

Rebirth Of The God Of War Chapter 14 by Chilton Buntun

Chapter 14 Hunger (Part One)

"Mom, I'm so scared. I want to go home!"

"Shut up! Do you really want to die? If you do, then get out of here!"

All kinds of voices gradually sounded in the rooms. They were the survivors on the mountain. Some of them were sobbing while some were groaning. Others were crying and murmuring something. Worse was some had already gone insane.

These rooms were in a hotel not far from the mountaintop. When a large number of cavemen began to attack humans crazily, many people took shelter here.

Those who didn't make it had turned into bones.

Cavemen cherished food so much. Every piece of flesh, every internal organ, and even the bone marrow, they would swallow it as long as they could get it into their mouths.

These cavemen roamed all over the mountain, reaping human lives. Their presence brought great fear to humans' hearts. No one even realized that these monsters were not that strong. Therefore, only very few cavemen had been killed by some humans who had fought back because of fear. The rest of these cavemen had enjoyed the richest meal in their lives.

After living in peace for a long time, humans had become accustomed to a comfortable life. So in front of these low-level monsters, they were so scared that some wetted their pants and some even died in horror.

Such humans could hardly be considered as prey to these monsters. At most, they were more like pieces of meat that could walk.

"Aileen, what are we going to do? The monsters are here." In a room, a young woman with a round face curled up in another young woman's arms. Her hair was in disarray, and her face was covered with sweat, tears, mud, and reddish-brown bloodstains.

Aileen Evans was the student from the art school who asked Calvin to make room for her and her classmates to take photos this morning.

At this time, Aileen and the round-faced girl had long lost the excitement and joy they had while hiking the mountain. There was nothing on their faces now but exhaustion and panic.

They had no idea where these monsters came from.

Moreover, these monsters were actually eating humans. Aileen never met such monsters in her life. Right now, she felt like her world collapsed all of a sudden. She didn't understand why the world became completely unfamiliar in the blink of an eye.

"Dora, don't worry. It should be safe here. The boys already blocked the door, so those monsters can't come in."

Although Aileen was also scared to death, her mind was obviously stronger. She comforted the round-faced girl, Dora Baker.

"But Aileen, I'm so scared. What if we can't go down the mountain anymore? What if we die here?"

When the red mist just started to appear, Aileen and her classmates had planned to leave the mountain. However, when they were halfway down, they found that an invisible barrier blocked their way. They tried every means to pass through, but they failed. Eventually, they decided to change directions. However, they still couldn't move forward. It was as if all of them were bound in a giant glass bowl.

Later, they heard horrible screams and roars from the top of the mountain. Those short monsters came out of nowhere and began attacking and biting people crazily. Aileen and her classmates ran around, and they scattered in all directions. Dora, Aileen, and another classmate ran up the mountain together.

Unfortunately, when they arrived at the house, their classmate fell to t he ground and was immediately surrounded by several monsters. Through the window, Aileen and Dora watched how those monsters dismembered and ate their classmate.

Such a bloody scene made Aileen tremble with fear. But still, she managed to say to Dora in a trembling voice, "We will be fine. Someone will definitely notice what is happening here and come to save us."

"But we can't even go out. What if the people outside can't get in here either?" Dora said without realizing that she had actually blurted out the sad reality. Aileen's face turned pale at once. She had never thought of this before. Now, she fell into silence and could no longer stay positive.

Calvin's consciousness was still immersed in that magical world. The countless light points seemed to have heard his call and longing and rushed towards him one after another. In the real world, a whirlpool appeared in the sky above the fort and the red mist began to revolve erratically.

A large amount of mutant energy was drawn to the center of the whirlpool where Calvin was.

Calvin sat cross-legged. But anyone who would take a closer look would find that he was not sitting on the ground. Instead, he was an inch off the ground, suspended in midair.

His body was constantly trembling as the mutant energy turned into visible white mist and seeped through his every pore.

The mutant energy that entered his body instantly combined with his cells. On the one hand, it constantly stimulated the potential of his cells. On the other hand, it promoted the evolution of his cells. His strength, speed, physique, and so on had greatly improved. As for how much progress he had made, it was still unknown.

While promoting the evolution of Calvin's body, a large amount of mutant energy that could not be absorbed gradually gathered in his heart. This process lasted for a while. Then, a tiny transparent core the size of a sesame seed condensed in the center of his heart.

When this tiny core was formed, a meteor shower suddenly appeared in his world of consciousness, and countless lights fell like rain.

At this moment, Calvin woke up and opened his eyes. He felt hungry, extremely hungry!

He didn't feel the evolution of his body or the increase in his strength at once. All he felt was hunger. It was so extreme that he couldn't describe how he felt. He had never experienced it before. It seemed that the hunger was not coming from his stomach but from every cell of his body.

Calvin's appearance had changed a lot. It seemed that he had lost a lot of weight and could even be described as skinny. His face was sallow, and his eyes were sunken. The fats and flesh in his body disappeared as if they had evaporated.

Intense hunger was enough to drive anyone crazy.

Calvin grabbed the backpack at his feet with trembling hands and poured out all its contents. Then, he picked a toothpaste-like tube with his left hand, tore it open with his teeth, and squeezed the content out into his mouth desperately. He had prepared these tubes of high-concentration nutrient solution beforehand.

His hunger subsided a little after eating all the tubes of nutrient solution in his backpack. But they were not enough at all. He had to eat more.

"Damn it! I didn't see this coming!" Calvin panted heavily, his chest heaving violently. The oxygen that his lungs could get from the air was not enough to satisfy his body's need at all.
