Chapter 96 Kieran Breaks Down

Kieran quickly approached Zoec.

Looking at it with anticipation on his face.

Zoe furrowed her brow in an effort to recall Valerie's appearance today.

But she could only remember the sensation of Valerie patting her back.

"What did that sister look like?"

Kieran did not give up on questioning, staring at Zoe intently, hoping that it would say the answer he wanted.

But Zoe shook her head.

"That sister was wearing a hat and a mask; I couldn't see her face."

Kieran also didn't expect anything from Zoe anymore. What could a child understand?

The person who went out to play with her today was Tristan.

He went straight upstairs and arrived at the door of Tristan's room.

"Tristan, come out."

Kieran's veins started bulging on his forehead as he knocked on the door heavily, but there was no response from inside.

"Tristan, stop playing dead and open the door for me. If you don't open it soon . I'll kick it down!"

Kieran was knocking on the door.

Tristan. Lying in bed, suddenly became angry. For the first time, he frowned in disgust and quickly got off the bed.

Rudely opened the door.

“Do you have an illness?”

Tristan had long known that Kieran’s behavior did not scare him with his expression.

He forcefully pushed open Tristan’s door and looked into the pitch-black room. He turned on the lights in his own room.

“Did you go out with Zoe today and happen to meet a little girl who looked a lot like Valerie?”

Tristan, who was already frustrated because of Valerie’s situation, felt like a bomb exploding in his heart when Kieran said this.

“I don’t know, I didn’t see, don’t ask me.”

These three impatient responses made Kieran’s accumulated irritability explode in the past few days.

“Speak to me properly! Why do you get so angry when I ask you something?”

Tristan laughed as he looked at Kieran.

“Didn’t I already answer you? Why are you being aggressive? What’s wrong? Now that Valerie is gone, and you don’t have anyone to take your anger out on, you’re targeting me?”

Kieran’s face turned black immediately.

But he forcibly held back.

“Did you answer the question, did you see Valerie?”

“No, I don’t know. How is it possible for her to be at the amusement park when she can’t even be found now! Even if I did see her, I wouldn’t tell you!”

Tristan's tone was icy as he faced Kieran, he directly placed his hand on the door, wanting to drive him out

The sound of the two people confronting each other reached the entire household, and Bruce and Reese came out of their rooms.

"What are you doing? Why are you arguing?"

Reese was in the room, chatting with his brother about Valerie's news, when he heard an argument between Kieran and Tristan.

His dissatisfaction was also intensified.

The more I thought about it, the more I felt resentful,

This Valerie, she made a mess at home!

He opened the door and walked toward Tristan's room, watching as the two children glared at each other with dark expressions on their faces.

"What happened? Why did they argue?"

"No arguments."

Kieran returned first, sighed, and wearily answered Reese.

Tristan didn't want to communicate with them anymore, and he slammed the door of the room shut.

The loud sound of the door closing made Reese's anger explode instantly.

But he did not appear directly, only increased his breathing, and his chest rose and fell.

"Kieran, what did you ask?"

"Zoe went to the amusement park with Tristan today and said she saw a little girl who looked a lot like Valerie, so I came over to ask."

What caused such a situation?

Reese heard about Valerie's situation and clicked his tongue.

Chapter 97 Move Out

Kieran silently vented in the room.

He returned to his original appearance.

He wiped his eyes, picked up his phone once again, and once again asked his friend to pay attention to Valerie's message.

No matter how long ago it was, as long as there was news about Valerie, he hoped that his brother could come and give him the news.

After sending this message, he called Felipe.

"Boss?"

Just as Felipe arrived home from work, the chair hadn't even warmed up yet when he nervously stood up in his own house.

"Could you help me buy a suite closer to the company, preferably fully furnished and ready for me to move in directly?"

"Ah? Alright, alright. Does the boss have any requirements? Like lighting or something?"

"No, as long as there was a place to stay."

After saying that, he hung up the phone.

Took off the coat and shoes, and just lay on the bed.

Just finished venting and crying, drowsiness overwhelmed his eyes.

Long time no see, Kieran closed his eyes heavily and fell into a deep sleep.

When they had a dispute. Reyna would always be downstairs, watching. She tightly clenched her hands, with a worried look in her eyes.

Looking up at the second floor, although she couldn't see, she clearly heard the sound.

Her heart was pounding, her limbs were cold, if it continued later, she would definitely go up and take a look.

But soon, the argument voices disappeared.

She returned to the restaurant with cold sweat all over her body.

Zoe, who was having dinner at the restaurant, heard the argument between her brothers and father.

The fork in her hand also stopped moving.

She looked at Reyna with a bit of fear.

"It's okay, it's okay. Your brothers had some matters to discuss, so it ended like this."

Zoe nodded her head without saying a word.

Mom lied.

Mingming's brothers did mention about their sister.

She pouted a little sadly. That girl at the amusement park today really looked like my sister.

They all silently and gently faced themselves.

She really liked her older sister.

But the older sister was gone.

All of a sudden, Zoe felt that the food on her plate had lost its deliciousness.

“Mom, I am full.”

“Zoe? You only ate so little? Eat a bit more, so that you can grow taller.”

Reyna took Zoe’s fork and fed her once again.

The house was silent.

It was really cold.

The next day, Kieran packed his luggage and came out, pulling a large suitcase.

The family members were not surprised.

thought he was going abroad for a business trip again.

No one greeted him..

Only the newly arrived Ramon, respectfully said to Kieran at the door.

“Master, have a safe journey.”

Looking at the new butler who was bowing slightly at the door.

Kieran remembered that every time he went out, he would smile and watch Ja yvion go on his journey.

This gentle grandfather, however, on that evening, directly left the Horton family along with Valerie.

Kieran chuckled self-deprecatingly.

Nodding at Ramon, he did not greet anyone in his family.

He left here silently without a trace.

He needed some time alone now.

Tristan watched as Kieran walked away through the crack in the curtains.

He looked at the suitcase that Kieran was pulling.

The teeth bit.

“Coward.”

These three words filled his mind throughout the night.

The eyes became even more ruthless and cold.

He pulled out the suitcase that had just been closed not long ago and started stuffing things into it again.

“Huh? Tristan, didn’t you just come back? What are you going to do?”

In the living room, Reyna, who was reading picture books with Zoe, saw Tristan coming out with a suitcase.

She was shocked.

“The house was too noisy, I couldn’t create, so I went back to Woodvale.”

Zoe's head also lifted from the picture book, and she blinked her eyes to look at Tristan who was about to leave.

She suddenly smiled brightly.

"Tristan! Good luck in the competition!"

Tristan, who was putting on his shoes at the entrance, paused for a moment.

His current mood can be described as a mix of emotions.

Turning her head, she looked at Zoe, who was lying on the sofa, smiling at her self and saying goodbye.

His heart began to waver a little.

But it was only for a moment, and then he put on his smiling mask again.

"Okay, Zoe. Brother will definitely compete well. You have to be good at home , okay."

After speaking, he opened the door and went to the underground garage. He got into his car and left the Horton family without wasting any time.

I watched as the two children left home one after another.

There was one more who ran away,

Reyna's emotions had reached their lowest point in the past few days.

Facing Zoe's question, she couldn't muster much laughter to answer her.

Just saying that the family has been too busy recently.

Zoe, who was still reading a picture book, suddenly looked at Reyna.

"Mom, when did sister come back?"

Kasa...

Reyna's heart finally cracked under the high pressure of these past few days.

She approached Zoe and tightly hugged her, starting to sob.

"Mom?"

Zoe was puzzled.

But Reyna's crying also made Zoe feel uneasy.

But she didn't know what had happened.

She could only stretch out her little hand and pat Reyna's back again and again.

Reyna cried even harder.

Reese heard Reyna crying in the room and quickly put down his phone.

Entered the living room.

"Wife? What happened, wife?"

Reese asked Reyna with concern.

But Reyna didn't answer, she just held Zoe and sobbed.

Reese could only sit on the sofa, accompanying the mother and daughter, feeling helpless.

"Zoe, do you know why Mom was crying?"

"I didn't know... In the morning, Kier went out with a suitcase, and Tristan went out too, saying they were going to have a good competition. Maybe mom couldn't bear to let them go."

Reese had developed dark circles under her eyes.

He smiled helplessly and ruffled Zoe's head.

I gently hugged Reyna.

“Okay, stop crying, stop crying. It’s not the first time we’ve seen them go on a trip, why cry?”

Reyna suddenly looked up and glared at Reese.

“They were big, capable, able to take care of themselves. But what about Valerie? She just ran away like that; how would she take care of herself?”

My own wife also mentioned Valerie, but this time Reese did not retort.

After all, she was my wife.

Reyna saw Reese not speaking, just listening to herself speak.

She sniffed her runny nose.

“Reese, I have been following you for so many years. You started your company from scratch and have achieved what you have now. During this time, I have listened to your words and followed your suggestions.”

I never asked you to do anything to fulfill my wish.

But this time, please, can you publicly look for Valerie?

With the help of everyone’s strength? Valerie is just a child, never mind why she changed, let’s find her first, and then we can solve it properly.

“Our/family’s reputation is already big enough, where else do you want it to go?”

Reyna couldn’t continue speaking and started sobbing again.

Reese’s body stiffened.

This was the first time Reyna had begged like this.

He was about to explode with inner turmoil!

He supported his forehead with both hands, began to sink into deep thought, and then let out a big sigh.

“I knew...”

Chapter 99 The Mysterious Vlogger

Valeric disappeared; it has been almost ten years.

In the third year, Reese gave up searching for Valerie.

In his mind, he must have already concluded that Valerie was dead.

Why is there no information at all?

Since that time Kieran left home, he would only come back to gather with his family on holidays every year.

The rest of the time, he hardly ever went home.

Tristan was practically fixed in Woodvale.

I occasionally went back home.

While Bruce, in the third year, Reese gave up searching for Valerie, he locked himself in a room for a long time.

After coming out again, he was even more indifferent than before.

But she would still smile at Zoe.

Just like that, ten years passed.

These three men also became more weathered and matured.

And Reese, his health also began to deteriorate gradually.

But they lacked soul.

After all, how could something made by a machine ever surpass something personally handcrafted?

In the evening, in a large room of the Fisher family, a desk lamp was still on. Just finished washing up, Valerie wrapped her freshly washed hair in a towel. At this moment, she was operating the computer in front of her with a serious expression.

She was editing the video she had taken today, frame by frame,

“Please come in.”

She answered casually.

The door of the room also opened gently.

Derek held a cup of warm milk in his hand.

I came in and saw a dim room with only a desk lamp on.

Valerie sat hunched on the chair, her eyes fixed on the computer screen.

“Val, you never blow-dried your hair.”

Derek’s deep and magnetic voice came from the doorway.

There was also a gentle closing sound of the door.

“Ah, editing videos, I forgot.”

Reminded by Derek, Valerie suddenly remembered that she had not blow-dried her hair.

I smiled apologetically at Derek.

I was just about to put my feet down from the chair and walk toward the bathroom to get the hairdryer.

On her shoulder, Derek's hand rested, pushing her back.

"Okay, just sit there, continue working on your video."

"Ah? I, I can do it myself..."

Derek didn't speak and looked at Valerie with a slightly serious expression.

"You did it yourself? Aren't you always blowing halfway and then giving up to continue cutting? And then you let your hair stay half wet, catching a cold directly?"

Valerie was speechless.

The fact is indeed so.

But she really didn't want Derek to help her blow.
