Chapter 95

95 – She was just happy that he was alive and could speak

As the days went by, Casper took a leave of absence from the office, and spent time with his son. They would play basketball together, visit the park, practice their fighting skills and even eat ice cream. However, he made sure to have dinner together with his son and Jenna, no matter how tired they were.

As the subsequent days passed, Jenna only saw less of Casper because he never slept in his room. He would sneak into his son's room, sit on the small sofa and watch him sleep for hours till he dozed off. He would also ensure to sneak out before his son woke up.

On the third day, Jenna was tired of it because she felt that Casper was avoiding her since she kept asking about what was decided on by the seniors.

Casper was about to meet Caddaric in the gym when Jenna blocked his way. "Casp, what happened with the seniors?"

Casper paused for a while, his eyes darkened slightly. "Nothing I can't handle. Rex will be coming for Caddaric in two days. There's a lot he has to learn," Casper avoided her gaze and tried to walk around her but she kept moving in every direction he did.

Jenna shook her head. Was he choosing their son over her? "What about me?" She was greatly remorseful. Was he punishing her?

Seeing her helpless countenance, Casper's gaze softened. "Come on, don't tell me you are jealous because I'm spending time with our son. You can join us in the gym."

"No. I just want to know what will happen with us?" Jenna asked with determination. Casper couldn't tell her because it would make her feel terrible or even run away again. It was better to keep it a secret.

"We will talk about it after Caddaric leaves but for now, go to the study. Write down what you intend to do with your life, now that you are back, unless you want to return to Blade Towers."

He knew she wouldn't want to return to Blade towers and said it to put her off.

"And if I don't?" Jenna knew he was avoiding giving her the answers she needed, and insisted. Casper decided to tease her a little.

"I don't suppose that you'll spend the remaining days of your life in my room. Is that what you did while away?"

Jenna was embarrassed. Since she returned, she had been caged in Casper's room, only going to the dining room for a family dinner in the evening. Indirectly, Casper was addressing her as being lazy. She pouted and said, "I'm on a vacation."

Casper smiled a little. "Then go to Hawaii, Ibiza, Las Vegas, wherever," he shrugged. It would indeed be good if she left for sometime. Casper would have taken care of everything before she returned.

"Are you sending me away?" Jenna was hurt. At first, he never wanted her out of his sight but now, he was suggesting that she went away. Casper didn't give her any assurance and said,

"What do you think? I have to go." Jenna was left dumbfounded, dragging her tired self to the study. She had to indeed make her life useful before he forced her to work at Blade Towers again.

Casper continued like that till Friday arrived. He, Jenna, and Caddaric had just finished dinner in the large luxurious dining room when Rex arrived with his bodyguards, who waited outside. "It's time," he announced.

Before Casper could utter a word, Caddaric yelled, "I'll get my stuff."

"Everything you need is already prepared by the academy," Rex explained to him.

"Alright then," Caddaric responded, then went around and hugged Casper. "I'll miss you dad."

Jenna was slightly jealous but was greatly relieved when Caddaric flung himself over her. "Be good mum, no more lies," Jenna couldn't feel remorseful and only smiled.

"I promise to never lie to you or anyone else again."

"I will remember your promise and I'll miss you too," Caddaric kissed her cheek before running off. No matter what, his mother was still his mother.

Rex nodded slightly in greeting, as he led Caddaric away, amazed. Was it because he was older than the average age of entering into the academy? It was very difficult for the other kids to leave their parents but this one was quite excited.

Even Casper was never this excited the first time he went to the academy. He felt complicated emotions, as he rushed to his room with Jenna in tow. Now that Caddaric was gone, she was going to get the answers and stop him from doing anything stupid.

However, before she uttered a word, Casper's mouth swallowed hers. He was as ferocious as a wild beast unleashing himself on her. His actions aroused deep sensual pleasures that cleared every question she had on her mind.

Pinning her against the wall, he tore her dress off her like a lion attacking its prey. This was something new but her body responded and she yearned for more. After giving her multiple pleasures, it was too late for her to realize that he did it to avoid her questions.

Jenna was left panting and so tired, she fell into a deep sleep. By the time she woke up, Casper was nowhere near, a note laid in his place.

I'll be away for a few days. Love, Casper.

Jenna felt a strange unease in her heart. It was so uncomfortable that her blood boiled. She instantly called Hunter but his phone was switched off. Same with Caleb and Cathan. She was beginning to fear that something bad was going to happen to Casper because of her. She called Kate.

"Kate, where is Cathan? I can't reach him." She sounded anxious but Kate was calm. She wanted to spill it but held herself.

"Oh Jen, he must be with Casper."

"At where?" Jenna was even more curious, her mind was a mess while her heart rate continuously escalated.

Kate's voice dropped. "I'm sorry I don't know." Why did Jenna feel like Kate was hiding something? She had to get it out of her. "Kate please, tell me what you know."

Kate was forcing herself from holding it but couldn't.

"You didn't hear it from me."

"Of Course not," Jenna agreed, understanding dawning on her that Kate had been warned to not tell her.

"Good. Casper agreed to take a hundred flogging by the whip, just to make you his."

"No." Jenna froze, her eyes welled up. Her fears were confirmed. He took a stupid decision. She hung up and called Marshall with trembling hands.

"You have to help me. Casper is going to take the whip," she said, drowned in anxiety. Marshall had to help somehow but sadly, he was unmoved.

"That isn't unheard of and there is nothing you can do about it."

Jenna wouldn't give up. If she can't stop them, then she'll take the flogging with him. "Please tell me where," Jenna sobbed.

"The punishment room is in the Blades' academy, and Casper's punishment is supervised by grandpa. Are you sure you want to go?" Marshall knew that she was afraid of grandpa and tried to discourage her but Jenna was determined.

"Yes!"

Marshall didn't argue. "I'll send the directions to you then. I'll also inform your mum to back you up."

"No. I have to do this on my own, thanks."

Jenna abruptly hung up the phone and began to change into jean trousers, snickers and a shirt. By the time she was done, she received the directions on her phone.

Picking one of Casper's car keys, she got to the garage and pressed the remote. A black Mustang beeped and she jumped into it, driving towards the direction.

Arriving at the academy, there were so many guards that she couldn't make her way. "Need back up now?" Anna asked behind her.

Jenna was both ashamed and relieved. Anna always had her back but little did she know that even Marshall was secretly watching out for her. "Thanks mum, I do."

"Follow me,"

Anna instructed and took her through a tunnel that led them to the door of the punishment room but before Jenna pushed it, grandpa appeared. Jenna turned to her left and right but Anna was nowhere to be found. She was on her own, just when she needed backup the most.

Still, she realized that she had to face her fear. She couldn't keep running from the old man. Her jaws clenched and her hands balled into fists by her side.

"You unfortunate girl, what are you doing here?" Grandpa asked in annoyance. Things hadn't worked for him as planned and he was greatly pained.

"I want Casper," Jenna responded coldly. She was already paled by the news so she wasn't an attractive sight.

The oldman let out a sinister laugh. "He's already dead but I won't allow you to see him before his burial."

Jenna frowned deeply and ground her teeth. She didn't believe him, there her heart was racing like it was going to jump out of her chest. She hated the oldman so much and it was about time she got her revenge.

"How will you stop me, oldman?" She spoke rudely, and began walking towards him with a blank expression which made him slightly confused. The unfortunate girl didn't seem afraid of him anymore.

"What do you want to do?" He was startled and asked.

"Ever had someone my age kiss your ass?" Jenna asked sinisterly. If that was the only way to see Casper, then she was going to do it. 1

Grandpa sighed and beckoned to his bodyguards. Jenna was no match for him. "You wanna try me? Oh, the two of you deserve to be buried together. Guards."

Jenna was merely defending herself from the guards when a deep voice howled behind her. "Jenna, what are you doing here?"

The bodyguards stopped at the sound of the voice and Grandpa instantly left the scene. Jenna turned around, relieved to see a man who was more reasonable to deal with

"Rex, I want to see Casper. Is he...really dead?" Jenna sobbed, her eyes dimmed and her voice shook. Her palms were so sweaty, she kept running them on the sides of her Jean trousers.

"Of Course not. His condition is bad but he still has some life in him."

Jenna was relieved. How could she have continued living if Casper lost his life? "Can I see him?" She asked with hopeful eyes.

"Yes but you have to sign a prenup first. I was about to bring it to you as soon as we got his pulse but since you're here..."

"Just let me sign it." Jenna couldn't imagine Casper's condition and didn't want to waste anymore time. Finding a pulse meant he was unconscious. However, Rex thought otherwise.

Perhaps, if Jenna saw Casper, she might not want to be with him anymore. The Casper Rex saw, was injured beyond repair.

"Don't you want to see him first? You might have a change of mind," he tried to warn her.

"No. I will never have a change of mind. Even if he is crippled, blind in both eyes and ugly with sores all over his body, I will still love him and yes, I will still marry him," Jenna said with determination, as he imagined the worst.

Rex sighed and gave up. "Alright then. Here," he handed over the documents to her, then turned around and bent a little. "Use my back."

Jenna was startled but also grateful. Rex was so different. After signing the document, she returned it to him. "His bodyguards moved him to a treatment room but the doctor has still not arrived,"

Rex explained while observing her facial expressions. Somehow, he felt that she was worth the sacrifice.

"Thanks Rex, just show me the treatment room."

When Jenna reached the treatment room, her breath caught up in her throat. Casper laid on his stomach, on a blood stained single bed. His flesh seemed to be falling off and she knew that he would need surgery for it to be repaired.

As to the extent of the damage, she couldn't tell but was disappointed by the men who stood helplessly beside Casper. "Why did you allow this to happen?"

She blamed Cathan and Caleb, while she walked towards Casper. "He doesn't listen to anyone. The doctor is late but he recommended some antibiotics which we bought yet, he won't drink or swallow anything,"

Caleb explained bitterly. Cathan's eyes were red yet, he didn't speak. Jenna went to lay beside the blood soaked Casper and assessed his wounds. He didn't even flinch, wince or growl when she touched it and knew that he was unconscious. His body and face was swollen, he looked different.

Her eyes welled up as she thought of how to help him. Suddenly, she picked up the beverage and poured it into her mouth, then she pressed her mouth to his, forcing the liquid through it but it just poured out, soaking the already blood stained bed.

Her heart was thumping aggressively, as she tried four more times and failed. Was this how she was going to lose him? No. It was too much, she spoke in a teary voice.

"Casp, please take the beverage and take some pills for your wounds. You fought for me and survived.

You are my hero, but if you die, then all your fights are in vain because, I will kill myself and make sure I get buried beside you."

His hand balled into fist upon hearing her words but she didn't see it, since she was lying on her side and only turned his head to face her. She pressed another mouthful of beverage to his mouth but this time, he swallowed it. She did the same with the pills, which he swallowed. Her heart warmed a little.

When she pressed her mouth on his one more time to pass some water to him, it was swallowed by his, in a sensual ferocious kiss, that left her gaping for air and her eyes wide open in shock.

Casper's eyes snapped open. It was bright. No one could tell that he was in any kind of pain. Jenna was confused and looked around suspiciously. Casper was badly injured but his eyes told a different story. Caleb and Cathan had turned to the opposite direction so she couldn't see their facial expressions.

Casper's lips parted. "You surely want us to die together, don't you?" His voice was deep and hoarse but it sounded sweet in her ears.

Jenna didn't answer and only pressed her lips onto his again. She was going to get to the bottom of whatever had happened but now, she was just happy that he was alive and could speak.
