it was myself and Jayvion who went to pick up the lady and also witnessed her running out from the Horton family that night.

Today he saw the young lady, and when she looked at him, she even smiled.

But now, they just left so abruptly...

A huge regret spread in the driver's heart, but he still drove toward Jayvion's house.

Kieran took out his phone and wanted to tell the Horton family that Valerie was still alive.

This time, the information was undoubtedly conclusive.

After he finished typing this paragraph, his fingers felt incredibly heavy.

He hesitated to make a move.

After watching for a long time, I finally deleted the content.

Forget it, I'll tell the Horton family after I have done what Valerie told me today .

Hesit to Jayvion's House (1)

The car quickly arrived at Jayvion's doorstep, a typical small Western-style house with a small garden in the front, filled with green plants grown by Jayvion.

At this moment, the door of the small cottage opened and Jayvion was sitting at the front door, rocking on a rocking chair, enjoying the sunlight.

“Old man, it seems like there was someone at the door.”

Jayvion’s spouse was embroidering clothes for their grandson.

Jayvion opened his eyes and, upon seeing the approaching figure outside, he immediately stood up.

“It was the young master.”

“Ah?”

Before his spouse could hear clearly, Jayvion had already gotten up and opened the door for Kieran.

“Jayvion, long time no see.”

Kieran looked at Jayvion, who had aged significantly, and felt a myriad of emotions in his heart.

The incident when Jayvion resigned in public, it feels like it was just yesterday, but at the same time, it feels so distant.

“Master? How did you come here?”

I haven’t seen you in ten years, and suddenly you appeared in my own house.

Clever Jayvion almost figured it out.

The young master found the young lady and now he has come over to inquire.

His heart started to feel nervous.

“Jayvion, you don’t have to be nervous. I already know that Valerie has been staying with you. I didn’t come to take Valerie away; I just came to ask how Valerie has been doing these past few years.”

Huh?

Did Mr. Kieran pay attention to the Miss?

He looked at Kieran in surprise, making sure there was no other meaning, and then he asked Kieran to sit down.

“I dare to ask; how did you discover it?”

Kieran tightly closed his lips, and now he somewhat understood Valerie’s motive for appearing in front of him.

Chapter 112

“Why didn’t Valerie come over directly if she’s not with the Fisher family? Hurry up and message Valerie! Ask her to come back when she’s free! Tell her I miss her!” “Darling...” “Boss?!”

He carefully read it over two or three times, without missing a single word.

Felipe finally found out who this girl with the surname Bowman was.

“Boss... This is going to be a big mess.”

The sister I had been searching for all along. unexpectedly chose to make it public in this way.

And it had no connection with the Horton family anymore.

How did the boss accept it in order to publish such an article?

Sure enough, as soon as this article was published, people in society finally had an entertaining topic and began discussing it extensively.

So, the employee who climbed the pole to save the child at the amusement park, was she really the missing daughter of the Horton family back then?

“It was said that she was rescued, but it felt strange. How could she be rescued without watching the news? Everyone knew that back then; everyone was searching for this sister. Why didn't she pay attention? Why didn't she come home?"

The person upstairs is terrifying when you think about it carefully"

"Why bother so much? Do you think you're Sherlock Holmes? Do you have to look at things from a God's perspective? Anyway, as long as the person is not dead, it's fine."

"What the person above said is correct, but the tone is unpleasant."

"Huh? So, you're telling me I have to speak in order to please everyone?"

***

People were talking about it, and the heat of this matter made the Horton family aware.

Valerie did not die.

Bang!

The sound of books crashing heavily onto the ground echoed in Bruce's room.

He trembled all over, his breathing became heavier.

Sweat started to trickle down from his forehead.

"Why didn't she die... why didn't she die..."

The overwhelming guilt prevented him from taking a breath.

Over the years, he had successfully brainwashed himself, convincing himself that he was not at fault. On the day of Valerie's funeral, he only stayed at the scene for a while before leaving to work.

No one knew that at the moment he was in the funeral parlor, he felt the whole world brightened up!

But now, Valerie's sudden appearance dragged him back into the abyss once again.

She was sensible enough not to say she would come back,

This made Bruce feel a little relieved)

In the living room, Reese's dissatisfied voice could be heard as he was talking to Kieran on the phone.

The communication between the two ended after Reese shouted for Kieran to come back.

The Horton family fell into silence.

Reyna went out shopping with her sisters today, while Zoe went to school for her classes.

There were only a few grown men in the house.

The air pressure reached extreme levels.

After Kieran came back, he found all the so-called brothers sitting in the living room, waiting for him to return.

Reese sat in the middle, glaring at Kieran as he returned.

"Well done, you really did well! Kieran, I entrusted everything at home to you, and you found someone without telling us and made such a decision on your own!"

Reese was really furious, but Kieran acted as if nothing had happened.

He had already gotten used to Reese like this.

Seeing the eldest son's emotionless face. Reese's anger was like himp cotton

There was nowhere to go.

"This is the response I received after talking to Valerie, without damaging reputation. What are you dissatisfied with?"

Kieran took off his suit and spoke to Reese in a slightly flat tone, but weariness was evident in his eyes and brows.

Reese was asked and became stunned.

Chapter 113 Val, Don't You Like it?

Kieran did not continue to ride the driver's car.

He came to the garage, drove away his car, and returned to the apartment he had previously bought.

He collapsed on the sofa, feeling exhausted all over. He let out a long sigh to ease the bitterness in his heart.

Tsk.

This feeling was really uncomfortable.

He stared at the light on the ceiling, lying still, thinking about things.

"Oh, by the way, look for Valerie."

After his mind was in a complete mess, he finally regained clarity. Now that Valerie has come out, most of the information is no longer concealed.

He came to the list again and found his friend who was particularly good at finding people.

"Are you there? I wanted to ask if you could help me find out where my sister was living now. Is it possible to check this?"

After more than ten minutes, a reply message finally came.

"Your sister? Oh, I remember now. The one you posted today, it should be fine, but you might have to wait until tonight. I'm taking my daughter out to play today."

Yeah, it's been ten years already.

Marriage was married, and having children had children.

Alone and aimless, I never even touched a woman's hand.

Drowsily, he lay on the sofa and fell asleep.

After Valerie left the restaurant, she also returned to the rental place that Gale n had found for her.

She needed to take a good rest.

In her building, there were also movers going up and down today, moving things.

Before, I was in a hurry and didn't have time to prepare many things, so I had to buy some things on the spot. For the larger items, I asked someone to help me move them.

Who moved here today?

She observed in advance and found that apart from a couple on the first floor and a single mother's family on the third floor, the rest of the floors were occupied by herself on the fourth floor.

Out of curiosity, she wanted to see who had moved in.

Standing at the door, I watched as the movers carried the fitness equipment upstairs.

Fitness equipment?

Looks familiar...

Valerie froze, unable to resist moving closer to carefully observe the fitness equipment. The closer she got, she finally realized why it seemed familiar.

Chapter 113 Val, Don't You Like it? (1)

Wait, wait, wait, isn't this Derek's fitness equipment?

Did he know from my grandfather that I lived here? Did he move here?

Valerie, who was standing still, watched Derek come out from the doorway, intending to help the movers with the relocation.

"Derry??"

"Val, you're back?"

A very natural greeting...

Valerie was suddenly at a loss for words.

"You, how did you..."

"Sorry Val, let me move this equipment first. This is the last one, you can also come up and take a look."

I moved the elliptical machine with the movers.

Rolled up to the shoulders, the sleeves revealed well-defined muscle lines, giving a refreshing yet powerful look.

Oh, how good it was to be young.

Curious in her mind, Valerie quickly approached and wanted to help with the moving.

“Huh? You don’t have to move, just go upstairs and help me open the door on the fourth floor.”

Wow, sure enough, he moved across from me.

With a simple nod, Valerie hurriedly ran up the fourth floor.

Looking at the opposite door.

The gate was wide open...

No need to open the door at all.

And Derek had also moved to the second floor.

This kid, still so gentle.

Valerie could only stand at the door, waiting for them to come up.

When the elliptical machine was placed in the living room, there were only the two of them left in the room.

Valerie crossed her arms and looked up at the boy who was a head taller than her.

Chapter 114 Why Are You Here?

I helped Derek tidy up the cleanliness.

The two of them went to the supermarket together to buy groceries, preparing for tonight's housewarming party for Derek.

Derek, who was walking downstairs, suddenly brought Valerie to the bike she had outside.

Walking toward a brand new, slightly larger electric scooter, I took out a new safety helmet from the base and gave it to Valerie.

Then the car backed out.

"When did you buy the small battery, Derry?"

"I bought it yesterday, thinking that it would be more convenient to go out with you in the future, especially since I haven't received my driver's license yet. When Calvin gets it done, we can drive together to a farther place to have fun or run errands."

Valerie's eyes widened as she blinked and stared at Derek.

In my memory, Derek's standard car should be a business car or some luxury car, which is completely different from the one starting with a small battery in front of me.

"What's wrong? Get in the car."

"Okay."

This is good, it is close to reality.

In this life, I had a connection with him, which was also a kind of fate.

Valerie put on a helmet and placed both hands on Derek's shoulders.

The temperature coming from the young man's shoulders sent a shiver down his spine.

Unconsciously, I moved forward a little, giving Valerie more space.

The body temperature started to rise.

"Let's go, we went to the supermarket."

"Um..."

The two of them sat on an electric scooter and slowly drove out of the residential area.

Just as they were leaving for a while, Kieran's private car arrived in front of the residential area.

He dozed off on the sofa for a while and received Felipe's reply about Valerie's current place of residence.

He didn't feel like sleeping anymore, so he got up and drove recklessly.

"Is this the place?"

Kieran picked up his phone and looked at the location sent by his secretary.

Valerie used to live here now, the environment was nice, but she felt a bit cramped.

With a slight frown of concern, Kieran remembered the name of the neighborhood and immediately drove to the real estate agency.

"Bought a house."

Kieran opened the door and approached the salesperson, his tone icy.

“Um, um, sir, let me introduce you...”

“No need, I want this one.”

Show the building information of Valerie’s house directly.

The salesperson bravely stepped forward and took a careful look, then suddenly looked apologetically at Kieran.

“Sir, I’m sorry, but this building has already been sold out.”

“Sold out?”

Sure enough, when Kieran heard the salesperson say the words “sold out,” his expression became even colder.

As far as I know, there were less than five occupants in this building, and you are saying it is sold out now?”

Kieran was not ambiguous and directly displayed his authority.

This directly scared the newcomer salesperson to the bone.

Someone had already informed the manager about the situation in the hall. Upon hearing the news, the manager in the room walked toward the hall. When he saw that the person was Kieran, his face turned pale instantly.

“Hello, hello! Mr. Horton! I didn’t know it was you, I apologize for the neglect.”

A commotion erupted.

Mr. Horton?! Is that Kieran from the Horton Group?

He said that the person who came had an imposing aura and looked very handsome, but his aggressive approach made people almost afraid to approach him.

The manager approached, smiling as he looked at Kieran.

“Mr. Horton, the building you wanted to buy was already sold out yesterday. You came at an unfortunate time.”

“There were so many vacant rooms in this building, and they were all occupied in just one night?”

The manager rubbed his fingers a little nervously.

“I’m really sorry, Mr. Horton. Yesterday that building was bought by a large family, each person bought one unit, and they bought it together.”

One family, one person, one set?

Chapter 115 Are You Mad?

Valerie’s words pierced his heart like a knife.

He felt a sourness in his chest and looked at Valerie with a complex expression.

Everyone said it to this extent, he couldn’t possibly tell her that he had bought a house nearby to take care of her.

“I, I just came to take a look...”

This sentence feels as powerless as it can be.

Valerie also didn't want to continue replying to Kieran's message. She felt it was unnecessary to drag it on.

"Mr. Horton, we were about to go in."

Derek saw that both of them were silent, so he took the initiative to speak.

"Ah, alright, alright... Then you guys come in..."

Before Kieran could finish speaking, Derek nodded his head in a gesture and swiftly disappeared.

Riding on a small electric scooter, he went in.

Kieran was left alone in embarrassment.

He touched his nose and drove away in a gloomy manner.

"Derry, were you angry?"

After entering the residential area, Valerie felt the low pressure emanating from Derek's body.

Was it because of Kieran's sudden appearance?

Derek, who was driving with a small battery-powered car in front, snapped out of his thoughts and quickly shook his head.

"I wasn't angry, Val, just felt... Mr. Horton doesn't seem to value trust in his actions, especially since we agreed not to disturb each other..."

With that, Derek stopped speaking.

Saying these things would still make Valerie feel uncomfortable and make her care.

“Indeed... Next time if I happen to meet him again, I will definitely have a good talk...”

Sure enough, my words had already hurt her deeply.

“It’s okay, Val. If we see each other again next time, let’s secretly run away, okay?”

He joked with Valerie, smiling to ease her embarrassment.

“Good!”

Someone was willing to do things with her, and Valerie was naturally touched. Excitedly, she picked up two big bags and ran upstairs with a clatter.

Derek, who never gave any chance for display, did not stop at all.

“Val! I came!”

“Ah? But I had already reached the door.”

Standing on the fourth floor, Derek was talking to Valerie on the first floor, and Valerie was answering loudly.

Well, as long as you have the spirit.

Derek comforted himself in his heart.

The two entered Derek's house and started cooking dinner together.

On the other side, Kieran drove to the entrance of his residential area, where Bruce was waiting at his doorstep.

Kieran's mood, which was never good, directly turned very bad.

"What were you doing?"

"Where did she live?"

Kieran's eyebrows furrowed instantly, and his expression of disgust was now completely undisguised.

Bruce looked at Kieran's expression and smirked.

"What? You don't pretend at all now?"

"Was it still necessary?"

They are all old men, what's the point of pretending anymore?

Not at home again.

Bruce still wanted to go with Kieran, to his room, but he was stopped by him.

"I had an agreement with Valerie, not to interfere with each other, and you should not disturb her either."

"Oh, not interfering with each other? Then why did you buy a house?"

As soon as Bruce said this, Kieran's face immediately turned black.

“Did you investigate me?”

“Why can’t I investigate you when you can investigate others?”

Bruce is now no longer concealing it, and can be said to be forcibly suppressing his dislike as he speaks to Kieran.

Kieran’s temper also slightly showed itself.

“Since you can investigate me, why don’t you investigate her yourself? Why come to me? What? Do you want to use me as an excuse?”

After seeing Valerie, you want me to take the blame? Saying it was me? You’re really a coward.

Bruce, who was caught red-handed, felt his face temperature rise at that moment, and his inner frustration exploded instantly.

But Kieran was right, I did come here myself, just to find a good excuse to blame him.

He was speechless.
