Chapter 25 Just Wait and See

Derek returned to class.

He was shocked at the door by the scene in front of him.

He narrowed his eyes, looking Grey up and down vigilantly.

“What are you doing here again?”

Derek saw Valerie standing in front of Mica, holding a chair

Was Valerie ready to fight?

“Why do you come here so many times? If you find trouble with my classmates again, you’ll regret it.”

This was Derek’s ultimatum.

Grey’s anger was gone. He was full of deep fear.

“Let’s go!”

Grey glanced at Mica. Then he left the classroom with his followers, flustered and frustrated.

At that time, the bell rang.

The teacher walked slowly into the classroom.

Valerie let go of Mica’s arm and walked back to her seat.

“Valerie...”

Mica swallowed back his thanks.

He turned back and listened to the class.

Mica turned to look at Valerie from time to time. He grabbed the pen with both hands, trying to calm down his heartbeat.

His mind was full of Valerie's brave actions. His heart beat fast.

Mica reached out and pressed his chest.

His neck was flushed.

It was time to eat lunch. Valerie sorted out her books and planned to go to the canteen.

"Wait. Valerie!"

Mica came to Valerie with a red face.

"What's wrong?"

"Well, well... thank you! Thank you for helping me today. In return, I want to invite you to lunch!"

Looking at Mica, Valerie frowned slightly.

"Do you still have money? Didn't they take it away?"

"I have some money left."

Valerie didn't agree.

"Never mind. You can invite me later when you have enough money. Anyway, I will be at this school for several years."

Hearing Valerie's refusal, Mica was disappointed.

Most of the class didn't leave. Everyone pushed around and wanted to come forward to talk to Valerie...

After she sorted out her books, Valerie looked at Mica.

“Shall we eat together?”

“What? Of course. Let’s go!”

Mica was no longer disappointed. He put on a smile and followed Valerie.

Now the rest of the class was disappointed.

They wanted to talk to Valerie, but she ignored them.

Derek glanced at their reaction and had a cold smile.

He got up and went to the canteen alone.

“What should we do? We have done bad things to Valerie before...”

“Who told us to put nails under her desk?”

Some shrewd ones looked at Sarah. Sarah turned pale instantly.

Sarah stood up at once.

She was angry. “I didn’t ask you to put nails! You said you wanted to give her a lesson!”

Sarah felt wronged.

She just wanted to warn Valerie not to approach Derek, but she didn’t want to bully Valerie!

Everyone in the class kept their mouths shut.

Now that things had happened, it was good that Valerie hadn’t troubled them yet.

Valerie was good at fighting today. They realized she showed mercy for them.

There was a moment of silence. Then they began to discuss Valerie's brave action today.

This topic aroused everyone's resonance.

Those who were usually divided into two groups mixed together.

Everyone talked a lot about how handsome Valerie was.

Valerie, who went to the canteen, knew nothing.

"Mica, why are you targeted by them?"

"Ah. I don't know. On the second day of school, they suddenly came to me and said they wanted me to cover my face, otherwise, they would beat me..."

Face?

Valerie turned to look at Mica. She guessed, "Is Mica handsome without this pair of thick glasses?"

She asked, "So that's why you wear glasses?"

"I didn't wear them at first, but they pulled me over and beat me up. They said that girls didn't like them because of me... Then, they asked me for money every day. If I didn't give them money, they would beat me..."

Having said that, Mica's tears ran down his cheeks.

Valerie took out the paper towel in her pocket and handed it to him.

“You don’t have to wear glasses anymore. Anyway, your family will pick you up and drop you off. After arriving at school, you can wait for me at the bus stop. I will go with you.”

Mica looked at Valerie in surprise.

“Will I trouble you? You have helped me a lot, and you have been targeted by them. If you protect me again, maybe they...”

Valerie covered his mouth in time.

“You don’t have to thank me. I only do this for myself. If you say more, I won’t go with you.”

After saying that, Valerie left. Mica hurriedly trotted to keep up.

Valerie walked with a dull expression. Today, she came forward to help Mica and stood in front of him.

Valerie was thinking about her time in the orphanage.

She was bullied by other children. When she went out to beg, passers-by also bullied her.

At first, Valerie was full of expectations. She felt that kind people would help her.

So Valerie fought against those who bullied her every day.

Valerie felt that she shouldn’t die and that she should keep going.

But after repeated suppression, beating, and scolding, no one appeared at all.

Valerie had countless wounds on her body. She was desperate.

Well.

Kindness.

Law.

Justice.

All bullshit.

Once people had money and power, they would have their own desires.

Valerie worked so hard at the bottom of society.

But she had never been treated well by this so-called loving society.

She could only resist by herself.

Valerie saw Mica being pushed around today.

Valerie remembered that she was pressed to the ground, and they laughed wildly. They said she was abandoned.

Pebbles and eggs were thrown at Valerie. They kept beating and scolding her. She was unable to breathe.

Today Valerie stood up on impulse.

In the eyes of others, she was very kind to help someone who was bullied.

Actually, Valerie did it for herself.

She wished someone had helped her at that time.

What if...

“Valerie?” Mica carefully asked.

Valerie kept silent for a long time. She seemed unhappy.
