Chapter 56

56 – Do you believe in ghosts? “So what’s the plan?” Cathan asked Casper after he hung up the phone. They were foraging through the truckload of weapons to pick their favorite toy. This was who they were. Guns, blood, and bullets replaced their toys when they were still young. Right now, it was just like old times before Casper took over Blade Towers. Casper’s expression was frosty, his tone was so acidic, that the air froze.

“It seems I don’t have to deliver new weapons later.”

“You mean?” Caleb sensed something hidden in his words. “Yes. It’s Angelo,” Casper revealed coldly, imagining what would have happened if he hadn’t followed his instinct. Initially, he was upset that Angelo’s delivery got delayed but it seemed to be a great relief at the moment. He didn’t have to order weapons anymore. He would use these and take the rest away without giving Angelo a refund. “The son of a bitch!” Caleb cursed.

“Oh, he just stepped on the lion’s tail. He should have come after me alone but since he chose to mess with my family, I’m going to mess with him and his family at large.” Even a child would discern the evil carved around Casper’s words, it made Anna smile vengefully. “Do you have their locations?” She asked, distracting their conversation. For as long as she was concerned, they were wasting time on words, which was killing her wild eagerness to get revenge for her daughter. What would she have done if she heard that her only daughter died? No way. Whoever attempted a ploy on her daughter’s life didn’t deserve his. She was smoking a cigarette like a chimney to ease the pain. “Hunter would send that to me,” Casper said confidently. He trusted Hunter’s skill of finding things very fast. Anna was still eager. She feared the culprit might run away soon.

“I’ll leave the culprit to you but I’ll deal with his family.” Knowing that Casper was also bloodthirsty for revenge, nothing would make him leave the culprit for her, hence she chose the next kin of importance – family. “I’ll take care of his bodyguards,” Caleb verified while loading his gun. He knew that Angelo had some tough bodyguards, which made him hungry to go after the strong ones.

Just like that, they seemed to have finished sharing the food but Cathan wasn’t going to be left out. He picked guns for the other bodyguards who were supposed to back up every position.” I’ll take down the guys who planted the bomb.”

Casper had a great team. He didn’t have to instruct them on what to do. Each one chose their target based on their strength. “Can you handle his family alone?” Casper asked Anna. His question got her irritated.

“Are you doubting my skills now?”

“No. It’s because my movement will depend on yours. He must learn of the death of his family before his, and..” Casper’s phone beeped so he paused. “Great. Check your phone, Anna.” Anna checked her phone, then sat in the truck and stuck her head out of the window. “I don’t worked for and they had worked together for years.

*You can sort them out till their jet returns. I already punished them by making them walk back to the hotel after how tired they were. That’s what they get for bringing Jenna along.”

Anna was upset but knew she couldn’t win against Casper, using that means to punish him instead. Casper knew this place was dangerous yet he brought Jenna.

“Then why are you still helping them to get back?” The pilot couldn’t understand Anna’s intentions at the moment.

“It’s because of the girl with the injured leg. I swore to protect her but she will be worried about him. If I had my way, I’d let them walk to New York.” Anna’s expression was dark. She wished to kidnap Jenna and hide her from Casper but that would only create bigger problems. At the moment, Jenna didn’t even know that she was her mother.

“Aaaah, you’re heartless.” The pilot complained, after having clarity of everything.

“I know, I have to go.” Anna pressed the Bluetooth on her ear to end the call.

She had arrived at her location, parking her car a distance away. She took out the explosives in a backpack. Angelo’s house was well secured with both digital and physical security.

However, Anna had infiltrated more secured houses before. Eliminating the physical security was easy but she had to avoid the cameras while planting the bombs to not alert external security. If not, her efforts would be in vain.

Whoever she could kill, she killed and if it was taking too much time, she just had to knock them out. After all, the whole mansion would soon be in flames.

To enter the main house, she used the exit under the swimming pool, and as soon as she was done planting the bombs, she went back to the car. Whoever was watching the digital cameras from a control room away from the mansion had noticed that the security personnel in the mansion weren’t responding but before he could inform a higher security company, he heard multiple blasts before the screen of his monitoring computer blanked out.

Ana took a video before activating the bombs one by one, one could see the house crumbling down with everyone and everything inside it. When she was sure that no one could survive and the police and fire service were a distance away, she drove away after sending the video to Casper

The three cousins with their bodyguards arrived at the hotel together panting like a fish out of water. They split in respect to their responsibilities, everyone taking a different route. Cathan went to the location of the guy who planted the bomb while Caleb began to eliminate Angelo’s bodyguards, serving as a cover for Casper, as he made his way secretly to Angelo’s room

After the pool party, Angelo was tired after having fucked two whores as a result of excitement. His energy was down. One of the bodyguards had stolen the spare key to Angelo’s room for Casper after fooling the receptionist that he was in love with her.

Casper was comfortable in Angelo’s room because it was dark but he still kept his sunglasses close, just in case the lights came on. He sat on a chair, which was positioned to face the bed.

– Vo you rite in gnosis

Through the dark, he could see three figures on the bed. Two naked women and one naked man. Casper was patient and lighted a cigar, smoking with red eyes resulting from anger. The smoke from the cigar made one of the girls start coughing. Soon her cough got violent, it woke Angelo

“Get out of here,” he yelled at her before smelling something strange and quickly turning on the light. At the same time, the other girl woke up. Seeing Casper, she fled out of the room naked with the first girl following suit. Casper had put on his sunglasses and looked calmly as the drama unfolded before him. He didn’t attempt to do anything to the girls. His bodyguards would take care of it.

Angelo quickly reached for his gun at the sight of Casper. “I won’t do that if I were you,” Casper warned him calmly, it was like friendly advice but Angelo didn’t barge. He picked up his gun and pressed the trigger, hearing just a click sound. Casper had unloaded his gun. Angelo was shocked, he closed his eyes and opened them again. Death was right there with him in the room. “You....you are dead,” he stuttered, fear numbing him.

Casper stared at him calmly, while he lifted his gun a little. His voice was gentle but carried devilish scorn. “Do you believe in ghosts?”
