Chapter 99

99 – Love is the only thing that makes us human

Think of the most beautiful flowers, the most expensive decor, this wedding was top notch and live broadcasted for everyone to see. It was the first time anyone except Jenna saw Casper smile. He walked through the aisle and waited for his bride at the altar. Did he ever stop wearing black? NO. But on this special day, he didn't want to wear sunglasses so he had a special contact lens made to surprise Jenna because she was going to wear white. She still kept a secret but never did it reduce his love for her. Pregnancy could never be hidden when they were together.

The auditorium was the most exquisite design from the best world acclaimed wedding planners. Casper couldn't choose between Caleb and Cathan, appointing Hunter to be his best man. Caleb and Cathan took charge of the security of the event wholeheartedly. They weren't offended by Casper's decision. It was quite understandable.

There were no groomsmen or bridesmaids. Casper saw them as a nuisance. Jenna had no objections because she didn't have many friends for that, and didn't want to hire strangers for it. Peggy and Kate balloted for the maid of honour position and Kate won. The atmosphere was one of joy and excitement. Even those who hated Jenna before, began to admire her.

"They are getting married."

"It's surprising. Their love must be made in heaven for the Blades to accept her."

"From the first time I saw them dance together five years ago, I knew that they were made for each other."

Pascal, Anna and Marshall attended the event as well, though Marshall was disguised. Hearing the comments, their hearts warmed. Jenna indeed got her man back.

The huge doors of the auditorium pushed open, white rose petals rained down as Jenna, adorned in her off shoulder glistening ball room gown, looked breathtaking, as she walked the aisle at a leisurely pace, unable to hold back her tears of joy. That cold aloof man wore no sunglasses for the first time in public and was also smiling like an idiot, all because of her. His love was so strong that she needed to do more to match up to it.

A proud smile tugged on the corners of Casper's lips. The grand wedding happened. Among all the Blade seniors, tutors and what have you, Among the billionaires across the world and of course, the mafia dons and godfathers, who dared to miss the wedding of the century?

When it was time for their first dance, Casper didn't stop, even when the music had stopped. In spite of the pain and horrors he went through in his early years, he found a reason to be happy again. Throughout the reception, he ensured that Jenna wasn't stressed out. He also observed to see if she would take any alcohol but she didn't and he didn't ask her why.

When it was time for the bride and groom to leave, Casper asked Kate and Peggy to escort Jenna to the ladies room to help her change into the outfit he gave them to give her. When they came out of the washroom, everyone was waiting for them outside. Jenna was looking here and there for Casper when his deep voice sounded from behind her.

"Are you ready for our honeymoon?"

The sensuality and charm in his voice made Jenna shiver from pleasurable excitement, as her nerves began to tickle. "Where are we going?"

"We'll see," Casper said and blindfolded her. There was no movement but Jenna began to hear gasps and sounds of excitement.

"Wow, is that for their honeymoon?"

"Mr Blade is so romantic."

"I wish I was Jenna. It's so beautiful."

The murmurs kept pouring, making Jenna more and more anxious. Casper was careful to not freak her out, so she doesn't pass out from excitement again. He carried her bridal style amidst cheers to the hot air balloon before removing the blindfold. Jenna gaped as she looked above her.

"Don't freak out on me," Casper said in a soft sensual voice while he covered her lips with his and beckoned the pilot to move. He ignored the cheers till they were high up in the sky before breaking from the kiss.

"Casp, you make me so happy, I'm lucky to be your wife," excitement brewed Jenna's voice while she exclaimed

"No, I'm the lucky one. You taught me what happiness was," he wrapped his arms around her waist while they admired the scenery till they arrived at the private island.

"This is my wedding gift to you Jen," Casper said after carrying her out of the hot air balloon. Jenna choked with tears.

"Your what?"

"I bought it in your name so it's yours," Casper said casually like it was nothing. Jenna was lost for words, as she snuggled closer to his hard chest. She was still in his arms. The water was as clear as crystal and the environment was just perfect. When they reached the room, everything was perfect except one thing.

There were rose petals everywhere, the jacuzzi and bed were all in place but there were two dining tables. Casper was confused. He only arranged for one. "Is there a problem,"

Jenna asked curiously. Being a careful and sensitive person, Casper couldn't accept that the plan had changed. "There are two tables instead of one. Let's get out of here."

Who knew if his enemies were at work? He couldn't risk her life. Besides, they carried no phones on their honeymoon to call anyone to ask questions.

"Relax, I ordered it," Jenna smiled mischievously and confessed upon seeing how worked up he was.

"How?" Casper was confused. He planned the surprise so how did he get surprised?

"I heard you speaking to Hunter about the arrangement and faintly guessed it was for the honeymoon. I didn't know where but just asked for a favour. It's my surprise for you."

Casper was finally calm as he dropped her gently. Jenna pulled him to the extra table and made him sit. There was just one big ceramic plate but it was covered. There were also two big bottles of champagne with a ribbon wrapped around her neck. "Open it," she said.

Casper frowned slightly and obeyed. It was a piece of black fabric, neatly folded in the plate. "That's my gift for you," Jenna almost choked on laughter.

Casper picked the fabric and spread it. A relaxing smile thinned his lips when he saw the unisex new born baby clothe with the inscription, "we're pregnant."

It wasn't the news that made him happy but the fact that he still loved her nonetheless, even when he knew that she was keeping a secret. Who could have guessed that all along, she just wanted to surprise him? He confessed.

"I already knew but I wanted you to tell me yourself. Now that you did, I can wholly trust you again."

"You..." Jenna was crying again.

Casper covered her lips with his. "Let's not ruin the moment. I never stopped loving you anyway. Now if you'll stop crying. I have a pregnant wife to take care of."

She began to laugh through her tears. "I like the sound of a wife on the tip of your tongue."

"Then you'll hear it everyday," he assured her lovingly.

Casper ensured to feed her well and he ate too. They soaked in the jacuzzi after and Casper would rain kisses wherever his lips touched on her soft body. When they were done, he carried her to the bed, worshipping every inch of her skin with his gentle kisses.

No amount of pregnancy hormones or discomfort in the first trimester of pregnancy could wipe the pleasures he gave her. Spreading her legs, he allowed his tongue to flick and penetrate her vulva, making her moan, such that she shivered.

His two hands held her waist firmly in place while he invaded her walls and sucked her juices till she came hard, panting from pleasure.

"Casp, I love you," she said in deep breaths while she arched her waist to give him more access. Casper's shaft invaded her walls but his thrusts were extremely gentle. The pregnancy was still young and there were no physical signs on her body yet. He was afraid of hurting their fetus. They came hard and panting, Casper gasped and said, "it's a girl."

"No, it's a boy," Jenna countered in a faint dreamy voice.

"I said it's a girl," Casper insisted, though exhausted.

"No, it's a boy."

They kept chanting in whispers, the predicted gender, as they drifted to sleep in each other's arms.

8 months later, at the Blades hospital, the seniors were pacing back and forth outside the labor room. Casper was helpless, as labor pains pierced Jenna from all angles. Her screams of pain made his heart tighten. If he had been with her the first time, he was sure to not have allowed her to go through it again.

Every pain and tear she shed pierced his heart so bad, that he kept yelling at the doctors, who were equally helpless at a time like this. Jenna didn't need CS and she claimed she could endure the pain as before, thereby rejecting an epidural so what more could the Gynaes and midwives do?

After hours of pain and agony, a beautiful bouncy baby girl was birthed to the Blades. Jenna suggested that they call him Cassandra Blade and Casper agreed. However, there was just one problem. The girl won't stop bawling.

The doctors saw nothing wrong with her but couldn't stop her from bawling, even after being cleaned up and fed. The Blade seniors were equally helpless, they went to get a specialist.

Soon after they left, Casper saw someone carrying a huge bouquet. It was so big that it covered the person's face. The person was also very short so he couldn't instantly discern who it was but got curious, blocking the way before the person entered.

"Dad, move away," Caddaric commanded. Casper instantly took the bouquet from him, amazed but not surprised. Mischief runs in their blood.

"What are you doing here?"

Caddaric frowned. Such a dumb question. Why else would he be here? "To see my baby sister. What? You think I won't know?"

"Caddaric?" Jenna was shocked and exclaimed, as she heard his voice amidst Cassandra's screams. Knowing that she wasn't going to see her son for a long time, she had psyched herself.

"Yes mum, can I hold her?" Caddaric moved away from Casper and stretched his hands towards the bawling baby Jenna held. She was reluctant.

"Let's wait till she calms down okay?"

Caddaric was impatient. This was the reason he sneaked out of the academy with the help of his cousins amidst heavy security. "I don't have much time."

As soon as Jenna gave the swaddled baby to him, the bawling stopped. Not only her and Casper but the doctors were all shocked.

"Could they have formed a bond so early?" One of the Doctors asked a fellow doctor. They were still finding ways to calm the baby and this miracle happened.

"How is that possible? He hasn't been around," Casper said, wiping their suspicions. Weren't bonds formed when people lived together? Caddaric never saw his mother pregnant so how could that be?

"Have you named her yet?" Caddaric ignored them and asked. From the academy, he saw when Rex run out after reviving a call saying that Casper's wife was in labor. Caddaric felt the need to see his brother or sister. Turned out it was a sister, who was equally expecting him.

"Yes, she's Cassandra."

Caddaric kissed her on the cheek. "Cassandra, I have to go now."

The baby began bawling again. Caddaric sighed and brought a small bracelet, clasping it around her tiny wrist with a solemn vow, "I promise to come and celebrate every birthday with you till you join the academy."

The baby slowly drifted to sleep at those words. After putting her in the crib, Caddaric turned to Casper. "Can we talk in private? Casper nodded but not wanting to away from Jenna and to prevent Caddaric from being caught, he opened the washroom door.

"Dad, why did you have to take the whip? You could have kept mum secretly. Taking a whip for a woman is demeaning," Caddaric said as soon as the door shut, giving his father a disgusting look.

Casper was offended and his voice raised because of the woman in question. No one messes with Jenna, not even Caddaric. "That woman is your mother," his voice was a deep growl Caddaric took a step back but still spoke his mind.

"I don't care. The first rule of life from the academy. If you meet a woman who makes your heart thump, you should put a bullet to her head. Did you forget?"

Casper couldn't get angry anymore. It was because of the ruthless teachings in the academy. "You are still young. Don't take everything literally."

Caddaric was furious. "Those teachings make one ruthless. No one fears nice people."

Casper stared at him pitifully. Caddaric was just six but wanted to be feared. "If you find someone who can rule the mafia better than me, I'll be glad to meet him." Indirectly, there wasn't anyone more powerful than Casper but Caddaric was ambitious.

"That will be me twelve years from now, and I will never allow a woman to make me weak."

Casper sighed. It was as if he was talking to his younger self. "I once said the worst things but, love is the best thing that happened to me."

Caddaric was even more upset. His father broke the rules so why was he still the most feared? "I will prove you wrong," he vowed.

Casper matched him squarely. "And I will wait to remind you of this day. Shall we bet?"

Love is the only thing that makes us human

"Caddaric Blade, you shall be punished," Rex yelled from behind the door. He had heard the voice clearly enough. Caddaric stepped out boldly.

"Grandpa Rex, you are too harsh. Let's strike a deal. If I get back to the academy before you without being caught, then I'm free. If you get there before me or I get caught, I'll accept my punishment." At such a tender age, he was already negotiating.

"No, you must be punished straightaway," Rex responded to his disappointment but Caddaric would never give up.

"Grandpa is afraid of a little challenge?" He asked mechanically.

Rex felt like a coward. "Fine, your time starts now. Guards..."

"You aren't being fair," Caddaric said and began to remove his clothes. Stack naked, he picked a bottle of water from the fridge, opened and poured it all over, from head to toe.

"What..." before Rex could figure it out, Caddaric dashed through the doorway with the bodyguards behind him and Rex in tow.

Casper and Jenna watched in amazement. Indeed, the boy was smarter than Casper. The water would make his body slippery, so they wouldn't be able to hold him.

"I heard what Caddaric said to you. I'm I..." Jenna's voice brought Casper back from his trance and he quickly cut her off, knowing what she wanted to say.

"No. He is still young," Casper walked over to her on the hospital bed and said.

"But I'm afraid. He's too smart for his age and hard-hearted too." Jenna was greatly disturbed but Casper was calm. Caddaric's behavior was extreme but not new. He lowered himself and sat beside her.

"He will change when he falls in love one day. Love is too strong for anyone. It's the only thing that makes us human. If not, I would've still remained a beast."

Jenna smiled and nodded, understanding dawning in. Which woman would be able to melt Caddaric's stone cold heart one day? "I get it."

"Cassandra?" Casper pressed his forehead against hers and asked.

"Still sleeping," Jenna responded and kissed him. The doctors began to walk out quietly. Casper and Jenna would get intimate anywhere. Even if they couldn't have sex for some time, there was no rule against addictive kisses right?
