Chapter 150 The Dangerous Man in Black (1)

“I. I knew.”

Seeing Valerie not speaking, Sarah reluctantly took over her words.

Valerie is right, I can't speak recklessly anymore. If I continue to speak recklessly after going out, I will definitely get into trouble.

“Understood, you can freshen up and rest.”

Valerie spoke in a cold tone to Sarah.

After saying that, she left the living room and went back to her room to freshen up.

Sarah was left alone in the living room, too scared to move, neither walking nor staying.

In the end, she cautiously got up and walked toward the bathroom, avoiding making any big movements.

Slowly and leisurely, I stayed up until late at night before returning to the bedroom.

When Sarah woke up the next day, Valerie's room door was open, but she was nowhere to be found.

What did you go out to do again?

Sarah stood in the living room, wearing Valerie's other set of pajamas, and stared blankly, not knowing what to do all of a sudden. Search The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

She walked to the door and looked out through the peephole.

The little boy's curly head appeared once again on the other side of the cat's eye.

Sarah settled down and opened the door for him.

"Good morning, sister."

Because she was short, Sarah couldn't see everything in the cat's eye. After opening the door, she saw a little boy standing in front of her, holding a big backpack in his hands.

"This...you...good morning."

Sarah's mind was still muddled, but she replied with a "good morning" to the little boy.

The little boy smiled at Sarah and then came in carrying his school bag.

"Ah, did you come over carrying your backpack for something?"

After everyone sat down in the living room and took out a pile of homework, Sarah finally realized.

The little boy turned his head and earnestly explained to Sarah, word by word.

"My mother had to go to work today and couldn't help me with my homework, so she asked me to come to my sister's place."

It seemed like a regular customer, so Sarah curiously approached to see what he had been working on.

"Eddie?"

"Hmm? What's going on?"

Suddenly, Eddie Webb, who was called by name, looked up at Sarah.

"Nothing much, I just thought your name sounded nice."

"Yeah, I think so too. It's the name my mom gave me! See, did you remember me right away?"

No matter who I encountered,

Among the cured individuals was Sarah.

A wave of emotion swept through her heart as she looked at Eddie's smile. Suddenly, she felt the urge to work harder and was filled with motivation.

And Eddie's level of love for her increased steadily.

Who would refuse such a well-behaved, adorable child?

The loving mother sat beside Eddie, smiling, and occasionally helped him with his home work.

Sarah's heart was extremely satisfied.

Time passed by minute by minute, and it was already noon, but Valerie still hadn't returned. It seemed that I would have to find something to eat from the refrigerator myself.

While Eddie was doing his homework, Sarah came to the kitchen and opened the refrigerator to see what she could eat.

Just as she was about to get up and walk over, suddenly, from the living room window, she saw a person standing under the streetlight downstairs.

She caught a glimpse out of the corner of her eye, but it wasn't very clear. Sarah turned her head directly to look.

A man dressed entirely in black, wearing a black hat and a black mask, stood next to the street lamp downstairs.

These were all unimportant.

Because the man was looking straight up at the fourth floor, which was the direction of his own floor.

A chilling sensation and fear surged through her body from the bottom of her heart.

The heart was beating intensely, and it could be felt even from the outside.

Sarah felt a wave of fear and unease in her heart.

Eddie watched Sarah’s big movements and thought there was something interesting downstairs. Curiously, he got up and was about to look out the window.

“Don’t look!”

Intuition told Sarah not to let Eddie make eye contact with this man.

Eddie blinked his eyes, still not understanding what had happened.

However, such a strong sense of fear like just now was unprecedented.

She had to take this seriously.

“Wait for Valerie to come back and then let me know.”

Muttering to herself, she walked toward the living room with two plates of cooked frozen dumplings in her hands.

Eddie was lying by the window...

“Eddie?!”

However, she still approached without hesitation and pulled Eddie over.

"Sister, where are the wasps? I didn't see anything."

Sarah looked carefully downstairs, and there was no man's figure next to the street lamp.

"Ah..."

Sarah let out a long sigh and the heavy burden in her heart was finally lifted.

"It's okay, the wasp has flown away. Let's have lunch."

Eddie was also not polite, he directly sat at the dining table and enjoyed his meal.

But Sarah had no appetite because of this man.

The bad appetite continued until Valerie came back in the evening.

Sarah sat obediently in the living room, waiting for her to come back.

It was late at night, around eleven o'clock, when Valerie slowly climbed up the stairs to return home. Today was the day she had trained with Calvin, and Valerie was feeling particularly exhausted now.

"Hmm? Why haven't you washed up yet?"

I thought Sarah would fall asleep first, but the living room light was still on.

“What happened?”

Valeric looked at her expression.

Valerie’s eyes narrowed slightly.

“Go ahead, I’m listening.”

The training bag in her hand was casually placed at the entrance, and she wearily walked into the living room and sat across from her.

Sarah saw Valerie and immediately felt like she had found her soulmate.

Her peace of mind increased steadily.

“When I was having lunch today, I saw a person dressed in all black downstairs, wearing a black duckbill cap and a black mask, standing next to the street lamp downstairs.”

Speaking of this, Sarah became a little excited, her tone even rose a lot.

Valerie sat on the couch for a while and took out her phone. She sent Calvin some messages.

It was past one o’clock when he rubbed his neck and shook his head.

“A bit troublesome...”

Perhaps thinking of something, Valerie muttered a few words under her breath.

Putting aside the distractions in her mind, Valerie also went to wash up and go to bed.

It was 2:30 in the morning, far away from the city center, near an abandoned warehouse in the countryside,

There were no streetlights there, and it was pitch black all around, with overgrown weeds and the protection of the mountain behind.

It was difficult for anyone to notice that there was an unused warehouse at night,

An old van drove with dim headlights, slowly heading toward the warehouse,

The person who got out of the car was the man I saw downstairs on the fourth floor in the morning.

He, completely dark, directly blended into the night.

His figure was almost invisible.

The skilled person took the key in their hand and opened the warehouse door.

The poorly functioning desk lamp flickered on and off, emitting a buzzing sound.

He walked slowly, and the sound of his footsteps seemed so clear in the silent warehouse, which made people feel uneasy.

Walking toward the other side of the warehouse, he took out the key and opened the door. Inside, it was pitch black and emitted a strong musty smell.

Along with the musty smell, there were also the sounds of children crying.

He turned on the flashlight on his phone and shone it on the child inside.

This was a sign of a fracture,

Looked fearfully at the approaching person.

But when they recalled his merciless beating, they forcibly suppressed their voices.

“Hmph, in another week, we can just catch another one.”

Counting the number of children in the small room, the man in black nodded in satisfaction.

Recalling Sarah’s face, he secretly felt fortunate.

This was pretending Sarah to be Valerie.

“I didn’t expect it. Upon receiving the news, I thought there was only a high school student living here. I didn’t expect, I didn’t expect, there was also a little boy in the room...”

Looking at the tender and delicate skin, it could definitely be sold at a good price.

He didn’t even bother to take care of the burnt porridge.

After all, there were two new ones over there.

It doesn’t matter if one is missing.

The extra steamed bun, he gave it directly to the person with a broken bone.

“Eat, supplement some nutrition to restore the bones.”

Can two steamed buns nourish the bones?

This is obviously nonsense, but who dares to resist?

I could only silently take it and eat it slowly, with small bites and difficulty.

Watching them finish eating, the man finally satisfied, closed the door again and drove away.

“Boohoo, Dad, Mom...”

Finally, a child couldn't help but cry out.

The immense fear and sadness made them suffer greatly, and they could only shed tears to make themselves feel a little better.

Sarah never fell asleep.

She curled up in the blanket, thinking about a bunch of terrifying consequences.

With such thoughts, she couldn't fall asleep either.

In the pitch-black room, two big eyeballs were wide open.

Ever since she met that man, Sarah had a strong ominous premonition filling her mind.

“Didn't you sleep all night?”

Valerie, weakly responding, suddenly didn't know what to say.

“Hey, you should take care and rest.”

After saying that, Valerie closed the door. In the moment of closing it.

She put on the hat on her hoodie, along with a mask, hiding her entire face under the hat, making it impossible to see her face.

Sure enough, as soon as she went downstairs, she felt a scorching gaze staring straight at her.

This discomfort made Valerie furrow her brows, and her heart was

Her trembling hands betrayed her emotions.

She was also afraid.

But at least I had received some training, so I couldn't back down.

And she was willing to try to help Calvin as well.

Just that part in my heart needed to be more ruthless.

The man took out his phone and hid in the dark, recording Valerie's every move.

I took note of what her electric bike looked like, organized everything, and continued to wait there.

After all, he did see a little boy that day.

Sure enough, at 7:20, the little boy, carrying a small backpack, bounced downstairs and waited for his mother below.

He stood obediently downstairs, looking at the big sun today, and thinking in his heart that he must jump more ropes than the student in front of him in today's skipping competition.

Little did he know that he was also being filmed by a man, holding a cellphone, capturing his every move

"Eddie, let's go! We were going to be late!"

Eddie's mother anxiously shouted at Eddie, who was still staring at the flowers and plants.

Circled around the back of the fence, silently climbed out.

Sarah stood in the living room, afraid to look toward the window,

Afraid that man was still there.

But the fact proved that her worries were justified. If she had just curiously approached the glass, she would have been able to confront the man face to face.

There was a potential danger, and Sarah had no appetite at all now.

I barely ate a few bites of breakfast and lunch, and left them all on the table as cold dishes.

Just when she was still trembling and huddled on the living room sofa.

Suddenly, the door of the house was knocked.

At the moment it rang, Sarah clearly felt her heart beating rapidly, startling her limbs, even causing her toes to start throbbing.

The fear in my heart reached its peak.

She sat still on the sofa, holding her breath, thinking that this way the noise from outside wouldn't be heard.

Trembling, he took out the anti-wolf tools from his pocket, ready at any moment.

There was a piece of paper stuck on the bag.

Sarah unfolded curiously, not an invoice but a few lines of neatly written, elegant message.

"Little girl, I live downstairs, Phil Austin. That day, I saw you going upstairs with Valerie, but I understand that you must have your own reasons, so I didn't tell the police. Here are some food items I bought for you. Eat well and calm down. Once you have calmed down, see if you can go back home."

Phil's handwriting was strong and vigorous, yet it exuded an incredible warmth.

This note paper feels quite good when touched.

Sarah said she was not moved, but that was definitely false.

She looked at the pile of marinated snacks in the bag, and the price must have been expensive.

She was a little reluctant to eat.

Perhaps it was the sense of security in her heart, or maybe Phil's warm handwriting that brought Sarah some peace of mind.

The next day, Sarah arrived as promised and stood in front of Phil's door, hesitating for a few minutes.

Still, I approached and knocked on the door.

“Who is it?”

It was Phil's voice.

Not cold and fierce like others.

Phil's voice sounded even gentler than his words.

This action directly made Phil feel heartbroken.

A good child was treated like this by the people in the family.

If it were my own child, I wouldn't even have enough time to express how much I care!

But being an outsider, it was difficult to say anything, so all I could do was sigh heavily, expressing my dissatisfaction within.

"You said you are currently hiding at Valerie's house, without anyone noticing. In that case, since you can come to our place during the day, it's good to have someone to take care of you."

Recently, there has been news that cases of children going missing have started to proliferate again. It is evident that these are the deeds of those heartless human traffickers.

“Would it be too disturbing for you?”

“No, he won’t! Phil is very welcoming! You can talk to Beatrice, who knows, she might gradually get better.”

Sarah’s heart softened as she looked at Beatrice, who remained still and silent on the other side.

“As long as you don’t mind, Phil, I will come!”

Phil smiled happily when he received Sarah’s promise.

When he was happy, he also restrained himself and did not express his emotions as directly as others did.

“Sure! Sure! Come on in! Stay for dinner today! Phil will cook for you!”

He spoke and swiftly walked into the kitchen, taking out the fresh ingredients from the refrigerator, preparing to cook a delicious meal for Sarah.

Sarah couldn’t stop it and found herself alone in the living room, not knowing what to do. Search The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Watching as the small blanket slipped a bit off Beatrice, Sarah walked over and gently pulled it back up.

“Beatrice, hello, my name is Sarah.”

Whispering softly in Beatrice's ear, Sarah sat next to her when she saw no response from Beatrice, accompanying her to look outside the window.

Occasionally, I would glance at Beatrice to see if her little blanket had slipped off, and then I would carefully pull it back up to cover her.

In the kitchen, Phil watched the two people in the living room.

A wave of comfort and bitterness filled my heart.

If Leo were still here.

He would definitely be as well-behaved as Sally.
