i am the ruler of all chapter 341-“Boss, I have news from The Anonymous.”

“What news?”

“This morning, The Anonymous sent a message to Hades, saying that they managed to detect the address of the admin of Sweoya’s spy website!”

Kingsley’s eyes lit up when he heard the news. “Where is it? Is it in Diosna City?!”

Back then when he interrogated Tyler and Felix, Felix once said that the two Sweoyans who sold them the Spearhead Group’s explosives were hiding somewhere in Diosna City.

Kingsley speculated that those two were the members of Earthworm spy team of Sweoya.

Moreover, it was very likely that these two members, just like Karl Osberg and Jonas Kolstad, were used as baits to cover the real website administrator.

If the two baits were hidden in Diosna City, then the mysterious website admin must also be hiding in Diosna City!

Sure enough, hearing Kingsley’s speculation, Lance replied, “Yes. The address they found was located in Diosna City! The specific address is a demolition village in Nakson! It is sparsely populated and extremely secluded, which is very suitable for...”

Kingsley no longer digested Lance’s following sentences.

He was well aware that he would miss those spies again this time!

Wasn’t the demolition village in Nakson, Diosna City, the place where Serena hid?

Kingsley rubbed his temples in exhaustion.

Why didn’t he think of that earlier?!

Someone as cautious as Serena would choose that village as her hiding place!

That fact itself was enough to prove that Diosna City must be the most suitable place to hide oneself!

The spies from Sweoya were all veterans. How could they give up on such a perfect place to hide?!

Hearing that there was no response on the phone, Lance inquired, "Boss, shall we order soldiers to raid their hiding place?"

"There's no need for that." Kingsley sighed. "There's been a riot this morning. The spies aren't fools. They probably escaped long ago!"

His speculations were right.

In order to rescue Paige and Serena, Diosna City Military District and Cleapolis Military District dispatched a total of two corps to surround the demolished village.

Even the provincial military district dispatched four ground attack fighter jets!

The scene was massively threatening!

When the soldiers killed Pierre and the rest, the mysterious website manager and two other spies who sold the munitions were in the same village as them!

When the three spies saw the battle, they almost urinated on the spot!

They thought that their identities were exposed. They mistakenly assumed that they had attracted the army of Qustia, and that the army was preparing to launch a cleanup against them!

Just as the three spies were about to commit suicide with bombs, they discovered that the helicopters and fighter jets were not targeting them at all!

Instead, they were focusing on some other tasks!

Seeing that, the three Sweoyan spies breathed a sigh of relief!

It was such a frightening experience for them that they fell into a daze.

After Kevin and Vernon took the people away, they immediately sorted out all the equipment and fled back to Cleapolis in a hurry!

Originally, they hid in Diosna City in order to carry out espionage activities throughout Solaris Province with the provincial capital as the center.

However, after what happened today, they realized that the provincial capital was too dangerous!

A fighter jet was dispatched without any announcement! Who could have taken it well?

Therefore, all of them scrambled back to Cleapolis!

Once they completed the preparations to build an impeccable spy network in Cleapolis, they would slowly make plans to expand into the provincial capital of Diosna City...

Kingsley sighed again and said to Lance, "Even if they have run away, order the soldiers of Diosna City Military District to clean up the entire demolition village. They might be able to get some clues from there."

"Yes, sir!" Lance responded and continued reporting, "Boss, Kenny's army have been patrolling Thinking Cup Coffee all this while, but they haven't found any clues about Stork..."

i am the ruler of all chapter 342-"Stork is the leader of Earthworm, so naturally, he'd be more cautious and cunning than most. Have Shane keep an eye on him at all times; we cannot afford even the tiniest oversight," Kingsley ordered. "I'll be heading back to Cleapolis tonight after I tie up the loose ends here in Diosna City. We'll talk about this in depth when I see you tomorrow."

Upon hearing that Kingsley was going back to Cleapolis, Lancer quickly said, "Boss, there's something else you should know about—the Anonymous appears to be right here in Diosna City."

"What?" Kingsley's eyes lit up when he heard this.

While the world was currently in the midst of a decade-long peace, the strife under this thin veneer of harmony was still raging on. The large number of spies being sent into Qustia by other countries near the border was proof of this. It was only a matter of time before an information, intelligence, and technology war broke out. There would be no firearms and no cannon fodder, only cyber attacks that could cripple a government from within.

Take the web manager for example. If Qustia had technology that rivaled Sweoya, then there would be no need for them to rely on the Anonymous, whose loyalty had yet to be verified, to gather intelligence.

On the flip side, if the military could uncover the Anonymous' identity and recruit them as a military organization, then the army's technological advancement could very well reach new heights. The military of Qustia could take the lead in this espionage war if that came to pass.

But even if the Anonymous' debut had launched them into the league of the top five hacker organizations in the world, not to mention, being the first hacker organization the military of Qustia had paid attention to recently, there was still the issue of their elusiveness.

No one knew anything about the head of the organization, its members and its location. As such, even if the military wanted to pull some strings or rub elbows with them, it would still be quite a challenge.

Consequently, the military had to beg for the Anonymous to gather intel with the promise of a ludicrous reward.

This was why Kingsley had been excited to hear that the renowned hacker group was here in Diosna City. If he could just track the Anonymous down and find out who was behind the organization, then perhaps he could make them part of the technology department in Coliree Island.

From there, he could sharpen the Anonymous' cyber prowess like a sword and use them to stab through their enemy's heart!

"Send me whatever information you have on the Anonymous," Kingsley said to Lancer. "They're vital to our espionage, and I have to personally meet with the head of the organization."

"Coliree is all I have at the moment," Lancer admitted ruefully. "I only learned of their location because they slipped up during the collaboration and told me they were at Solaris University in Diosna City."

Kingsley frowned at this. “Solaris University? Is the head of the Anonymous a professor there or something?”

“Maybe,” Lancer said. “The Solaris University of Computer Science, which was what the university was originally known as, is alma mater to the CEO of the largest software producer in the country. There could be a powerful hacker hiding among the faculty.”

“Got it. I’ll drop by the university and check things out for myself,” Kingsley said. Then, he saw Serena peering in his direction and added over the phone, “I have a couple of things to take care of here. We’ll talk about this when we meet in Cleapolis. As for Stork, make sure you keep a close eye on him and call me if anything goes wrong.”

With that, he hung up and returned to Serena’s side. “Serena, I need to stay here for a while, so you’ll have to go back to Cleapolis alone.”

“Did something happen, Kingsley?” Serena asked worriedly. “Should I stay here with you just in case you need help?”

“No, I’ll be fine,” he said with a shake of his head. “I’m just meeting a few friends whom I’ve known for ages. It’s a reunion, so there’s nothing to worry about.” He grinned as he added, “Besides, you still have to go back and deal with Tyler. I bet that guy’s been tortured to the brink of death.”

She nodded, then smiled as she said, “You’re right. I’ve been away for more than a month now, and I should probably return to the company to see how everything’s going.”

Read Novel i am the ruler of all chapter 343

i am the ruler of all chapter 343-“I think you should too. Also, you should probably stop taking missions from the Assassins Market and stick to your job at the company,” Kingsley advised with a chuckle. “I can’t believe they are labeling you as a measly tier two assassin. They are letting a talent like you go to waste! You’re heaps better than that, and you deserve better than having to take odd jobs.”

He was only saying this because he was worried about Serena’s safety. He didn’t like that she had to risk herself just to fulfill tasks from the Assassins Market.

However, after hearing what he said, Serena countered in astonishment, “How did you know I was a tier two assassin? Have you been to the company?”

“There was a guy from the company—David, who took on a mission from the Assassins Market, but he slipped up and hurt Reese by mistake.” Kingsley saw no point in hiding this fact, so he went on to say, “When I interrogated him, he told me he partnered up with you once and that your alias was Black Turtle. He mentioned you were both tier two assassins.”

Serena was shocked when she heard this. “What? Reese’s hurt?” she asked incredulously. Then, she added, “I’ll go back to Cleapolis to see her right away, Kingsley. You take care in the meantime!”

“Relax, Serena. She’s fine now; she’s already recovered,” he said as he pulled out his phone and typed out a text, then sent it. “Anyway, if you want to go back to dispose of Tyler, just give Lancer a call. I just texted you his number.”

Serena nodded anxiously and did not ask who Lancer was. All she wanted to do now was to get home and make sure Reese was alright. To her, it did not matter if Tyler was dead or alive, not while her sister was probably still nursing her wounds back home.

Upon seeing how restless Serena was, Kingsley did not waste time and immediately turned to Kevin, saying, “Captain Leonard, you’re heading back to Cleapolis now, aren’t you? I’m going to need you to give my sister a lift.”

“Yes, sir!” Kevin replied firmly. He looked at Serena and said respectfully, “Miss Langley, this way, please.”

Before following Kevin, Serena threw her arms around Kingsley and gave him a tight hug, then said, “Come straight home after you finish your business here, Kingsley, you hear me? I’ll be waiting for you at home.”

“I know, Serena. Don’t worry about me.”

After sending her off, Kingsley walked into the elevator, which took him to the Sunshine Casino on the lower-sixth level.

Presently, Leoric and his men were looting the place.

When he registered Kingsley's arrival, he walked up to him and greeted respectfully, "Mr. Nicholson!"

Kingsley nodded in acknowledgment. "So, how's everything going down here? Did you guys find anything valuable?"

"Mr. Nicholson, we really hit the jackpot this time! You won't believe how much cash Xanxus had hidden here in Sunshine Casino! There must be millions!" Leoric's face was flush with excitement. "It's right there in the last secret vault. Come on, I'll show you!"

Leoric led the way to Xanxus' office, whereupon he opened the hidden room behind the bookshelf. There, they saw the secret vault that measured up to about forty square feet.

Leoric's men were checking the valuables stored up in the vault when the door opened. At the sight of Kingsley, they quickly put down the items they were holding and greeted in reverence, "Mr. Nicholson."

Nodding at them, Kingsley swept his gaze over the room. The forty square feet of the space was taken up by stack upon stack of bills, which was quite the sight to behold. Aside from the cash, there were also jewelry and antique vases. This was a treasure trove indeed!

The most shocking part of this discovery was the dozen or so guns propped up in one corner of the room, with crates of matching ammunition stacked up on the ground. The two boxes of explosives sent over by Tyler were here as well.

"This must be Xanxus' prized nest," Kingsley concluded with a humorless smile. "Now, all this belongs to you."

These words struck Leoric like a lightning bolt. He stiffened, then gaped at Kingsley as his face turned red. He was hyperventilating as he asked, flabbergasted, "Are you serious, Mr. Nicholson? Do you mean... Are you saying you're giving all this to the Jeanne Gang?"

"That's not all, of course," Kingsley drawled, waving his hand dismissively. "While Xanxus' men have all been arrested, the consequences of their illegal activities have not affected Sunshine Casino, surprisingly. I'm in charge of it for the time being, but I've decided that I'm going to give the entire casino to Jeanne as my warmest regards."

i am the ruler of all chapter 344-Leoric was stunned speechless, and so were his men. The room was so quiet that one could hear a pin drop.

While Jeanne was one of the Seven Legends, her forces were nowhere close to being on Xanxus' level before his fall from grace; Sunshine Casino alone was worth three Jeanne D'Arcs. Then again, such power was what made Xanxus so full of himself, and why he had so unabashedly sent forth his men to Cleapolis to infiltrate and seize Victoria's territory.

Presently, Leoric gulped loudly as he asked, "M-Mr. Nicholson, are you actually handing Sunshine Casino over to us? It's a huge business, and even Jarett would drool over it!"

"Yeah, I don't think Jarett's going to come swooping in with a protest," Kingsley said calmly. "Jeanne will officially be the new owner of this casino from now on." He clapped a hand on Leoric's shoulder, then added, "Besides, with the northern side of Cleapolis so close by, you'd be the best person to oversee operations here. Go back and tell Jeanne you'll be in charge of running the casino, got it?"

"I-I'll be in charge?" Leoric could hardly believe his own ears. He was going to be in charge of Sunshine Casino, a place where he previously had neither right nor rank to step foot in! He must be dreaming, he believed, but the pain that shot through his knees as he fell in front of Kingsley in overwhelming gratitude and reverence assured him that this was real life.

"Thank you, Mr. Nicholson!" he said earnestly. "Thank you!"

"On your feet," Kingsley said. "There's no need to thank me. If you really want to show your gratitude, then take care of the casino for Jeanne."

He was only being so generous to Leoric because he had helped Yvonne and Joshua in their time of need. It was no small feat for a thug to reach out and help the less fortunate, which was a noble deed and warranted praise. Kingsley was relieved that Victoria had Leoric as her right-hand man.

Leoric, on the other hand, did not think much of this and went on to bow his head. "Don't you worry, Mr. Nicholson. I'll do anything Jeanne asks of me and I won't let her down!"

Exasperated by the man's extreme show of gratitude, Kingsley gave him a soft nudge with his foot and said, "Okay, that's enough. Pack up and go back to Cleapolis. You're going to need reinforcements if you want to take over the reins in Sunshine Casino, and a dozen of you here simply will not do."

"Yes, you're right, Mr. Nicholson. I'll go back to Cleapolis right away!" Leoric got to his feet, and his face was so flushed that he looked like he was drunk. "Come on, boys, we've got to get back and tell Jeanne the good news!"

Kingsley added before Leoric left, "If Jeanne asks, just tell her that I go by Nicholson, and that's all she needs to know."

"Roger that!" Leoric grinned. "I've got you covered, Mr. Nicholson."

With that, he left his men here in the secret room to go through the loot and happily drove back to Cleapolis, then made his way to Jeanne D'Arc as soon as he got to the city.

Jeanne D'Arc was a three-story building that featured Regency elements. From the outside, it looked like a Georgian terrace house.

This was the Jeanne Gang's headquarters, the base from which Victoria ran her operations and managed the affairs of the gang.

Granted, she neither was as powerful as Xanxus had been nor had an impressive casino as the main headquarters. In fact, most of the gang was scattered throughout the bars and karaoke lounges in Cleapolis, but at the center of all these joints was none other than Jeanne D'Arc.

While Leoric was pulling into the basement car park of the building, Victoria was lounging on the couch in her office with her phone pressed to her ear.

She was twenty-five this year, just a couple of months younger than Serena, but the two girls could not be more different.

Where Serena's alluring looks hid a cold and ruthless demeanor, Victoria had a decidedly more intrepid nature, and her bold beauty matched it perfectly.

She lay on the couch wearing nothing more than an oversized white blouse, and her long legs were clad in flesh-colored stockings. Thankfully for her, the blouse was long enough to cover the tops of her thighs, preventing what would have otherwise been an unfortunate wardrobe malfunction, but at the same time playing up an inevitably provocative appeal.

Read Novel i am the ruler of all chapter 345

i am the ruler of all chapter 345-Victoria's long legs were crossed and propped up on the armrest of the couch, dangling ever so slightly. She was the picture of indulgence, and her fair looks made her even more alluring combined with her insouciance. Anyone who stumbled upon this sight would think she was just another beautiful young woman who was on the phone with her best friend.

The atmosphere would have been a heartwarming one had there not been the startling sight of four muscular men guarding the office door. They looked out of place, seemingly intimidating in their black suits and their arms behind their backs, standing straight like they were cadets waiting to greet their superiors.

The scars on their faces gave them a vicious air, making them look like guardians who would not hesitate to take down intruders.

They had their gaze fixed on a spot on the wall, but regardless of how stunning Victoria looked at the moment, none of these four men dared to steal a glance at her. On the contrary, they looked terrified of her, if not, outwardly respectful.

As far as they were concerned, Victoria was no ordinary woman. She was their boss; the commander of their gang and the one who would deal the harshest punishments should they act out of line.

"Hey, Court, have you been staying up late cramming for tests?" Victoria asked lazily as she twirled a lock of her hair around her finger. "Did anyone pick on you at school? Should I send a few of my men over to watch your back?"

At once, Courtney's voice cried out from the other line, "Victoria, you have to stop treating me like a child! In case you haven't noticed, I'm already a college student!"

Upon hearing this, Victoria smiled and pointed out, "You're my baby sister. You could be graduating college for all I care, but you'll always be a kid to me. It's my duty to protect you."

Courtney explained wearily, “My friends are all terrified of you, and they tell me just as much during our reunions. Look, it wasn’t easy for me to switch to another city just to go to college here, so please do not mess this up for me by sending your goonies over.”

A smile curled on Victoria’s lips when she heard Courtney’s plead, and she found herself reminiscing the good old days when Courtney was a kid in grade school and she went to the junior high next to it.

Back then, she had already made a name for herself as the most intimidating girl in junior high. She would often wait by the grade school entrance with her goonies behind her while threatening the other pipsqueaks not to pick on Courtney.

Things got even worse by the time Courtney started junior high.

Victoria had taken it upon herself to have the biggest bully in Courtney’s school roughed up even though he hadn’t done anything to deserve it. He was close to being beaten into a pulp as she warned him icily, “If my sister gets picked on by the other kids, it’ll be your fault for not looking out for her, and I’ll make sure you pay dearly for it.”

Since then, Courtney could not go anywhere around school without having a few goonies tailing her, protecting her, and making sure no one was giving her a hard time. If they slipped up, then their poor leader would have to take a beating for their carelessness.

When Courtney was in her senior year in high school, she had a homeroom teacher who played favorites. He had given her position as the study hall monitor to the disciplinary teacher’s son, which left Courtney sulking for a while.

Once Victoria had learned of the details, she went over to the homeroom teacher’s house with two dozen of her men to teach him a lesson.

The next day, the homeroom teacher, missing three of his front teeth, ended up getting down on his knees in front of Courtney and begged her not to have gang members attack him or his family home after this.

All in all, Victoria had always been the femme fatale whose name struck fear into the hearts of her peers, be it in school or in society. As for Courtney, she grew up sheltered.

At the thought of this, Victoria chuckled and said, “The older girls aside, the only other sisters I have are you, Yulia, and Jessica. Yulia’s a supermodel with a figure to die for, and she dresses up so well that most men would fight to protect her; Jessica, on the other hand, has a temperament odd enough to ward off most people, so she has neither friends nor enemies who could potentially pick on her. You’re the only one who looks like a kid and acts like one, and heaven knows what’s going on in that oddball brain of yours. If you don’t need my protection, then who does?”

Without thinking, Courtney blurted out, “What about Kingsley?! Why don’t you go coddle him instead?”

The words had only just left her mouth when she realized she had said something wrong.

Read Novel i am the ruler of all chapter 346

i am the ruler of all chapter 346-The seven sisters had made a pact not to interfere in each other’s work and personal life. After all, with seven of them, it would be hard to avoid conflict when it was time for them to make their own choices in life and individual careers.

As such, they stopped keeping in touch after they grew up and carved out lives of their own. The only times they gathered were during the holidays like New Year’s, when they would drop by the orphanage to pay Joseph a visit.

However, they all knew the real reason why they hardly ever kept in touch, and it was one that they did not wish to dive into—Kingsley.

Every time the girls got together, they couldn’t help thinking about their brother, who had gone missing and left their hearts broken since. It would be like ripping the bandaid off a still-fresh wound and provoking the painful memories that they had buried in the recesses of their minds.

That said, it wasn’t as if they cut each other off completely. Serena, for example, was rarely at home given the nature of her work, and she saw no point in buying a house on her own, so she moved in with Reene instead.

As for Victoria, she was constantly worried about Courtney, who was in college, and she would call the latter every once in a while to catch up and wire her money for her allowance. But seeing as Victoria's line of work did not coincide with Reene's they hardly spoke, and with Reene's company getting busier these days, she simply could not catch a break long enough to give any of her siblings a call.

Consequently, she did not tell them about Kingsley's return.

Even now, Victoria was still oblivious to the fact that her brother had come back to Cleapolis safe and sound, and she did not know that he had a surprise for her too.

After a long pause, she finally sighed and said, "Forget about it. Do you need pocket money over there, Courtney? I could transfer you some if you'd like."

"No, thanks, Victoria," Courtney answered. "I found a part-time job near the school that pays really well. I can get by."

"But I insist—"

Victoria was cut off when a loud knock came from the office door. The next second, Leoric came bustling into the room, looking out-of-breath as he rasped, "Jeanne, I have important news!"

Upon seeing how overwhelmed and excited he looked, Victoria raised a brow and said into the phone, "Hey, Courtney, I need to hang up now. It seems like there's something that simply demands my attention."

"Okay. Bye, Victoria!"

After hanging up on the call, Victoria turned to look at Leoric questioningly as she sat up and asked, "Leoric, aren't you supposed to be in the urban village? What are you doing here in Jeanne D'Arc? Did something happen?"

"Jeanne, I went to Diosna City today, and I—"

Leoric did not get to finish his sentence, for the office door slammed open once more, and this time, a man with a side-part hurried into the room. He was just as out-of-breath as Leoric had been as he gasped, "Jeanne—something—happened! There's been groundbreaking news!"

He was the most competent among all of Victoria's men, and he went by the name Rupert. He was easily one of the strongest and most reliable figures in the entire Jeanne Gang.

Victoria frowned when she saw how anxious he looked. "What are you talking about? Pull yourself together and use your words, Rupert."

Rupert swallowed and caught his breath. "Word has it that Xanxus has fallen."

"W-What?" She stood up at once and demanded, "What do you mean by 'Xanxus has fallen'?" She knew very well what he meant by that; she just couldn't believe it and had to make him repeat it.

"He's dead! Someone slit his throat! Apparently, he died pretty gruesomely." Rupert blanched as he added, "And most of his men were wiped out too. The ones who survived have all been caught and thrown behind bars. There's not a single one of them left! Not even those rats down at Sunshine Casino were spared. Anyone who protested was rounded up and taken down to the detention center."

Victoria staggered backward and asked with wide-eyed wonder, "H-How is that possible? I don't know anyone who could have done this! How powerful must the person be to bring Xanxus to his downfall?!"

Read Novel i am the ruler of all chapter 347

i am the ruler of all chapter 347-Xanxus was one of the most powerful figures of the Seven Legends in the Solaris Province, and Sunshine Casino alone was an enterprise that every gang leader drooled over.

Never did Victoria expect someone as formidable as Xanxus to die. She had been sure that death was something that eluded him.

"Do we know who's behind it?" she demanded, eyes wide and thoughts clamoring. "I don't think Jarett would resort to such clean and forthright methods of eradicating Xanxus, would he?"

Rupert slapped his own thigh as if to calm himself. "Every witness in Sunshine Casino has either been killed off or captured, so no one can provide intel on this. All we know is that the mysterious forces who killed Xanxus and wiped out his gang fled as soon as the deed was done, and no one has claimed ownership of the casino yet!"

Next to him, Leoric could hear his own blood beating in his ears. No one knew the details of Xanxus' downfall except for him. "Uh, Jeanne, there's something you should—"

"Oh, for f*ck's sake, can't you see that I'm speaking to Jeanne here? Stay out of this!" Rupert barked at him before he could explain what happened back at the casino with Kingsley.

In truth, Leoric had been getting on Rupert's nerves these days. He thought the man was nothing more than an over-glorified errand boy for the Jeanne Gang who was put in charge of their territory in the urban village, but that was until recently when Leoric had, with Kingsley's help, fought back against Kenzo and his men during a turf war.

Ever since then, Victoria started seeing Leoric in a new light, and the subtle admiration she had for him was beginning to show. After all, Kenzo was one of Xanxus' most trusted subordinates, not to mention, one of the most capable. To be able to hold onto the Jeanne Gang's turf and keep it from falling into Xanxus' hand was enough to prove Leoric's competence.

As such, she praised him for the job well done and told him she saw potential in him. She also said his kindness, despite his circumstances, was a remarkable trait to have as a gang member. She even planned on having him help out at Jeanne D'Arc once business at the urban village had been concluded.

Having sensed the shift in structural dynamics, Rupert couldn't help panicking. He was worried that Leoric would climb up the organizational ladder and eventually take over his place in the gang.

"Leoric, you ought to learn your place around here. Don't get so full of yourself just because Jeanne gave you a few encouraging words!" Rupert snapped with a manic gleam in his eyes, riding out the rage he had felt when he came in earlier and saw that Leoric was already in the office speaking to Jeanne.

However, there were more pressing concerns at hand, such as the news of Xanxus' downfall and the subsequent abandonment of Sunshine Casino, so he held back from chewing Leoric out at first instance. He thinks I'm going easy on him and now he's climbing over my head! He has quite the nerve, interrupting me while I'm speaking to Jeanne!"

“Don’t get ahead of yourself, Leoric, and don’t try to butt into gang matters. You don’t get the right to speak when I’m in the room!” he growled, glaring at Leoric mutinously.

Meanwhile, Victoria was frowning in disapproval when she saw how unnecessarily rude Rupert was being, but she thought about how he had stuck by her since junior high and helped her with gang matters all these years, then decidedly brushed this incident off. In any case, she couldn’t put him in his place in front of Leoric and her other subordinates.

Presently, a grim look flashed across Leoric’s features as he pointed out impatiently, “I wasn’t trying to butt into gang affairs; I was only trying to tell Jeanne about the incident with Xanxus—”

He was cut off once again by Rupert, who demanded incredulously, “And what the hell do you know about Xanxus’ death, huh? Do you even know how serious things are right now out there in the underworld? Huh?” He did not wait for Leoric to respond and turned to address Victoria in a considerably gentler tone, “Jeanne, now that word on Xanxus’ death has broken out, the entire Solaris Province underworld is getting restless. Every gang we know will start making their moves soon. A war may be inevitable.”

Victoria slowly resumed her seat on the couch, her pretty brows furrowing as she said, “The casino was Xanxus’ pride and glory. Anyone with power, no matter how little of it, will try to get their hands on it.” She twirled a lock of her hair around one slender finger as she continued pensively, “But as long as Jarett doesn’t make a move, then no one will get to take the casino for themselves. It’d be a feat for gangs like ours to get even a tenth of the share!”

Read Novel i am the ruler of all chapter 348

i am the ruler of all chapter 348-“Yeah, Boss! We have to act now!” Rupert urged. “Even if we can’t snatch the most profitable casino, a bar or club would be enough for us!”

As soon as he said that, Rupert’s phone buzzed.

When he read the new message, his face fell from shock. “Jeanne, I just received news that the entire Sunshine Casino has been claimed by someone...”

“What?” Victoria’s eyes went wide. “Who bought it? Is it Jarett Cole?”

“No... It is not Jarett,” he dazedly replied. “However, I have been informed that he made the announcement. He warned everyone in the Circle that Sunshine Casino already has a new owner. No one was allowed to do anything to get their hands on it!”

Rupert swallowed hard. “What group is it? Who is so powerful that Boss Jarett would act as their protector?”

Hearing that, Leoric was shocked as well because he never expected Jarett to help out!

As soon as he left Diosna City earlier that day, Kingsley had immediately called Kenny, Jarett’s advisor.

He asked Kenny to inform Jarett that Sunshine Casino now belonged to the Jeanne Gang.

Kingsley also requested Jarett to announce a warning to the Circle to warn off the people of Solaris Province who were in the “industry”; they were not to try to steal something that now had an owner.

It was why Rupert received that message.

Victoria did not know any of that though. Her beautiful face turned pale as she mumbled to herself.

“I see... Chaos is going to erupt in Solaris Province. I wonder if this newcomer who emerged like a dark horse will be our friend or foe...”

Seeing that, Leoric hurriedly said, “Jeanne, I know what is going on! I know about Sunshine Casino!”

“You do?” Rupert gave him a disdainful side-eye. “How could a small fry like you know anything?”

Leoric puffed out his chest and loudly declared, “Boss Nicholson called me this morning, summoning me to Diosna City! I saw the fall of Xanxus Norton with my own eyes!”

“As if! See it with your own eyes? Bah!” Rupert spat on the ground near Leoric’s feet and sneered.

“Everyone knows all eyewitnesses to Xanxus’ fall were either dead or in prison! Can you at least come up with a more logical boast?”

He poked Leoric hard on the chest.

“Also, do not ever mention Nicholson’s name in the Jeanne Gang! Remember this; we only have one boss!”

Rupert knew Leoric was only able to defeat Kenzo because of help from Kingsley.

As such, he despised Kingsley as well.

In his opinion, Kingsley was a busybody poking his nose in other people’s business. He was the reason why Leoric was able to impress Victoria.

Although Rupert’s poke hurt, Leoric remained steady on his feet with his back straight. There was an unpleasant look on his face though.

“You can insult me, but do not ever insult Boss Nicholson!”

“Oh? You are such a good doggy. Look at how protective you are of your master!” Rupert’s face twisted with fury.

“However, remember that you belong to Jeanne, even if you are a dog! If you want to serve someone else, I will kill you first!”

He then kicked Leoric in the stomach.

“Also, if that Nicholson man dares to set a single foot near the Jeanne Gang, I will make him kneel and call me uncle!” Rupert snapped.

Bam!

Leoric fell to the ground from the force of the kick. He pressed down on his stomach with his hands as he sweated profusely from the pain.

“Hey, now! We are all comrades. How could you attack him like that, Rupert?” Victoria rebuked.

“I did not say anything because I respect you. However, do not keep pushing my limit!”

i am the ruler of all chapter 349-The cold bark of Victoria's rebuke made Rupert glance at her slender legs before looking down and flippantly saying, "Yes, Boss. I know I should not have done that."

However, immediately after, he straightened up and his voice took on an argumentative tone.

"Still, he was being insubordinate! Not only is he always talking about another gang leader to you, but he even lied about how he witnessed Xanxus' fall! A treasonous person like him would never know his place if he is not taught a lesson!"

With gritted teeth, Leoric climbed to his feet with his hands still clenched over his stomach.

"I am not a traitor, and it was not a lie! Xanxus Norton was taken down by Boss Nicholson!"

Hearing that, both Victoria and Rupert stared at him in shock.

A few seconds later, Rupert let out a derisive snort.

"F*cking hell! That is absolute rubbish! I have never heard of Boss Nicholson in Solaris Province! Even so, you still insist he took down Xanxus?"

"Leoric, this is important," she added, disbelief clear in her voice. "Don't fool around."

"Boss Jeanne, I am here today to report to you about this." Leoric wiped away the sweat from his forehead.

"This morning, I went to Diosna City. I watched Boss Nicholson defeat Xanxus Norton and his men.

Furthermore, he gave Sunshine Casino to us, the Jeanne Gang!"

She was rendered speechless.

Rupert was at a loss for words as well.

“He... We were given Sunshine Casino?” She gasped with disbelief.

“Could it be... Are we now the sole owner of Sunshine Casino?”

Leoric nodded hard. “That’s right! He even said I am to be the manager of the place!”

As soon as Rupert heard that, he was roaring with laughter.

“Hahaha! Are you daydreaming? Who do you think you are? What makes you think you can be the manager of Sunshine Casino?”

Rupert then walked over to Victoria.

“Boss, I think he’s gone mad,” Rupert slyly said. “Just listen to the unrealistic nonsense he’s spouting! Get him out of here so that we can properly discuss how we should handle the new change in Solaris Province...”

Just then...

Ring, ring!

Leoric’s phone began to ring.

It was a video call from his subordinates in Sunshine Casino.

Rupert was furious about being interrupted. “Get out already! Stop intruding on our talk!”

However, Leoric ignored him and answered the call. “What is it, Johnny? Why are you calling me?”

How dare Leoric disregard his words and answer a call as if he were alone!

Rupert immediately charged over to Leoric and grabbed him by his shirt. “F*cker! Did you not hear what I just said? You absolute...”

Before he could finish speaking, a box of TNTs appeared on Leoric’s phone screen.

“How do we dispose of these explosives, Leoric?” Johnny asked. “None of us have experience with them, so we’re all too scared to touch them.”

“Leave them in Xanxus’ storage room for now,” replied Leoric. “Don’t mess around with them.”

As Rupert watched the shaky footage on the phone, he gradually loosened his grip on Leoric’s shirt.

“How can this be?” Rupert was stark pale with disbelief.

“Explosives? Xanxus’ storage room? What kind of joke is this? You... You must have planned this! It is just a prank!”

He then snatched Leoric’s phone away and roared into it, “Johnny, what on earth are you guys doing?”

When Johnny saw Rupert appear on the call, he hurriedly focused on the call.

“Hello, Rupert! We are in Sunshine Casino, clearing out the things Xanxus left behind!”

i am the ruler of all chapter 350-“This place is so lavish,” Johnny said as he held up the phone to show the casino cage. “Look here...”

Thump! Thump! Thump!

Rupert stumbled backward from the phone with shock painted all over his face.

He did not hear a single word Johnny said afterward.

All he heard was a buzzing sound in his ears as his vision spun.

That place was truly the Sunshine Casino!

He had the pleasure of going there once.

The lavish decor of Sunshine Casino had left an impression on him.

In fact, he would never have forgotten how it looked!

He slowly looked up at Leoric and dryly asked, “W-What is going on? Was everything you said the truth?”

“Why would I lie to Boss?” Leoric replied with a frown.

Smash!

Rupert let go of the phone, sending it crashing into the ground. The screen went black as cracks spread across the glass.

“Impossible... How can it be possible? It is indeed Sunshine Casino! How could it be so easily obtained?”

His pupils were dilating and he began rapidly shaking his head like a crazy man.

Victoria shot to her feet in surprise. “Are you serious, Leoric? That... Boss Nicholson really... He...”

She was so shocked that she could not come up with a coherent sentence.

Sunshine Casino was a cash cow everyone wanted.

Now, it was hers!

It made her feel like she was dreaming. None of this felt real!

“That’s right, boss! I am back to ask for more men. I will revive Sunshine Casino to its full glory! Once we have complete control over it, we would be the second most powerful gang in Solaris Province, right after Boss Jarett!”

Hearing that, she excitedly nodded. “Okay! I will give you some men right now. Take whoever you want!”

“Yes, ma’am! Thank you, boss!”

When Rupert saw how easily Victoria agreed to give Leoric more men, he snapped back to his senses.

“No way!” He was practically buzzing with anger. “He is just a nobody! How can we give him so much power? I object!”

She frowned at him. “Rupert Shapiro! Who is the boss of Jeanne Gang—you or me? Do my words mean nothing to you?”

“You are the boss, ma’am.” A dark look flashed across his eyes.

“However, please consider this; there is no such thing as a free lunch. Perhaps this is all a trap set by Nicholson!”

She paused at that. She then turned to Leoric and said, “Who is this Boss Nicholson? What kind of man is he?”

“I...” Leoric hummed. “He would not let me say. He said he would visit you at Jeanne D’Arc when he has time...”

When Rupert heard that, he immediately shot to his feet. “Did you hear that? Nicholson does not even dare to reveal his identity! There is something fishy about him!”

“Enough! Shut up! I can make my own judgments!”

After snapping at Rupert, she began to ponder with a frown on her face.

Moments later, she looked up at Leoric with a clenched fist.

“No matter what, let us accept this gift first. Whether it is a blessing or a curse, what will be, will be. We live and work in the Circle, so we cannot be cowards who jump at every shadow!”

With a wave of her hand, she continued, “All of Jeanne Gang is ready at your command! Take over Sunshine Casino as soon as possible!”

“Yes, Boss!”

Leoric shouted. His face was full of uncontrollable excitement.

Meanwhile, Rupert was stark pale.

The malicious glint in his eyes was strong enough that it could kill.

He was thoroughly defeated by Leoric this time.

The anger in him burned as bright as the sun.

This was all the fault of the mysterious man known as Nicholson!

Ever since Boss Nicholson appeared, Jeanne Gang had been slipping out of his grasp...
