21 Took My Shirt Off For Him

“Give me my pills,” I demanded once I reckoned he wasn’t letting me go. If he wants me to stay, he better gives me my pills.

“Why? What else is your wolf asking you to do?”

Zane pulled me over his chest, his eyes looking at my lips only.

“Zane!” I closed my eyes, feeling this weird energy in my body, and the next thing I heard was Zane flinching in pain and pulling away from me.

“UGHH!” he let out a cry, making me open my eyes and look at him. His palms were red as if they have been set on fire. As an Alpha, he healed the next second, but it didn’t take the awkwardness away. He was watching my face as if he was confused.

“Your body turned hot as an iron. How did you do that?” Zane yelled, his eyes looking me up and down as I closed my eyes to get rid of the blurriness of my vision. I could no longer care what he was saying or if we were mates. ‘He played you,’ I heard her say. ‘Punish him,’ she hissed, and my body shuddered.

“Why don’t you come closer and ask me again?” I said, hearing the change in my voice but unable to react to it.

I was aware of the change I was feeling in my body, but acting on her commands seemed more important to me.

“Beatrice! What is happening to you? Are you feeling okay?” Zane asked as he looked for my medicine in his pocket.

The weather has turned hotter to where even the colors from the world disappeared. Everything looked so hot.

“My back hurts!” I shivered and tried running my hand back to rub my back. The area between my shoulders seemed to be in so much pain that it became hard for me to stay standing.

“What area is hurting?” he rushed towards me but I feared I will hurt him again. So I raised my hand to him and shook my head.

“Don’t come closer,” I requested, not sure how can a weak omega like me could hurt a powerful alpha king like him, but my mind was playing games with me at this point.

“Hey! I got you.” he shoved his hand in his pocket and grabbed the pill bottle for me.

“My skin is burning,” I whimpered, falling to my knees again as I tried to get up. I swear my shirt was getting stuck with something moist between my shoulders.

“Take this.” before I can endure more pain, Zane knelt down with me and forced a pill into my mouth.

“NOH!” I felt heat coming out of my mouth as I screamed at him for making me eat that thing again. I wanted to be free, my wolf wanted to be free, but it was too late. He had already fed me that thing again.

“Argh! Why did you do that?” Clenching my jaw, I demanded he explains himself.

“Hey! what happened to your voice?” his eyebrows knit together whilst he gently rested his hand on my back. I no longer felt the pain. In fact, I began to feel very drowsy.

The weather felt cold again, and my body lumped to the side. The instant I noticed Zane was trying to hold me, I warned him to stay away from me.

“Zane! I’m warning y—,” I started to feel sleepy suddenly. I don’t know what happened, but maybe I have exhausted my body with all the stress and physical activity. Zane finally held onto my body when he noticed my eyelids closing. I could no longer feel any strength in my knees. The moment I got up again, my body collapsed, but Zane was quick enough to hold me in his arms and slowly sat me down.

“What is happening? Are you feeling fine?” He inquired, while I rested my head on his chest. “I’m just so sleepy,” I yawned, feeling comfortable. All the pressure from before was fading away now. “You are bleeding from your back,” I heard him complain, but I was too tired to sit and argue with him. I closed my eyes and slept in peace.

No matter how hard I tried to keep myself calm when I am not on medication, I lose every time. It must be my wolf. Although I am an omega, the surge in energy when my wolf began to take over made me feel invincible. It was a different heat my body felt at that time.

Zane must have brought me home because I woke up in my bed while Zane was walking around my bed.

“I am glad you woke up. I needed to clean your wound.” he had an aid box in his hands as he sat in the bed with me.

“My wounds?” I pursed my lips in confusion while massaging my eyebrows. It seemed like I was taking my sweet time getting my memory back of the incident before falling asleep.

“When I found you on the road, your back was bleeding,” his voice was pretty clear now. My ears no longer felt heavy.

But I didn’t remember exactly what happened, that I bled like that.

“Come on, take off your shirt and let me take a look,” Zane said without looking at me. I bet he knew what he was demanding from me, hence he stole eyes from me.

“I am not taking off my shirt in front of you.” I shook my head, but he seemed pretty adamant about cleaning my wound.

“Beatrice! You shouldn’t be very shy with me now. Remember what we felt back when you are going crazy on the road?” that little smirk was back on his lips when he rested his hands on the bed and bent down to the level of my face.

“Oh!” I gasped in disbelief. How did I forget that? I did feel a mate bond with him. But what about it? He wasn’t mad that I was his fated mate?

“You are not going to be disgusted about having me for a mate?” I asked him and he shook his head instantly in response.

“Why would I? you are not that bad.” his eyes scanned my face with a smile appearing and disappearing on his lips.

This was the first time that any of my mates looked so positive after finding out we were mates.

“Now come on! Take off your shirt. Mates don’t feel shy around each other.” He taunted me, eyeing me to do as he had asked me to.

Nodding my head at his words, I took off my shirt.

22-But My Mate Has A Girlfriend

His eyes followed the curves of my body, and a satisfactory smile covered his lips. I felt a little hesitant about his eyes, so I wrapped my arms around my boobs, but he immediately held my hands and took them off.

“What are you doing? Don’t hide such a pretty sight,” the moment he complimented me. I stopped fighting. His hands. were still holding my hands, forcing them down on the bed as he stared at my body hungrily.

“Your boobs are so big, they might be very soft,” his words were making me shy, “Let’s take care of your wounds first, and then we can take care of other things, shall we?” The corner of his mouth stretched up, and he finally let go of my hand. He then got up from the bed to sit behind me. I had no clue where or how I got that wound from.

“It is so weird. It looks like two big scratches,” he said, his hand softly touching my naked back. He rubbed some medicine on my back and then bandaged it quickly. I thought he wanted to finish taking care of me so that he could leave, but that wasn't why he hurried up.

That's when I felt something soft being pressed against my skin.

"Zane!" I jumped at him, kissing my back, and ended up turning in bed and looking at him in shock.

"What? It is fine. You are my mate, and I am yours. We can touch each other." He pulled his body closer and I didn't back away either. It was just a little shocking that he had accepted me so easily. And that he was incredibly handsome, too.

"We can kiss each other—," he whispered, bringing his lips closer to mine and nuzzling them together. My muscles tensed up when he did that. I wasn't moving or pushing him away. So he got pretty confident in proceeding. His hand gently roamed around my boob, his eyes watching the softness and roundness of them. He squeezed my boobs from over the bra, making me squirm a little.

"I want to see them naked," he expressed his wish and then proceeded to pull the strap down to reveal one boob to his hungry eyes.

His eyes were shining with lust or love. I couldn't tell. I let him run a finger around my nipple. It felt so weird being touched like that. It was an incredible feeling; my body was already begging for more. He was pinching my nipple and pulling it out while I closed my eyes and bit my lower lip. The next thing I knew, he bent over my boob and touched it with his lips, sending little kisses to my hard nipple. His lips were now sucking on my tit and pulling them out in an erect form. I let him suck my tit and quench his thirst while his other hand was holding onto my back and pulling my body into his face. I could hear him grunt on my boob and smooch my tit. Before long, I began to remember what happened in the school, and my expression turned into a frown. I opened my eyes when I remembered he was the one who stole my pills and made me suffer through hell. How the hell did I give in to my desires so easily? I gently placed my hands on his shoulders and pushed him back away from me. The instant he freed my boob, I fixed my bra and snatched the shirt from under his knee. He looked lost.

“Oh! Why that angry look?” He stretched his body back from me to stare at my expression clearly.

“You took a picture of me and gave it to him?” I shook myself out of his intoxication and questioned his morals.

“It was just a joke. We wanted to welcome you into our group,” the way he said it was itself a hint that he was lying to “Really? By stealing my pills and making me go through so much pain?” I almost raised my voice without realizing I shouldn’t let anybody hear us together.

“Beatrice! I wanted to know if you really feel the mate bond or if is it just a deception created by your wolf.” He looked serious, but there were other ways to do that. Why did he make fun of me?

“Right! By making me look like a whore who had slept with an alpha on her first day of school?” I was fighting the tears in my eyes. I got so many mates and none of them truly care about me.

“I admit we went far with our prank. But look at the bright side,” he tried to turn it into something positive when there was no other alternative. They bullied me because they wanted to have fun and get entertainment from my misery.

“There is a bright side?” I scoffed, looking at him in disapproval.

“You bumped into the other alphas and felt nothing, right? So that means you don’t just feel a mate bond with everyone. You have fated mates, and, well, you wouldn’t have found me if I hadn’t stolen the pills. Everything happens for a good reason, right?” It was odd to listen to him. He was talking to me like one would speak to a child who knew nothing.

He seemed to be teaching me as a master would.

“Wait! You have a girlfriend.” Thankfully, I wasn’t fully mind-blown by his stupid teaching and remembered Mariyah.

“She is my best friend,” He lied. Obviously, one doesn’t kiss their best friend like that.

“You two kissed when you met,” I refused to believe him. “You are lying to me.”

“Fine. Yes, we are dating, but breaking up is not a big deal. Because I hadn’t felt a mate bond with anyone, I thought I didn’t have a mate, so I started dating her. But now that I have a fated mate, I don’t need anybody else.” He didn’t lie this time and admitted to dating her. But that’s where I was confused. He was going to break up with her for me.

Would it upset her?

“But that will be so unfair to her,” I whispered to myself, and he heard it.

“But she is mean to you. You should do anything you can to steal your mate from some random she-wolf he is dating.” His eyes were once again looking into mine as he made me understand why it’s important that I don’t back down. “Break up with her.” It was then that I understood him well and clearly. My demand brought a smile to his lips.

23 Angrily Making Out

“Look!” he said, showing me his phone’s screen where he told Mariyah that he could not see her anymore because he had found a mate. I did see her respond back to him and bombard him with a dozen questions, and soon after that, he was off to have dinner with his siblings. It was still not safe for him to be in my room because his siblings didn’t like me, so he told me to keep it a secret for now. I walked out of my room to have dinner with them for the first time after my mother left.

The dining room was so awkwardly silent when I walked in. Akin must have returned from work just now because he hadn’t taken off his suit. Helel had taken a shower, so he must have been working out before coming to dinner. “The school is remaining off for a few days.” Akin was the first one to break the silence and talk to Zane. Obviously, he didn’t mean to speak to me, but I got the idea that I would not be attending school for some days. Why? I didn’t care. I didn’t like studying, anyway.

“What happened?” Helel questioned, digging his fork into the forest he had collected on the plate. He was a big fan of salads and proteins.

“I got a call earlier from their principal, telling me that the top part of the school’s building collapsed out of nowhere. I have agreed to aid the school in rebuilding it, but until then, online classes are an option,” Akin explained the situation to Helel. Since I had been sleeping most part of the day after school, I didn’t know what went down there.

“Yeah! It was the craziest thing. The building began to shake and the upper part got covered with so much fog that nobody could tell if something crashed into it or what happened. Thankfully, the fog helped the teachers clear the school before the disaster, and no casualties happened.”

Zane then gave us more information about the accident. I didn’t care if anything happened to the school. A school is a terrible place, anyway.

“Which reminds me of a weird complaint the principal made. Beatrice! You ran out of school without telling anyone?” That was it.

I was getting called out for my behavior. I watched Akin question me and tap his fingers on the table. With how he was always on my back and nagging me for not taking my studies seriously, he was beginning to resemble a stern teacher rather than my stepbrother or an alpha king.

“You left school?” Helel turned to me, taking interest for the first time. Zane raised his eyes at his brother and then sneakily looked my way. He seemed to read our body language.

“I don’t like school,” I answered, lowering my face and shoving pasta in my mouth so that they wouldn’t bother me into answering.

“It is not a picnic place. You need to study in order to build a future for yourself.” Akin’s voice sounded harsher this time. I stopped eating when he slammed his fist on the table because he didn’t like my response.

“Everybody bullies me in school,” I then explained. I wasn’t being a brat or a lazy bum. I had a solid reason for not wanting to like school.

“That’s why you now have Zane in school with you.” Akin didn’t calm down. He was scolding me while Helel had stopped eating completely at this point.

“Zane! Did you tell everyone that she is now your stepsister?” It was then that Akin took one step ahead and asked Zane, who looked lost for a moment. It turned awkward.

“I don’t want anybody to know that my father has moved on,” Zane said while he stole eyes from everyone. I’m not sure if he was telling the truth or if he was just trying to avoid having to introduce me as his stepsister.

“Zane! That is nonsense. Dad has made his decision. Mom has left years ago. There is no need to force dad to stay with her if he doesn’t want to.” Akin has changed his mind from the first time he saw my mother. I remained silent and let the brothers deal with it.

“So you accepted her mother as your stepmother?” Zane let out a little laugh when asking his brother. It was almost as if he was in disbelief that his brother was suggesting they accept us. If he was acting, he looked very convincing.

“I am not accepting her as my stepmother. We are too grown up to even call her our mother now. But Beatrice is our responsibility, even if you like it or not,” Akin and Zane seemed to be glaring into each other’s eyes. Where Akin was sitting straight in his chair, Zane had his body leaning back and his legs stretched out while his chair was tilting outward.

“Do you understand what that means? It means there is no room left for mom. Once her mother takes over, mom is out of the picture.” Zane clenched his jaw but didn’t want to stick from around and shed the tear shining in his eye. He got up the seat and marched upstairs without even finishing the conversation. Akin didn’t stop him either, but since I felt awkward, I steadily got up from my seat and sneaked out of the dining room to be in my room for the rest of the night.

I had just made my way into my room and was about to shut the door when Zane came through. I stepped out of his way in shock while he locked the door.

“Zane!” I gasped, watching him turn around and stare at me for a moment before he wrapped his arm around my back and pulled me over his chest. It happened so quickly that if he hadn’t pushed me against the wall, I would have tripped and fallen. Before I could ask him about his motives, he had dug his face into my neck and started kissing me all over my chest and neck.

24-I feel Unloved

He must have noticed I was lost, so he took a break to lift his face from my neck and cup my face in his hands.

“Don’t take it personally. My anger wasn’t directed at you,” he whispered, and just when I nodded to him, he crashed our lips together. My body felt a tingly sensation run through it.

The moment our lips touched, it felt like I had found heaven. His lips were sucking me in, smooching every bit of my lips. The instant his tongue demanded an entry into my mouth, I let him in. The taste of his tongue wanted me to bite into him.

Our tongues seemed to battle in each other’s mouths. We kept shoving our tongues into each other’s mouths and trying to win.

After kissing each other like crazy for a few minutes, he took me to bed. He took off my pants in one fell swoop and tossed them off the bed aggressively. He didn’t like any barrier between him and his desires.

I watched him focus on my pants only. He started taking them off, and my body reacted by closing my legs tightly. I was just being shy, not reluctantly.

“It’s okay, I will take care of your fragile little pussy,” he whispered as he pulled my panties down and spread my legs for me. My cheeks felt this heat in them. I couldn’t help but rest my body on the bed and close my eyes.

His fingers ran around my vagina before he rubbed the fingertip over my clit and a yelp escaped my lips. It was a different kind of feeling than anything I had ever felt.

“You look so tight. I can’t believe you have never used any sex toy or masturbated!” His words made me clasp my shoulders into my body and hug myself shyly.

He teased my hole with his fingertips, making me squirm in the bed like a fish without water. But before he could even penetrate my vagina, he pulled away and I opened my eyes to see him unzip his pants. I was awkwardly staring at him, bringing his massive dick out of his pants. The sight of it petrified me. A big dry gulp ran down my throat with difficulty at just the thought of how painful it would be when he inserted it into me.

“What? Are you afraid I will hurt you?” He smirked, tossing over in the bed and lying on his back while keeping the upper part of his body leaning against the pillow.

“Come on,” he held my hand and pulled me into a sitting position. I had no clue what he wanted me to do, so I let him take the lead and guide me through the process. My mother never let me learn anything. She said it was for bad people.

“You wrap your hand around the shaft like this,” He was still holding my hand by my wrist while making me grab his dick. The skin was so soft, but his shaft was hard, like a rod. “Ah! Yes! Like this,” he closed his eyes for a split second after feeling the contact between our skins. “And then rub it tenderly in the beginning.” He made my hand go up and down. His cock was radiating heat while I rubbed it.

“Ahh! Keep going,” he would close his eyes and grunt, his body shuddering at intervals. He lifted his shirt up a little so that it didn’t get dirty and kept guiding me.

“Now slowly rub your palm over the head. Oh Yes! Just like that,” the moment I took over and he pulled his hand back, his hand turned into a fist while I tenderly made love to his cock.

“Increase the speed now,” He suggested, and I did just that. I thought he was planning to teach me everything very slowly. I began to rub the shaft while my other hand held the head. The more I rubbed his dick between my palms, the more it throbbed.

“ARGHHH!” He bit his bottom lip and squirmed, his muscles tensing up as he started to cum. In no time, I watched him release a white liquid from the head. I know what it was. I was just shocked by how much he released.

“Ah!” Finally, his body relaxed and his fists unclenched. I had a smile on my lips after pleasuring him. He was the only one who didn’t reject my existence, so I was extremely thankful to him. Besides, he was treating me right. Or so I thought.

The moment I laid down beside him and expected him to wrap his arm around my body, he got up from the bed.

“I would have stayed, but I remembered I had to be somewhere,” he said as he walked into the bathroom to clean up before leaving. It just irked me how he didn’t even look at me before walking away from me.

Before he could walk out of the bathroom, I quickly slipped into the shorts, out of embarrassment.

He might be telling the truth, but there were nicer ways to say it. He didn’t have to leave the instant he got complete pleasure.

He walked out of the bathroom and marched straight to the exit. I still expected him to spare me a glance and see how upset I looked, but he didn’t do that, so I called for him.

“Will you come by after midnight?” I sounded hoarse and had to clear my throat to finish speaking, “You know, I get terrified of the dark.”

“Hm! I am so sorry; I might arrive early in the morning. Why don’t you ask Helel to stay in for the night? I mean, he is also your mate. Just seduce him, offer him something, or use the method I taught you. He will melt at anything,” he was murmuring, all without a hint of jealousy or playfulness in his voice. He was serious and unbothered.

“Okay! Take care,” he waved his hand and left me completely lost and feeling unloved. I assumed that knowing his mates had many mates would make him competitive, but he had no problem sharing me with his brother.

25-The Hot Brothers

“I cannot even ask Helel for help now. I declined his help yesterday so brutally that even if I ask him now, he will not come to help me,” I let out a sigh and shook my head at myself for not talking to Helel about why I didn’t let him in last night. I guess I relied too much on Zane.

But that was the thing. I don’t know how and what he did, but he managed to tame me according to his beliefs.

“I will go sleep in the living room,” I decided as if being in a living room would do me any good. I couldn’t even walk over to my bed to grab my pillow. Once I had successfully left my room and walked over to the living room, I sat down on the couch while looking around suspiciously.

“What was I thinking? This place looks even scarier,” I whispered to myself as I stared at the enormous windows.

“Maybe I will watch some TV and that will help me?” I said, looking for the remote controller when my eyes landed on a shadow approaching the living room.

“Oh, shit!” I didn’t even wait for the terror to sink in and let out the loudest yelp ever. My hands were flying to my mouth as I watched the shadow turn into a figure and the figure become recognizable.

“What are you doing here?” It was Akin in black shorts and a black shirt. I had never seen him without a suit before, so looking at his strong collarbones and muscles gave me an idea of his muscular body.

“I am watching a TV!” I looked around and came up with an excuse after my eyes landed on the TV before me.

“Just the turned-off TV?” He raised his perfectly thick brow and tapped his foot on the floor while waiting for my response.

“I know you are afraid of sleeping in your room. But how long can you continue doing that?” He walked over to the couch in front of me and sat down on it.

“You are right, but every time I think I can do it, I just cannot. I fail miserably.” I sat decently because my shorts were way too short. Flashing my big booty to him was not what I wanted to do.

“So you are comfortable here?” he questioned, and I shook my head, “I have some work pending, so I will be staying up all night.

Go to sleep. I will work here and keep an eye out for any monsters for you.” He casually said it without thinking it. would make me feel some sort of way. I gave him a nod and watched him walk away to grab his laptop and files. It just felt weird whenever he showed care. He wouldn't carry any expressions on his face, but his words were enough to satisfy me.

When he returned, he actually came back with more than just his stuff. He had grabbed my pillow and blanket from my room for me.

“Thank you,” I said, watching him set the pillow behind me and then cover me with the blanket. He sat down, and soon he was working. I couldn't help but lie down and keep staring at him. Watching him work made my heart flutter.

He was so unique, and his chiseled body was to die for. I wonder how many abs he has. Must be 8. He is pretty tall. All these sweet thoughts and imaginations made me want to sleep better.

It was safe to say I felt like a child that night. I didn't even wake up to make sure he was there. I just knew he was.

The morning arrived, and I woke up at the sound of the big clock striking 8 a.m. from the corner of the living room. Akin was still sitting on the sofa with his head resting on his back, his legs spread, and his arms comfortably resting on the sides. He must have fallen asleep here after finishing work, and, because he had promised to look out for any monsters, he didn't leave.

"Good morning!" Helel came from behind the couch, so he only saw Akin. "Did you sleep here tonight?" he continued to ask Akin, who raised his face and rubbed his eyes to wake up completely.

"What are you doing here?" It was then that Helel saw me on the couch, steadily getting up and hugging my pillow.

“It is okay. I asked her to sleep here so that she could sleep in peace,” Akin sleepily answered for me. I could not tell what happened overnight, but I felt like I was crushing on Akin.

“Oh! You should ha—,” Helel stopped in midway once he looked at Akin. Of course, he didn’t want to speak to me in front of his brother.

“It’s been raining since 4 am. I think we should go for a run,” Akin gathered his files while talking to his brother, who was looking outside the windows. It was indeed gloomy and raining cats and dogs outside.

“Oh! My brother wants to go for a run with me. That will be exciting.” Helel already looked interested.

“I will take care of them and then join you outside,” Akin stated before he walked back to his study, leaving the two of us alone outside.

“I didn’t want to bother you because I’d already told you I’d be fine.” I immediately began explaining why I hadn’t asked Helel for help last night.

“I don’t care. I love my bed and space a lot, so I am glad I was not asked to stay on the couch. Akin usually works at night, so I guess it is a good idea that he stays here while you sleep on the couch.” It was just that Helel didn’t even look a little jealous that hurt me. What was it about these brothers not caring and being jealous of who their mate was spending time with?

“Let’s go,” soon Akin came back, and the two left for the outside. I was about to head back inside, but then something made me want to look at them. Peering out the window with a pillow tucked under my arm, I saw them taking off their clothes one by one.

“I cannot even ask Helel for help now. I declined his help yesterday so brutally that even if I ask him now, he will not come to help me,” I let out a sigh and shook my head at myself for not talking to Helel about why I didn’t let him in last night. I guess I relied too much on Zane.

But that was the thing. I don’t know how and what he did, but he managed to tame me according to his beliefs.

“I will go sleep in the living room,” I decided as if being in a living room would do me any good. I couldn’t even walk over to my bed to grab my pillow. Once I had successfully left my room and walked over to the living room, I sat down on the couch while looking around suspiciously.

“What was I thinking? This place looks even scarier,” I whispered to myself as I stared at the enormous windows.

“Maybe I will watch some TV and that will help me?” I said, looking for the remote controller when my eyes landed on a shadow approaching the living room.

“Oh, shit!” I didn’t even wait for the terror to sink in and let out the loudest yelp ever. My hands were flying to my mouth as I watched the shadow turn into a figure and the figure become recognizable.

“What are you doing here?” It was Akin in black shorts and a black shirt. I had never seen him without a suit before, so looking at his strong collarbones and muscles gave me an idea of his muscular body.

“I am watching a TV!” I looked around and came up with an excuse after my eyes landed on the TV before me.

“Just the turned-off TV?” He raised his perfectly thick brow and tapped his foot on the floor while waiting for my response.

“I know you are afraid of sleeping in your room. But how long can you continue doing that?” He walked over to the couch in front of me and sat down on it.

“You are right, but every time I think I can do it, I just cannot. I fail miserably.” I sat decently because my shorts were way too short. Flashing my big booty to him was not what I wanted to do.

“So you are comfortable here?” he questioned, and I shook my head, “I have some work pending, so I will be staying up all night.

Go to sleep. I will work here and keep an eye out for any monsters for you.” He casually said it without thinking it. would make me feel some sort of way. I gave him a nod and watched him walk away to grab his laptop and files. It just felt weird whenever he showed care. He wouldn't carry any expressions on his face, but his words were enough to satisfy me.

When he returned, he actually came back with more than just his stuff. He had grabbed my pillow and blanket from my room for me.

“Thank you,” I said, watching him set the pillow behind me and then cover me with the blanket. He sat down, and soon he was working. I couldn't help but lie down and keep staring at him. Watching him work made my heart flutter.

He was so unique, and his chiseled body was to die for. I wonder how many abs he has. Must be 8. He is pretty tall. All these sweet thoughts and imaginations made me want to sleep better.

It was safe to say I felt like a child that night. I didn't even wake up to make sure he was there. I just knew he was.

The morning arrived, and I woke up at the sound of the big clock striking 8 a.m. from the corner of the living room. Akin was still sitting on the sofa with his head resting on his back, his legs spread, and his arms comfortably resting on the sides. He must have fallen asleep here after finishing work, and, because he had promised to look out for any monsters, he didn't leave.

"Good morning!" Helel came from behind the couch, so he only saw Akin. "Did you sleep here tonight?" he continued to ask Akin, who raised his face and rubbed his eyes to wake up completely.

"What are you doing here?" It was then that Helel saw me on the couch, steadily getting up and hugging my pillow.

“It is okay. I asked her to sleep here so that she could sleep in peace,” Akin sleepily answered for me. I could not tell what happened overnight, but I felt like I was crushing on Akin.

“Oh! You should ha—,” Helel stopped in midway once he looked at Akin. Of course, he didn’t want to speak to me in front of his brother.

“It’s been raining since 4 am. I think we should go for a run,” Akin gathered his files while talking to his brother, who was looking outside the windows. It was indeed gloomy and raining cats and dogs outside.

“Oh! My brother wants to go for a run with me. That will be exciting.” Helel already looked interested.

“I will take care of them and then join you outside,” Akin stated before he walked back to his study, leaving the two of us alone outside.

“I didn’t want to bother you because I’d already told you I’d be fine.” I immediately began explaining why I hadn’t asked Helel for help last night.

“I don’t care. I love my bed and space a lot, so I am glad I was not asked to stay on the couch. Akin usually works at night, so I guess it is a good idea that he stays here while you sleep on the couch.” It was just that Helel didn’t even look a little jealous that hurt me. What was it about these brothers not caring and being jealous of who their mate was spending time with?

“Let’s go,” soon Akin came back, and the two left for the outside. I was about to head back inside, but then something made me want to look at them. Peering out the window with a pillow tucked under my arm, I saw them taking off their clothes one by one.

27 The Mate Who Lost His Temper

“What did you say?” Akin looked so offended while Helel was watching me with bulging eyes.

“You wanted to know, I only told you what I knew,” I pulled my body closer, raising my shoulders till they touched my ears, and sat like a scared kitten.

“Our father was an alpha in his time before he took over the role of the leader of the council. Then, after the alpha kings mysteriously lost wars and vanished, there were only alphas left to take care of the packs. The council and all the alphas decided to give my father the power to choose alpha kings because he has proven himself worthy of appreciation many times. Now we are the alpha kings of the north, south, east, and west. Our pack, The Golden Crown, is the chief centre of all the packs, so we take care of matters from here. I am in charge of the Northern packs, Helel takes care of the Southern packs, Zane is taking care of the Eastern, and Maddox is the alpha king of the Western packs,” Akin didn’t delve more into the comments I made and decided to just teach me instead.

“Oh! I see,” I nodded with little to no interest once again.

“You still didn’t get it, didn’t you?” Helel was having way too much fun. Just when I thought I had convinced Akin that I understood whatever he taught me, Helel jumped in. “Repeat whatever Akin taught you,” he asked, and my face changed colors.

Akin stared at Helel and then looked my way as he waited for me to answer him.

“Helel is — the alpha king of—,” I hated myself for being so dumb. It was as if the history of our kind didn’t intrigue me.

“Are you for real?” Akin sighed, pulling away from the counter and folding his hands on his chest.

“She is so dumb in the head,” and that comment wasn’t made by any of them. In fact, it was made by someone who I didn’t think would say that about me.

“Zane! When did you come back?” Helel asked him, but I didn’t turn around to look at his face. His comment deeply upset

“When you guys were wasting your time trying to teach her anything. Do you know she learned nothing in school the other day?”

Zane was talking about me without taking my feelings into consideration.

“She takes medications, and they may affect her memory,” Akin immediately defended me.

“But how much can something affect your memory? She is plain stupid. I mean, no offense to her, but she does not know a single thing about herself,” Zane laughed, making fun of me.

“You are not very bright either.” It was then that Helel spoke up, “Tell me why you beat up that club owner?” Now that he was getting investigated, he wasn’t smirking.

The two brothers folded their muscular arms over their chests and stared at Zane, who was at a loss for words.

“He was being rude.” Zane walked past them to the refrigerator to get a bottle of beer when Helel slammed the door shut, not letting him grab the bottle before he answered them.

“You cannot do whatever you want just because you are an alpha king. We are supposed to take care of this pack and the packs that are under our supervision. ” Akin advised him while Zane nodded. I bet he didn’t learn anything either.

“Repeat what Akin just taught you.” The moment I said that, I noticed them turning their heads toward me in silence. They stared at my face for a few seconds before Helel and Akin turned around and started laughing. They were trying to be secretive because Zane was looking at me with an annoyed look on his face.

“Don’t compare me with yourself. I know what he taught me,” Zane grunted and shook his head. He looked furiously at me.

“Okay! Calm down now.” Akin broke the tension by breaking Zane’s icy stare from my face and turning his attention to himself.

“Since there is news of a deadly storm, I don’t want anyone to leave the mansion. We need to stay focused and available just in case we are required for help.” Helel patted Zane’s back after he grabbed his shaker and left the kitchen after Akin. My interaction with Helel and Akin was quite different today than any other day. I began to think maybe they would accept me into their lives if I made slow progress and connected with them. Little did I know, my other mate wasn't happy about something.

"You think I am dumb?" Zane slammed his hand on the counter before me and shook me into pulling away from him.

"We were all joking," I responded in a mild tone.

"No! We were not. Just because they laughed at your joke, you started acting like a clown." Zane's tall body was bent over the counter as he glared at my face.

"Bu—," I don't know why he got so angry at me when it should have been the other way around. Not only did he leave me unattended last night, but he also made some rude comments toward me.

"Shut up! I don't want to hear from you now," he warned me as he waved his finger in my face and walked away from the counter.

"Okay! I will go to my room then," I uttered, and as soon as I turned around to leave, I heard Zane answering someone's call.

"You are coming home, Maddox?" he asked, but it wasn't like he was confirming. He seemed stunned.

"Listen, you don't sound too good right now. How about you calm down first and then—," Zane stopped talking, and when I turned over to look at him, I found him staring at his phone. Maddox had hung up on him, it seemed. “You! Go hide in your room.” Zane raised his face and made direct eye contact with me. His command was enough to make me jump out of my skin.

“He is very mad at you.” Zane had a mixture of emotions on his face; he looked petrified.

29-The Exposed Truth

“I felt a mate bond with her,” Maddox repeated his statement, and my heart pounded even faster this time.

“When was it?” Akin questioned. His voice has changed drastically. He no longer sounded calm and protective.

“And you didn’t tell any of us? Why?” Akin shouted, and I stepped farther away from the door.

“Beca—use—- because how could I tell you guys I felt a mate bond with my soon-to-be stepsister?” He yelled back, but he raised his voice out of exhaustion.

“So, what are you here for now?” Akin was the only one talking at this point, while the others remained silent.

“I just want to know something from her and none of you should be interrupting. She is not your stepsister only, but my ma—te too,” I could only imagine the face he made when calling me his mate. He sounded grossed out at the idea. It was funny how he wasn't feeling any of that disgust when he was crawling into the bed with me and getting hard while sleeping behind me.

"Fine!" The change in Akin's attitude upset me. It drowned my hopes, and I blamed no one but my wolf for it. Did she have to feel the mate bond with so many werewolves?

It was then the door opened and I ran behind the bed. I didn't want that confrontation; I didn't do anything wrong.

Soon they all walked into the room and the next thing I hear is aggressive footsteps approaching me. I was beginning to feel anxious, as if I was the one who created this bond between us.

He appeared before me, wearing a stern look on his face. It was after a week that I saw him. Instead of asking me how I spent those days without him, he grabbed my arm and forced me to my feet. Helel, Zane, and Akin were standing in a circle, the same circle where Maddox shoved me in.

"Tell me what you did to create a mate bond with me," Maddox yelled, his blue eyes scaring the living hell out of me. His eyebrows were slanted and met at the front as he furrowed.

“I didn’t do anything.” I shivered in my skin, looking around at the others. Akin was shaking his head in disbelief while Helel was not even raising his face. He must be thinking he should have acted the same way as Maddox to display disgust. Zane was the only one watching us with an indifferent expression on his face.

“Then how the hell did an omega like you feel a mate bond with me and that alpha from school? How is it even possible? Is it the same way your mother made our father fall for her?” Maddox’s accusations were assassinating my character and hurting my feelings. Being an Omega seemed to be a very cursed thing.

“Tell me.” Maddox grabbed a fistful of my hair out of the blue and clasped my face in his other hand. His action shook me.

“Hey!” Helel was quick enough to free me from his grasp and push him away. “Don’t you fucking raise your hand at her again?” I didn’t expect him to come forward and protect me from my crazy mate.

“I don’t think she has the power to control a mate bond,” Helel added, making sure Maddox doesn’t reach me again. Now that I was behind him, I clung to his shirt.

“Don’t protect her. She did it. I am telling you, she is evil,” Maddox was shouting at the top of his lungs and trying to grab me from behind Helel, but he couldn’t. Obviously, Helel was stronger in build, so him shielding me was protecting me from Maddox’s attempts to get his hands on me. Tears appeared in my eyes when I recalled how he grabbed my hair. It felt so insulting.

“I don’t know, maybe the Moon Goddess saw you for who you are and gave you filth for a mate,” I yammered in tears from behind Helel’s back, and silence engulfed them once again.

“What makes you think you are any better than me?” I was shaking badly but resting my forehead against Helel’s back and not letting go of his shirt.

“What the fuck did you say?” Maddox and Zane yelled in unison. I guess Zane took it personally, too.

“What the heck is wrong with you guys?” Helel pushed the two of them away when they fought to get their hands on me. He then stretched his hand back to lightly rest it on my back as if to reassure me I was hiding behind him. I was disappointed by Akin’s silence.

“Why are you defending her like that?” It was then that Maddox shouted at his brother. I didn’t want them to argue with Helel, who was keeping me protected behind him. His heart was beating calmly as I listened to it beat from behind his back.

“Because it is wrong what you are trying to do. It is as if you are taking dad’s anger out on her,” Helel yelled back, but Zane let out a scoff to mock Helel’s response.

“That is enough! You said you wanted to speak to her but till now, you have only shown aggression,” Akin finally broke his silence, but I wasn’t satisfied with his reaction. He took all that time to call out Maddox. If Helel hadn’t stepped forward, I bet everybody else would have stood there and watched Maddox beat me up.

“Because Helel over here is protecting her like a good stepbrother,” Zane commented. I reckoned he had something to say when he scoffed earlier.

“Or maybe like a good mate.” Those words from his mouth stunned everyone. A gasp from Maddox’s lips terrified me.

“I am shocked that you two have been calling out Maddox only when she has been feeling mate bond left and right and then told me all about it just so that she can get a reaction out of me,” Zane continued, but this time he took it too far. He was now lying too.

“What-why would she do that?” Akin hadn’t come out of shock when Zane’s answer to him left him frozen.

“Because I am also her mate,”

30-Left Alone in The Room With Him

“This is a bunch of nonsense! You are telling me all of you are her mates?” Akin was now stepping up to talk more aggressively.

“And she is making us fight with each other,” Zane lied, “She told me she is mated to both Helel and Maddox and they come to her room to mate with her,” as he continued to lie, I felt like Helel would step aside and leave me unshielded.

“What the fuck!” Maddox shouted, coming at Helel, who pushed him back once again.

“You are still going to protect her?” After getting pushed by his brother, Maddox shouted in his brother’s face for answers.

“Unless you act like a human and keep your wolf calm, I am not stepping aside.” Helel didn’t remove his hand from my back, but I noticed his heart rate had now increased. He must have felt betrayed by whatever claims Zane made.

“He is lying. I never told him anything. He came to my room to help me sleep peacefully when he started questioning me.” I couldn’t stand being a dummy and not telling the truth.

“Helel! Step aside, I need to speak to her,” It was Akin who demanded Helel walk away so that they could interrogate me.

“There is no need for interrogation. She is making this shit up. Did you guys not remember how they lied about me harassing her in school? That’s what they do. They lie. Or tell me, how else did I find out that you two are mates with her?” Zane retorted, as he didn’t like the idea of giving me a chance to explain my side of the truth.

“You called Maddox and he told you himself.” I stepped out from behind Helel’s back to staring at Zane for lying so bluntly.

“He never called me and I never told him shit.” Maddox shook his head as he proved me wrong. It was only then that I realized Zane lied about talking to Maddox while I stupidly told him the truth.

“She is mates with all of you?” Akin sighed, pulling his hands behind his neck and letting air out of his mouth aggressively.

“Why didn’t you tell me anything?” Akin looked at Helel. I bet the two had a great bond because they were twins, but now Helel’s loyalty to his brother was getting questioned.

“Now you see! This is gross how she mates with everyone. When has this ever happened? A second chance mate is only given once the mate rejects you. In her case, she is just collecting mates as if they are Pokémon characters.” Maddox turned their attention to me again.

I didn't know how else to respond to him because it was indeed concerning and something that had never happened before. The problem seemed to be with me and not with them.

“We need to tell father,” Akin sighed, running a hand through his hair. Helel hadn't moved a muscle this whole time. I don't know what he was thinking, but he might be upset with me because Zane did make it seem like I told him about Helel wanting to come to my room and stay inside to keep me safe.

My body reacted to him, suggesting that. Mom will be very upset with me if she finds out I have found so many mates because I didn't take my medicine and even hid it from her.

“But what if dad asks us to accept her? we share everything, it will not seem like a big thing to him.”

Zane didn't like the idea of exposing the truth to anyone.

“I don’t want to be known as someone who is mated to his stepsister,” Maddox shook his head as he walked back and forth,

“She is just disgusting. This mother and daughter only came here to take over.” He was back to accusing me of plotting against them. I know I didn’t come here to steal anything from them, but who would convince them? They were convinced that I and my mother had done something to make them feel a mate bond with me.

“So what are we going to do, then?” Akin stared at Zane and Maddox, who wasn’t listening to any of his ideas. Even I was concerned about what kind of plan Maddox was going to come up with to deal with this matter. He nodded to himself as if he was conducting a plan.

“Guys! Dad is calling me,” before Maddox could speak up again, Zane received a call from his father. “He must be worried about the pack because of the storm,” Akin realized there was a much bigger issue pending.

“How about we let it rest for the night and deal with the matters of the pack first?” That was the first time Helel talked after giving us all the silent treatment.

“Yeah, that’s a good idea. Let’s meet in the attic in a few minutes and start surveying the cameras,” Akin agreed with him, but there seemed to be a bit of tension between the two. I could only think of myself as being the reason behind Helel stealing the eyes from his brother.

The moment they decided to focus on the pack, they were gone. I was left alone in the room to suffer. I cannot believe so much happened in only twenty minutes. But those twenty minutes were like hell to me. I got to see the true face of Zane, who probably didn’t even like my sight but came to have a fun night with me, and I thought he cared.

Before I could think I had survived the night, I saw Maddox entering my room once again. My body shuddered at his image because now there was no one in my room to protect me from him.

“You really thought you had survived the night?” Maddox stepped in, his eyes glaring deep into my soul.

“HELEL!” without a delay, I screamed, calling for help.

“Oh, he is not going to hear your screams. He is in the attic, wearing big headphones and checking the cameras all around the South, taking care of his duties.” Maddox didn’t sound as aggressive as before.

“And I am here to take care of my duties, to take care of a mess for everyone,” he stopped right when we were face to face.

“What are you g-oing to do to me?” I asked, a gulp running down my throat as I witnessed his muscles stiffening.
