Chapter 136 Take Her to School (2)

Galen waved his hand, signaling Calvin and Derek to gather in front of him.

“Derek, Grandpa wants to discuss something with you. Take a look and see if it’s appropriate.”

“Okay, Grandpa, you said.”

Galen whispered softly to the two of them, and their eyes occasionally glanced at Valerie.

“Grandpa, can I go with you to take Val over there?”

Galen glanced at Derek.

“You turned eighteen, Derek, you knew where you had to go.”

Galen gently spoke, and Derek received Calvin’s gaze baptism.

Derek frowned.

“Can I go after getting engaged to Val?”

“That’s fine, no problem.”

“Grandpa, can I also go in with Valerie for a while?”

Good boy, it had to be him.

“...looked again.”

Without giving Derek a clear answer, Galen closed his eyes and stopped answering his questions.

Derek wanted to say something, but the door of the ward opened.

“Grandpa! / Dad!”

Calvin hurriedly approached and placed a finger on his lips, “Shh!”

Everyone saw Calvin like this and immediately covered their mouths.

Everyone leaned over to look behind, only Galen opened his eyes.

Valerie had already fallen asleep.

Tucker gently approached Valerie, his face showing concern, and softly held Valerie’s hand.

His thumb caressed the back of her hand.

Looking at the tears on her eyelids and the tear marks on her face.

The heartache in my heart was self-evident.

“Derek, how long had Valerie been awake?”

“She woke up for a while, and after waking up, she grabbed her grandfather and cried for a while. Maybe she got tired of crying, and now she has fallen back asleep.”

Derek came to Tucker’s side and explained to him.

“Mica has just come, and has already taken blood samples from both grandfather and Val. Now, they are going for the examination.”

Tucker looked at Valerie with red eyes.

He was already in his thirties, but he possessed a calmness and charm that he did not have in his twenties.

“Both of you, come here and talk about something.”

The members of the Fisher family came in one by one. They all went to see Valerie, who was sleeping, and then gathered around Galen’s bed to listen to his plan.

“Dad, we have prepared several plans and will show them to you later.”

Galen nodded in satisfaction and handed them both the tasks, feeling reassured.

“I thought about it, and even though Valerie is under Calvin’s care, she needs to interact with peers. Maybe it would be better to send her to school.”

Galen saw that everyone had arrived, and then he began to speak about what he wanted to do next.

The Fisher family, everyone’s gaze, immediately turned to Derek.

His eyes were filled with curiosity.

He had ways to be with Valerie.

Galen looked at everyone's gaze shifting toward this little grandson, feeling helpless in his heart.

Has this all been settled?

"What is he doing? Look at me! Derek should have served in the military for two years."

Calvin's mouth gently puckered.

Two years passed.

Didn't this make him anxious? Although this guy said he would get engaged first.

But was he really willing to separate space and time?

Now Calvin is not worried about whether Valerie will agree or not, what he is worried about now is whether Derek is willing to be separated for two years.

It seems like everyone's thoughts were similar to Calvin's, their eyes filled with curiosity about Derek.

"Derek said he would get engaged to Valerie first and then join the army. Raymond, are you ready to prepare for the marriage proposal?"

"Dad, don't worry. After the two of them got engaged that day, Meredith and I were ready and waiting for everyone to go together."

Derek's eyes lit up at this.

He looked at Raymond with a sharp gaze, as if he had something to say.

Raymond felt uncomfortable as he looked at his son's gaze and cleared his throat.

"What were you doing?"

"Dad, I wanted to see what you guys had prepared."

He wanted to see if it was enough.

Raymond suddenly understood why Derek wanted to see the dowry list...

"Derek, don't worry, only more, not less."

Derek nodded his head.

"I knew, but I wanted to see if there was anything else that could be added."

Raymond reluctantly sent the dowry list to Derek.

"See for yourself."

"Okay, thank you, Dad!"

Derek opened his phone with a smile and looked at what Raymond had on his dowry list for him.

After the conversation was over, Tucker silently approached Valerie.

Sitting beside her.

Recalling the first time I met her and the experiences we had together.

I never expected that she would actually come to my house now.

“What are you doing? Why are you sighing?”

Calvin came up behind him and gave Tucker a strange look.

“What? Am I not allowed to sigh?”

“Hmm, what’s going on? I care about you, you know. Sigh, old age catches up quickly. You’re a movie star now, do you want to age so fast?”

Tucker chuckled casually.

“What happened to the leading actor? On the day when my grandfather and Valerie fell into a coma, I knew nothing, I was only scared. Is being the leading actor of any use?”

Calvin didn’t speak anymore. He stood behind Tucker, looking at Valerie who was still asleep, and suddenly let out a gentle sigh.

“Hey, why did you sigh? Sighing ages you quickly. Don’t you still have a bunch of soldiers to manage?”

Tucker seized the opportunity and jokingly teased Calvin with a smile.

The two of them smiled at each other and watched their family members in the hospital room, talking and laughing.

Now both Grandpa and Valerie have awakened, and Grandpa's condition has also improved.

The most important thing is that the family is healthy and happy together.

"I was fine, I'll wait until Valerie wakes up to talk."

What's a little tiredness? During training, I could go without sleep for three or four days.

Now, as long as Valerie wakes up, I can go rest.

Just like an obsession, Valerie wouldn't wake up, and he wouldn't sleep.

Derek carefully looked at the dowry list.

I occasionally typed something on it.

The more I looked, the longer the time passed....

Raymond felt apprehensive.

"Derek, you looked for too long."

The implicit meaning is that you have added too much.

Derek glanced at his own father and understood in his heart.

"It's okay, Dad. I only added what I could afford, and for what I couldn't, I can figure it out myself."

"...Derek, we don't have much time. Once Valerie wakes up and rests for three or four days, we will go to propose. Even I can't present something decent, can you handle it in these few days?"

After all, where there is a father, there must be a son.

When Raymond pursued me back then, he was just as persistent as Derek is now.

With a look that said “figure it out yourself,” Valerie looked at Raymond. Meredith also came to Valerie’s side, looking at the soon-to- be daughter-in-law.

"Derek, what are you looking at? Why don't you go and see Valerie?"

"Hmm? I was looking at the dowry, and I'll go to Val's side after I finish."

Dowry?

Mica's pupils trembled for a moment, and he quickly bent down to see what gifts Derek had prepared for Valerie.

When he saw this long string of priceless things, his heart was pinched.

"You, you..."

Mica, you stared for a long time, but couldn't say a word.

I wondered if he gave too much, but considering it was Valerie, it seemed reasonable.

So he closed his mouth and earnestly watched with Derek.

Mica gave Derek a disdainful look and ignored him.

He turned around and went straight to Galen's side.

"Grandpa, let me check you again."

"Okay, thank you for your hard work, Mica."

Mica smiled brightly, and her hand movements were very gentle.

"Grandpa, Derek is now preparing the dowry for Valerie. Is there anything I can help with?"

However, there were some things inside that he was indeed worried if Derek could get his hands on. If he couldn't, as his brother, he would step forward and lend a hand.

"Hahaha, it's alright Mica. Derek is independent and resourceful. If he can't get something now, he will find a way to get it in the future. You're worrying too much."

Galen reached out and placed his hand on Mica's hand, giving it a gentle pat.

Only Mica knew Galen's condition at that time in the entire ward.

Galen may have felt guilty, so his tone toward Mica was also much gentler.

more to respond to her long-vibrating phone.

The people at home were about to explode his phone.

Derek glanced at the dowry list again and looked up at the ward.

Only Calvin and Tucker were waiting here for Valerie to wake up.

"Calvin, Tucker, you guys go rest. I'll take care of Valerie with grandpa."

Calvin waved his hand.

"No need, I'll wait for Valerie to wake up before going to rest."

Calvin held onto the last thread of obsession, waiting for Valerie to wake up.

Derek looked at Tucker, thinking of asking him to persuade.

After all, Calvin always listened to Tucker.

But Tucker could only shrug helplessly.

"Let him wait. Once he sets his mind on something, he will keep going."

Derek watched as Calvin sat on the couch, squinting his eyes and rubbing his temples.

He came silently behind Calvin.

He extended his finger, replacing Calvin's finger on his temple.

Calvin was a little surprised.

“Calvin, I needed your help with something.”

“Puff...”

As soon as Derek finished saying this, Tucker laughed out loud without any courtesy.

Sure enough, nothing Derek does for Calvin comes for free.

“Hey, kid, what’s up? Did something bother you that you even gave me a massage?”

“It wasn’t really a big deal.”

After saying this, both Tucker and Calvin were shaken.

Generally, Derek would say, “It seems like the situation was a bit troublesome.”

“Tucker, would you come over and listen too?”

“What? Am I also listed among them?”

Tucker smiled and, unlike Calvin, he came forward with a smile on his face, waiting for Calvin to speak about the plan.

Derek scratched his head.

"But I estimated that it would take this many cars to transport the dowry."

Tucker and Calvin were both shaken after hearing it.

They looked at each other in shock.

They are disappointing. Even at this age, they have never properly held a girl's hand.

The youngest cousin, who is now the smallest, got engaged before them.

So they didn't understand how much dowry was needed in this aspect.

Calvin was shocked to hear that so many cars were required for the dowry.

In the ward, Derek was talking to Galen about military service.

After all, Derek was different.

Valerie, who had just come out of the ward, was strolling in the small garden wearing a patient gown.

The sun was shining outside, warming Valerie’s body.

The warm sunshine made Valerie feel a little drowsy again.

She sat on the bench in the garden, looking up at the sky, hidden beneath the green shade.

From time to time, the sound of birds chirping would come through. Valerie silently gazed at the azure sky, her mind filled with thoughts of her dream.

“Okay, Tristan.”

Zoe obediently arrived at the small garden and planned to wait for Tristan to come in.

"Mr. Tristan, watch your language. If I were hospitalized due to poor living conditions, does that mean Ms. Horton also came to seek medical treatment for the same reason?"

Tristan's playful expression vanished in an instant, his gaze became sharp as he looked into Valerie's eyes, filled with danger.

He did not reply angrily, but stood still and watched silently as the two of them confronted each other coldly.

"Hmph, as expected, you went out and lost all your manners. What? Just because you're not surnamed Horton, you think you can challenge me?"

"How could I dare? It's just that what

Mr. Tristan said was really hard for me to respect. As they say, people speak human words, and ghosts speak ghostly words. Mr. Tristan's words don't seem very normal to ordinary people."

The atmosphere between the two people had become so tense that even their breathing could be heard.

Tristan faced Valerie, whom he hadn't seen for a long time, and his temper wasn't any better.

"Is there anything else, Mr. Tristan? If there's nothing, I'll first."

While Zoe had already adjusted herself, she quickly reached out and grabbed Tristan's sleeve, hoping that he would not say anything more.

"Zoe, you let go."

Tristan coldly glanced at Zoe beside him, his warning evident.

If this were placed in normal times, Zoe would definitely let go directly, but today is different.

This was in front of my sister, and Tristan was indeed being unreasonable.

Zoe had been doing mental construction in her mind, and she didn't know where she found the courage to say to Tristan.

"Stop talking, Tristan, I won't have time if you keep going."

Zoe's words made Tristan regain a little bit of sanity.

He adjusted his breath and regained a normal expression to face Valerie.

"Alright, I won't argue with you. I came to bring Zoe for a medical check-up today. You can go back to your ward."

Tristan's lips curved into his usual smile, but his eyes concealed a hint of mockery.

Valerie laughed coldly.

it seems that you, Mr. Tristan, do not have it."

“Before leaving, let me say a few more words. Even if you had brought me home back then, I would still have run away from home, with or without you.

“On the contrary, what I have to thank you for is your cold-bloodedness and ruthlessness, which gave me the confidence to leave home.

“Oh, by the way, after all these years, it seems that Mr. Tristan is still the same as before, his courage doesn’t seem to be that great.

“You had the leisure and energy to be sarcastic with me. Why didn’t you consider how to leave that place instead? Why did you keep staying there?”

Coward.

Valerie was still the same, but saying it back then and saying it now, it’s completely different.

After saying that, Valerie walked away without looking back, ignoring Tristan’s calls behind her.

I turned my head slightly and caught a glimpse of Zoe, who had a pale face over there.

When Valerie came back, the two of them stopped talking and warmly welcomed her with smiles.

Ah

I was lucky enough to meet the Fisher family.

The mood that became worse because of meeting Tristan gradually started to improve.

In the garden, Tristan's neck turned red with anger, and his face became grimaced.

"Tristan..."

Zoe stood by, unable to speak, feeling uneasy and waiting for him to calm down.

"Zoe, I'm sorry, my brother lost control. Let's go, we need to see a doctor."

Tristan adjusted for a while and Tristan smiled again, reaching out to rub Zoe's head.

Looking at Tristan's outstretched hand, Zoe flinched and both of them remained visibly stiff for a moment.

Tristan's eyes gleamed with coldness as he stared at Zoe's head. He placed his large hand heavily on Zoe's head and gently rubbed it.

And Zoe could only bite her lower lip, waiting for Tristan to finish.

Getting closer to Zoe increased the sense of oppression by a notch.

Zoe's heart grew cold once again.

She dared not answer Tristan's question.

Because she thought her sister was right, but she didn't dare to offend Tristan.

She was very tired.

Zoe's anxious and fearful heart kept her mouth tightly shut, making it impossible for her to speak.

Tristan pulled Zoe's hand and led her into the hospital lobby.

Valerie and Galen were discharged from the hospital.

The day after being discharged from the hospital, Valerie arrived at Jayvion's house carrying bags of goodies.

Since Galen suddenly collapsed, Valerie's first thought was her own Jayvion.

He was also her grandfather according to her household registration.

Galen knew that she was going to see Jayvion, without hesitation, she went straight to the garden and found a well-maintained succulent plant to give to Valerie.

"Grandfather, is this, perhaps too valuable..."

"Take it, Valerie, and, have a good chat with Jayvion."

It was also a thank-you gift for him.

In his dream, he saw Jayvion do many things behind Valerie's back more than once.

To be honest, if it weren't for Jayvion taking care of Valerie, the Horton family wouldn't have made it.

Perhaps Valerie doesn't even have the mentality of a normal person now.

It was all worries.

I must thank myself for this effort.

After all, he was, helping his own granddaughter-in-law.

Seeing Galen's determination, Valerie couldn't refuse either.

Excitedly thanking Galen, I then got into Tucker's car and drove toward Jayvion's house.

"Valerie, were there any other parts of your body that felt uncomfortable?"

"I was fine, Tucker."

Just as Tucker got in the car, he handed the pre-brewed fruit tea in his hand to Valerie.

The fruit tea was still a bit hot, so I put it in a thermos.

All the materials inside are Valerie's favorites.

This was specially brewed by Tucker for Valerie, and the whole family knew that Valerie liked to drink this kind of fruit tea.

"It's still a bit hot, you can blow on it and drink it later."

"Good!"

Little mouth obediently came to the thermos and blew on it, one mouthful at a time.

But the sweet smell rushed straight into Valerie's nostrils.

She blew on the surface a few times and finally sucked in a little with her small mouth.

Then, a satisfied exclamation was uttered.

Tucker burst into laughter.

Tucker whispered softly to Valerie.

That day, he thought there might be wind outside, so he silently went out, wanting to bring a jacket for Valerie and have a chat with her.

Tucker looked at Valerie, who was trying her best not to get angry, and smiled helplessly.

Forget it.

It’s not worth getting angry for such a life.

At worst, I will just let Dad and Steven know when the time comes.

Thinking like this, I quickly arrived at Jayvion’s doorstep.

Valerie excitedly opened the door and got out of the car, carrying a bunch of things from the back compartment. She then pressed the doorbell.

“Grandfather... What happened to you?”.

Valerie’s smile, which had just brightened, suddenly faded.

“Grandfather went to the garden to water the flowers the day before yesterday. When he got up, he wasn’t careful and twisted his waist. He’s getting old.”

The following four words struck Valerie’s heart directly, and she approached and sat beside Jayvion.

Holding his hand, a surge of emotions welled up in my heart.

Grandpa, I hope you live as long as Galen and stay healthy.

With this thought, Valerie’s eyes turned slightly red.

“Grandpa, you hurt your back, why didn’t you call and tell me?”
