Chapter 11 - 11 Expulsion (Part 2)

Chapter 11: Chapter 11 Expulsion (Part 2)

Mr. Wood didn't have a chance to enter the principal's office again, and Robert Green didn't see Mr. Wood again. After leaving, an anxious Mr. Wood immediately dialed Finn Lewis's number. Finn was only cooperating with the investigation, so his communication devices were naturally not confiscated.

"I can take the call, right?" Finn said.

"Of course." Sharp James nodded.

"Hello, Mr. Wood." Seeing it was a call from Mr. Wood, Finn answered.

"Finn, what's happening over there?!" As soon as he picked up the call, Mr. Wood anxiously asked.

"What else could it be? I am still here cooperating with the investigation. Mr. Wood, don't worry, I'm okay. Things will eventually come to light." Finn replied seriously.

"Finn, listen to me. If your money comes from a legitimate source, explain it clearly to the officers right now and I'll take you to see the principal! However, if your money comes from illegal sources, surrender yourself now. You cannot ruin your future! I just went to the principal's office, Robert Thomp got there even before me, and it's clear that the principal believes him. There's a chance they might expel you!" Mr. Wood said anxiously.

"What?!" Finn was taken aback. He jumped up from his chair. Expulsion! It felt like a thunderbolt had struck in Finn's mind. However, he quickly calmed down. Although Finn felt he didn't really need the school enrollment anymore because he had Zero behind him, having or not having the enrollment didn't seem to make a significant difference.

But this was of enormous importance to his parents. Finn still remembered when he was admitted to F University, the whole village was astounded. After all, it was the third-ranked comprehensive university in Flam nation! To his parents, it was a lifetime honor! Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Moreover, Finn's mother had a heart condition. Finn didn't dare to think what would happen if his mother found out about this!

"Mr. Wood, leave the rest to me, but can I ask you a favor?" Finn quickly asked.

"Go ahead." Mr. Wood replied immediately.

"No matter what, please, don't contact my parents. If they found out I could be expelled, my mother has heart disease, you know what could happen." Finn said gravely.

"Well...I can help you, but you have to promise me one thing." Mr. Wood hesitated for a moment, then nodded. This could potentially be a matter of life and death. Finn's family lived in a village where there weren't any hospitals nearby. If they found out about this, things could turn disastrous.

"Go on."

"You have to assure me that your money comes from a legitimate source."

"I assure you." Finn responded without hesitation, although to be honest, Finn wasn't even sure if what he was doing with Zero was illegal or not.

After hanging up the phone, Sharp James, who was nearby, probably had an idea about what was going on. He said, "Finn, you don't want your family to worry, right? You can choose to tell me everything now. I won't spread it out. It's for your own good, isn't it?"

"You can promise him, your issue can be resolved in about ten hours." Zero's voice suddenly rose again.

Hearing Zero's words, the worry that had been suffocating Finn finally eased. He then said, "Director Samuel, it's not that I don't want to tell you, it's just that some people haven't gotten here yet. Rest assured, in no more than a day's time, I can prove to you that my money is legally obtained."

"Alright then." Sharp James thought for a moment and reluctantly agreed. At this point, Finn's case hadn't even officially begun. All they could do was ask Finn to cooperate with the investigation. In fact, even though Finn had a large unknown source of income, unless someone reported it, they had no right to investigate. Cora's complaint, in the view of Sharp James, didn't meet the standards to open a case.

"Excuse me, do you know of a student named Finn Lewis?" Luca Hall, having arrived on F University's campus, asked a student. As a lawyer who had repeatedly represented the government of Flam Nation, Luca spoke Mandarin very fluently. He nearly qualified as a Flam Nation language speaker. However, Luca knew it was better not to reveal that he spoke the local language when in a foreign country. It often led to unexpected gains.

Thus, Luca has been conversing with students in English. Luckily, for students in Flam Nation, while specialized English might be tough, general everyday conversation was not a problem.

"Finn Lewis?" The student hesitated for a moment before saying: "There are millions of people with that name in Flam Nation, and I bet there are tens to hundreds of people named that at F University alone. Who are you looking for?"

The student's words left Luca at a loss. He might not live in Flam Nation, but he could guess that the name was as common as Mick or John in the North Federation. Trying to find his specific target among several thousand students would be no easy task, especially because he didn't even have the phone number of his prospective client.

Luca was not complaining about this for the first time. If he had a phone number, would he need to put in so much effort? Besides, was there anyone who didn't have a phone in this era?

"Sorry, I'm looking for a Finn Lewis who studies computer science, specifically software and programming." Luca quickly said.

"Computer software and programming?" The student looked puzzled for a moment, then examined Luca with a strange expression. After a while, he finally said: "You're not looking for that Finn Lewis, are you? Well, I'm not sure if it's the one you're looking for, but there is a famous Finn Lewis in the computer science department. However, he should not be at school now. His teacher's office is on the third floor of the academic building, the teacher is known as Justin Wood."

"Alright, thank you." Luca responded in surprise and delight, not expecting to get the information so quickly.

Once Luca had headed towards the academic building, one of the two male students said: "Hey, don't tell me you think this foreigner is here to find the wealthy brother."

"Why is it impossible?" The student who had spoken to Luca earlier retorted.

"God, how many 'Finn Lewises' are there at F University? Even if we're talking about studying software programming, there are many, right?"

"Hehe, among the software and programming students named Finn Lewis, I only know one wealthy brother. I don't know about anyone else." The student laughed and said.

"Damn, you're something."

"Hey, I'm not just making things up, I have a feeling this foreigner might really be here to find wealthy brother. Didn't you hear? Wealthy brother was taken away by the police today to assist in an investigation, they said there was a problem with his money sources. This foreigner might be here to solve it for him." The student quickly replied.

"Enough, 'feeling'? You mean 'pregnant feeling'. You've been reading too many novels. But Cora, that kind of woman... I can't believe there are people who still love her." The other male student remarked.

"If it were me, I'd throw money at her too, she's such a fool. I was there that day at the scene, let me tell you..." The student excitedly began describing what happened that day.

Luca Hall promptly found Mr. Wood's office following the boy's direction. Inside, Mr. Wood was fretting. Although no official notice had come from the school, he knew that a discussion about possibly expelling Finn Lewis was taking place, and he had been asked to attend a meeting on it soon.

Even if Mr. Wood was invited to the meeting, the decision ultimately had nothing to do with him. This sort of situation only arises when a decision has already been made at a higher level, and discussions are carried out merely as a formality!

Mr. Wood felt distressed. While Lewis might not be an exceptional student, he is not a bad one either. Aside from the specific incident, he was just one of many ordinary students. But who asked him to lose his temper and openly curse at Robert Thomp in the office, even bringing up many of Thomp's stains in public?

If Thomp didn't retaliate, it would be against his nature. Other teachers were certainly aware of Thomp's issues, which were widely discussed among students. The problem is that no one dare speak openly about them.

Although Thomp was not exactly a high-ranking leader in the school, anyone could see from the situation in the principal's office that even the principal gave him face.

As Mr. Wood was worrying, there was a voice from a teacher at the door: "Mr. Wood, someone is looking for you."

Mr. Wood looked up, surprised, and saw a foreign man with blond hair and green eyes, approximately in his forties.

“Hello, is this Mr. Justin Wood?” Luca Hall asked directly in Federation Language.

As the teacher of Computer Science, Mr. Wood’s Federation Language needed to be decent, and Luca Hall’s spoken English gave away that he must be from the Flame Nation. Because when he mentioned Wood’s name, he referred to him as Justin Wood, with the last name first and the first name second, which is contrary to the naming habit of foreigners.

“Yes, it is. Who might you be?” Mr. Wood immediately replied.

“Nice to meet you, I am Luca Hall, a lawyer from Pruet Law Firm in the North Federation.” Luca Hall introduced himself and showed a picture of Finn on his phone. “Are you Finn Lewis’s teacher? This is his picture.” Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Upon seeing the picture of Finn on Luca Hall’s phone, Mr. Wood felt his head explode. A lawyer has even come! What on earth has this lousy kid done! But after giving it a second thought, a billion Flame Nation coins is worth nearly 20 million Federation coins! It can’t possibly be a trivial matter!

“Mr. Wood?” Seeing Mr. Wood stupefied, Luca Hall repeated questioningly.

“Yes... I am Finn’s teacher... But... What do you need from him? What has he done? How much money did he steal from you?” Mr. Wood plucked up the courage to ask, as this matter must be resolved one way or another.

“Aren’t you here to retrieve money from Finn? Didn’t he steal your money?” Mr. Wood was also taken aback, but since Luca Hall’s reaction was clearly genuine, Mr. Wood quickly questioned anxiously.

“Absolutely not. Mr. Lewis is my employer. I came from North Federation especially to handle his affairs. If we must talk about money, it does involve money, but only because Mr. Lewis hired me. But what did you mean by stealing money? Does Mr. Lewis need to steal money from others? You must be joking!” Luca Hall’s smile instantly disappeared and he asked seriously.

But Mr. Wood was left dumbfounded by Luca Hall’s words. So he wasn’t here for Finn? And Finn was his employer? Then... Mr. Wood instantly understood that this must be the person Finn mentioned, who was coming to handle his affairs. Mr. Wood immediately laughed and hastily added: “No worries. But, Mr.

Hall, you need to meet our principal and prove it to us.”

“I assume, Mr. Wood, you should first tell me the details of the situation. How can my employer be implicated in stealing money? It’s absolutely impossible!” Luca Hall exclaimed. Steal money? What a joke! As an owner of 4.8% of Apple’s stock, worth over 30 billion Federation coins, would he need to steal money? Was this a joke? If this news gets out, countless banks in the North Federation would be willing to lend money to Finn – millions of Federation coins can be borrowed!

“Alright then.” Mr. Wood thought for a moment; although he did not know

Luca Hall’s intentions, the fact that Finn could afford a lawyer from the North Federation proved that Finn’s money was legitimately obtained! Plus, for Luca Hall to verify this, he would need to know the entire story.

Mr. Wood immediately explained the whole situation to Luca Hall. When Luca Hall heard the story, he almost burst out laughing. But he knew that this was his time to shine. Luca didn’t expect that he would get the opportunity to help his employer get out of trouble as soon as he arrived from the North Federation!

This was a golden opportunity! You should know how much money could be earned each year by being Finn’s personal lawyer! It was way more than what he would earn being just a lawyer! Although he was considered affluent himself, he was nowhere near Finn’s league. No one would complain about having too much money, would they?

“Mr. Wood, this is hilarious. Who has been suggesting that my employer’s money is obtained illegally? It’s simply a joke. Whether it’s two million Flame Nation coins, or even if you add a zero to that figure and convert it into Federation coins, my employer can easily afford it without so much as a frown!” Luca Hall spoke with conviction.

Hearing Luca Hall’s words, Mr. Wood was dumbfounded. So Finn could pick up twenty million Federation coins? And all without batting an eye?

“Well, Mr. Hall, could you first tell me what exactly is going on?” Mr. Wood inquired tentatively.

“I’m sorry, this involves billions, even tens of billions of Federal coins of commercial decryption. I apologize! If you insist on knowing, we can contact the relevant departments in your country, but you must sign a confidentiality agreement first!” Luca Hall’s professional demeanor kicked in. Most importantly, Luca was more than just a North Federation lawyer. Being able to handle international cases meant Luca had comprehensive knowledge of both the North Federation’s and Flame Nation’s laws.

“Well...” Hearing Luca Hall’s response, although Mr. Wood was still in doubt, Luca Hall’s status was certainly more convincing than Finn’s.

“Alright, Mr. Hall, let’s go to the principal’s office now. We need to clarify this situation with the principal first.” Mr. Wood immediately acquiesced. Whether he knew the specifics was not important, but they couldn’t let the school expel Finn. If what Luca was saying was true and Finn was expelled, the school would likely become the laughing stock of the whole Flame Nation. It could even become famous worldwide.

“Of course, I am more than willing.” Luca Hall immediately nodded in agreement..

“Headmaster, Mr. Wood is here to see you,” the Headmaster’s assistant entered from the door and said to Robert Green.

Hearing this, Robert Green instantly felt a headache coming on. He obviously knew why Mr. Wood was here, “Haven’t I told you, if he comes, just say I’m resting and we can discuss matters during the meeting?” He really didn’t want to see Mr. Wood alone.

“But, he came with a foreigner, saying it was about Finn Lewis. And, that foreigner is a lawyer from the North Federation,” the Headmaster’s assistant explained hurriedly. search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“What?!” Robert Green was stunned for a moment, then lifted his head and said, “You mean Mr. Wood brought a lawyer from the North Federation over regarding Finn Lewis’s matter?”

“Yes, I specifically asked that foreigner in Federation Language, he confirmed this, and he also said, Finn Lewis is his employer,” the Headmaster’s assistant nodded in affirmation.

“Let them in,” Robert Green was no fool, regardless of who this sudden foreigner was, there seemed to be more going on with this matter. Soon, Mr. Wood and Luca Hall entered from outside the office. Initially, Robert Green wondered if Mr. Wood had simply hired a random foreigner to deceive him. After all, in a big international city like Celeston City, it’s not hard to find a foreigner.

However, once he saw the foreigner, Robert Green knew this man was certainly not here to fool anyone. The aura he carried and his attire made it clear. This foreign man wore an authentic Armani suit, that much Robert Green could tell. He himself liked this brand, even though he rarely dressed in it.

Furthermore, the rest of his clothing was well chosen. "Mr. Wood, who is this?" Robert Green stood from his position as the two men entered.

"Headmaster Green, my name is Luca Hall and I'm here to express my strong protest for the disrespect shown to my employer! Although I'm not a lawyer of the Flame Nation, I am well-versed in Flame Nation law, and I hold a lawyer's license in Flame Nation!" Luca Hall cut in before Mr. Wood could speak, expressing his point righteously.

Hearing Luca Hall's unaccented Mandarin, Robert Green and Mr. Wood were taken aback. Mr. Wood had assumed Luca Hall didn't speak the language of the Flame Nation, but now, God, if you closed your eyes, you wouldn't be able to tell this was spoken by a foreigner.

"Mr. Hall, I think there seems to be a bit of a misunderstanding between us," Robert Green quickly replied. This matter couldn't be taken lightly, especially as the person standing in front of him was a bona fide foreigner. Even though the people of Flame Nation didn't place as much importance on foreigners as they had twenty or thirty years ago, dealing with diplomacy wasn't a trivial matter.

"No, Headmaster Green, there is no misunderstanding. I learned about the whole thing from Mr. Wood. Why are you expelling my employer? Especially without fully investigating the truth of the situation?" Luca Hall asked in a serious tone.

Robert Green angrily glanced at Mr. Wood. Not everything needed to be talked about in the presence of a foreigner. Mr. Wood shrugged his shoulders and said: "Headmaster Green, it's not my fault. Mr. Hall is here to deal with Finn Lewis's issue, so I had to tell him what had happened."

Upon hearing this, Robert Green felt a headache coming on. He looked at Luca Hall and said, "Mr. Hall, alright, now that you know what's happened, can you tell me if there's something wrong with the process?"

"Certainly. Aren't you all suspecting that my employer's money is illegally obtained? I'll have you know, the money owned by my employer not only isn't illegal but also earned through his technical skills. The crucial point is even if he were to splash out two hundred million Flame Nation coins on people, I believe my employer wouldn't so much as frown," Hall said with a solemn face.

"Mr. Hall, aren't you exaggerating a little bit? He comes from an ordinary family. Fine, even if his money is legally earned, where's he going to find two hundred million Flame Nation coins?" Robert Green couldn't help but retort.

Luca Hall stared at Robert Green and couldn't help but laugh. (You don't believe it? Damn it, I didn't believe it initially either, but this is what actually happened!). He could still remember his astonishment when he first heard the news. Now it was time for these people to taste the same sense of disbelief.

"Mr. Green, although I don't know what the situation was before, since I started working here, although I wouldn't dare say my employer's family is the richest in Flame Nation, they certainly are among the top ten wealthiest," Luca Hall

"Mr. Hall, you aren't making a joke, are you?" Robert Green and Mr. Wood gazed at each other, their mouths wide open in astonishment. After a long while, Robert Green couldn't help but retort.

"I didn't fly thousands of miles to Flame Nation to tell you a joke, Mr. Green," Luca Hall responded unhesitatingly.

"Alright, no matter what you say, Mr. Hall. Do you have any proof? Without proof, we simply can't believe you. This matter is too incredible," Robert Green refrained from losing his temper and cursing. (Isn't this a goddam joke? Among the top ten wealthiest in Flame Nation? Not sure how much money the top ten richest people of Flame Nation should have, but it should be at least a billion Flame Nation coins, right? And him? A student from a peasant family who worked outside for two years?)

"If both of you are willing to sign this document," Luca Hall took out two confidentiality documents from his bag as if performing a magic trick, passing them to Mr. Wood and Robert Green.

Luca Hall was astonished by his own foresight. As this matter required strict confidentiality, before coming here, he had prepared many confidentiality agreements. After all, coming here meant he would have to disclose this information to some people, so these agreements were indispensable.

"Uh, what's this?" Robert Green asked, looking at the document in his hand. It was full of Federation language, and was a professional legal Federation document, which Robert Green did not understand.

"This is a confidentiality agreement in Federation language, the Flame Nation language part is at the back. You two can take a look. If you can guarantee not to disclose this information, I can tell you the truth. Otherwise, you have no right to know. If you insist on expelling my client, that's okay too. I believe Celeston University wouldn't mind admitting my client without exams," Luca Hall expressed calmly.

Robert Green and Mr. Wood looked at each other, then turned to the back of the document written in Flame Nation language for a look. The terms of the agreement were perfect with no issues. They were extremely strict and stated that if any damage was caused by leaking related information, double compensation and appropriate legal responsibility would be required. Besides this, there was nothing else of note..

Robert Green still signed it. He had no choice, as this matter was tied to his future prospects. Moreover, it was simply a matter of keeping the information confidential, there were no other limits. Also, the contract didn't require him to keep everything secret forever, just until it was publicly disclosed. Thus, he felt no pressure while signing.

Mr. Wood naturally signed as well, and even faster than Robert Green. Otherwise, he couldn't be at ease. After all, he wondered what kind of mess

Finn Lewis had made.

Upon seeing both of them sign and noting that everything about the contract seemed in order, Luca Hall smiled to himself and tucked the contract into his bag. Only then did he break his silence: "Now that you both have signed this contract, I am able to disclose further details to you."

"Mr. Hall, I am intrigued to know, how exactly did he earn his money?" Robert Green asked.

Luca Hall nodded and replied directly, "There's nothing much to it. My client merely used a piece of technology in exchange for a 4.8% stake in A Computer

Ltd. "

"You said what?!" Robert Green and Mr. Wood were gobsmacked, their mouths hanging open in disbelief. It took a while for Robert Green to digest the news.

"My client exchanged his technology for a 4.8% stake in A Company." Luca Hall struggled to hide his amusement at their reaction. The same disbelief etched on Robert's and Mr. Wood's faces mirrored his initial reaction. He could hardly contain himself but his face remained serene.

Even though he wasn't responsible for this achievement, witnessing their reactions provided immense satisfaction. This feeling of delight enveloped him from head to toe. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"I wonder if both of you still have different opinions about my client spending two million dollars? Oh, I suppose that's not just about spending money. I guess the moral issue involving the girl in question plays a part too. Unclear of the details, but let me guess, you assumed my client has no money? Do you realize how many people would want to share his bed when word gets out about this?" Said Luca Hall with a derisive smirk.

As a lawyer in the North Federation, Luca Hall knew too well that you have to consider your client's feelings, not other's opinions. He was certain that his absentee client would be ecstatic as well. It was evident from his spending habits.

Lawyers and psychology go hand in hand.

"Mr. Hall, may I clarify, is the A Computer Ltd you're referring to the one I know?" Robert Green asked, looking dubious.

"Yes, Robert, the A Computer Ltd. I am referring to is indeed the same one you're thinking of because..." Luca Hall glanced towards Green's phone on the desk, "You're using their product."

Both Robert Green and Mr. Wood unconsciously looked at the phone on the desk. Impossible? He quizzed, "Mr. Hall, you're not joking, are you? I don't know exactly what A Computer Ltd. is worth, but a 4.8% stake should be worth tens of billions of federal coins! What kind of technology is worth that much?"

"Well, Robert, I can tell you, according to today's stock price, A Computer Ltd. is worth 6522 billion federal coins. The value of the stocks that Mr. Lewis holds is 313 billion federal coins! Not only tens of billions of federal coins. As for what sort of technology, sorry, if I knew, the shares would be mine. Do you comprehend?" Luca Hall retorted sarcastically.

Funny how some people refuse to believe what's right under their noses. He could relate to that himself. If he hadn't seen the company's authorization document, he wouldn't have believed in this absurdity. A young Flame Nation university student becoming a major personal shareholder of the world's largest high-tech company?

It's hard to believe! Unfortunately, it is truth, not a joke!

Robert Green was dumbfounded. Although the matter had nothing to do with him, he was taken aback. To think a student from his university would accomplish such a feat was mind-boggling. Especially for the student they were just about to expel. The situation was beyond his comprehension! Yet, he had to face facts.

The authorization document from A Computer Ltd. and a stock transfer contract with the signatures of most of the board's shareholders from A Computer Ltd were displayed. The circumstances were truly unbelievable.

Unable to rebut Luca Hall's harsh words from earlier, Robert Green reluctantly laughed at the absurdity. Not ruining Finn's reputation? Then what charge would they use to expel him? If they expelled him without any valid reason, the principal, Robert Green, himself would be compelled to resign. He would be lambasted by the entire nation.

To turn this around, they could be seen as expelling the major individual shareholder of the world's largest high-tech company. People worldwide would ridicule their twisted logic. If the news got out, every single university around the globe would be eager to enrol Finn Lewis.

A student who could trade his technology for the largest individual shares of A Computer Ltd while still an undergrad, what could he possibly achieve once he graduated?

Chapter Fifteen: The Plot Thickens

Thinking of this, Robert Green laughed and said without hesitation: "Mr. Hall, you are mistaken. How can we expel such an outstanding student like Finn Lewis? We always strive to work with a commitment towards the students. Now that the matter has been fully investigated, there would be no talk of expelling Finn. What's more, we will apply for an excellence scholarship for him! I will clarify this matter with you and Mr. Wood later."

Mr. Wood, standing nearby, was flabbergasted at the Principal's sudden change of attitude. Even being a teacher himself, Mr. Wood couldn't cope with such extreme emotional changes. However, Luca Hall was unphased, inwardly cursing the cunning of these people. He remembered that Mr. Wood had already told him that Finn didn't want to leave the school.

Otherwise, Luca would have proposed Finn to drop out and assured that he would receive an invitation from the renowned H University. However, seeing the school change its stance, Luca followed suit, grinning as he said: “Principal Green is truly a responsible person. I’m sure Finn thinks so too. Besides, I’ve heard that the school was planning a meeting to discuss Finn’s expulsion. I wonder what’s the outcome.”

“Rest assured, Mr. Hall, the matter is well in hand,” Robert Green quickly responded. Was he joking? It would be comical to continue the expulsion process now.

No secret stays hidden for long. And in the F University campus, the incident had attained quite a reputation. The rumor of a boy dropping two million on his ex-girlfriend, in particular, had swept through the campus forums. Everyone seemed to know, and if it hadn’t been for the school’s strict regulations against accepting interviews and spreading publicity—with expulsion as the penalty—the media would have reported on it sooner.

Regardless, numerous media channels still covered the incident without much public outcry. Inside the F University campus, the situation was sensational. When Mr. Wood received news of the meeting regarding Finn’s expulsion, and rumors of Cora Franklin and Yuri Lucas reporting Finn to the police started circulating, almost the entire student body was aware of it.

Even Finn’s background was discussed. Everyone was speculating where Finn’s money came from and whether the school would actually expel him. Most students still thought he would be expelled, especially as the discussions had already begun publicly. Cora Franklin and Yuri Lucas had ensured they had spread the word, especially Cora, who wished everyone to know that Finn was about to face expulsion. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Finn’s refusal to give Cora the money had pushed her to the brink, but most students disapproved of her actions. Many openly voiced their sympathies for Finn. Some male students even felt gratified about Finn taking revenge, despite his actions being questionable.

They knew that incidents like this happened all the time on the F University campus—although they weren’t always as extreme. Stealing girlfriends was a common occurrence—it didn’t happen only to Finn.

As everyone awaited the development of the events, some students even gathered around the meeting room hoping for some news. But the developments caught everyone off-guard. The meeting commenced on time, but the proposal to expel Finn by Robert Thomp was immediately met with strong oppositions from Mr. Wood and Principal Green.

The other school executives who had assumed the matter was decided already were taken aback. All of them started looking at each other, wondering what was happening. Robert Thomp was most bewildered, having thought they had agreed to expel Finn; why the flip-flopping?

Regardless of Thomp's objections, the decision was unlikely to change due to the Principal's vehement opposition. Green even proposed to use his directorial veto, so naturally, none of the vice chancellors was going to voice any opposition. No matter how much Thomp tried to rock the boat, it was to no avail.

Thus, the matter was resolved as is. As soon as the meeting was over, the Principal, Mr. Wood and a foreigner were seen leaving the campus in the Principal's car. Where they were headed nobody knew.

Now, it was nearly the end of office hours, and the police were looking a little helpless. Sharp James shook his head ruefully. Naturally, they couldn't object to Finn cooperating with their inquiries. They spent the time drinking tea and chatting. Finn wasn't a suspect, and they had no authority to detain him. Seeing that it was nearly closing time, James thought this would be the end of it.

At least until someone filed a report, there was no way they could investigate Finn's money, which now had to be returned to him. But just as James was about to let him leave, a police officer walked in, glanced at him and at Finn, then whispered, "Director Samuel, the principal from F University, Finn's teacher, and a foreigner came to the station with matters regarding Finn."

"The principal of F University? Here?", James was surprised. This was not a small matter. What could it mean? Even if Finn really had issues, the Principal of F University wouldn't be here.

"Bring them in immediately," James ordered at once.

Soon, the three men were ushered into James' office. As soon as he saw the foreigner, Finn recognized him to be the man from the photograph. Likewise, Luca Hall recognized Finn too. The sight of Finn brought him immense relief. Ignoring James, Luca walked up to Finn with a big smile on his face, "Mr. Finn, my name is Luca Hall. I'm your personal attorney, here to discuss your property issues in the North Federation."

Hall's pitch -perfect Mandarin took everyone, including James, by surprise. On hearing about Finn's property in the North Federation, James understood that the source of Finn's money isn't an issue..

Chapter 16 This Sweet and Sour Rhythm (Part 1)

“Hello.” Finn Lewis stood up, extended a hand to Luca Hall to shake hands. This foreigner came just in time, and seeing that Mr. Wood and the headmaster had also followed, it was clear that Luca had first gone to his own school to solve his own problem.

“Director Samuel, hello. I am Mr. Lewis’s personal lawyer. Although I am from the North Federation, I not only have a North Federation lawyer’s license, but also a Flame Nation lawyer’s license. According to the laws of Flame Nation, without anyone reporting a crime and without any case filed, you can at most only ask my client for information. And now, since the time when my client arrived at your police station is approaching 8 hours, it means that my client has the right to leave. Director Samuel, do you have a different opinion?” After Luca introduced himself to Finn, he immediately stood up and started to challenge Sharp James with a series of questions.

Luca’s words made Finn somewhat stunned, but soon Finn showed a full face of smiles. Satisfied, super satisfied! Damn it, look at their professional ethics! Good, very good! Finn was just short of applauding. Seeing Headmaster Green’s embarrassed face, Finn knew that Luca must not have given him a good look in his office.

“Of course, of course, but may I know what exactly happened?” Sharp James gave a bitter smile. This situation made him feel a little nervous. Even if James’s education wasn’t very high and didn’t understand the law, he also knew that a North Federation lawyer was not only proficient in North Federation law but also knew Flame Nation law very well and held the lawyer’s licenses of the two countries. This was no simple feat.

To put it simply, if you want to have a lawyer’s license in Flame Nation, you must have Flame Nation citizenship! Because only Flame Nation citizens can take the Flame Nation lawyer’s exams. Of course, once you have a lawyer’s qualification, your lawyer’s qualification is still valid even if you apply for foreign citizenship later. But even so, it’s not easy, right?

“Um, Director Samuel, Mr. Wood and I are here to prove that there is no problem with Finn’s property. This doesn’t need to be investigated, right?” Headmaster Green, standing next to them, quickly opened his mouth. “Because of some business issues, Mr. Hall has shown us related documents that can prove Finn’s property possession. But if Director Samuel wants to see it, he also needs to sign a confidentiality agreement because it does involve business secrets.”

When saying this, Headmaster Green gave a bitter smile. Because he had already learned about what happened in Robert Thomp’s office, damn, back then everyone didn't believe there were business secrets, but now it's clear there are! You have to know. If this news is released, the stock price of company A may be affected! If it falls drastically, then who can afford the loss? Damn! Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Don't talk about dropping too much. If the stock price drops a few dozen federal coins, then A's market value will evaporate hundreds of billions of federal coins in value. Who can afford it? This must be an international joke.

"If that's the case, then let it go. If Headmaster Green can vouch for it, then we have no problem. How about this, Finn, you sign a document with us, and then you can take your money back." Sharp James was very straightforward. He didn't want to get involved in this sort of thing. After all, he could choose whether or not to handle it. Even if he lets it go now, they can't say he broke the rules, so James isn't worried.

But having him sign a confidentiality agreement, James won't sign. Some things are better to know less about. Although he's just a low-level cop, he also knows some rules within the police industry; it's wise to know less about things you shouldn't know.

"Director Samuel, I'm very pleased today. I don't want the money since I threw it away. But naturally, I wouldn't give it to that woman. Like this, consider the money as a donation to your police station." Finn's mood lifted immediately and he grandly waved his arm while speaking.

As soon as Finn's words came out, everyone in the room was startled. "Damn!"

Sharp James couldn't help but swear. But as soon as the words came out, Sharp James's face flushed, and he said somewhat excitedly: "Finn, are you serious?"

"Director Samuel, as you have heard, Mr. Lewis will not joke about such things. Leave the money here. But now you have to give me a receipt, and then I will sign a donation certificate with you. Is that okay?" Luca, standing next to them, immediately took over the matter for Finn, taking over all the matters himself.

Professional! What does professional mean? This is it! Finn had never felt so relieved before. Damn it, having a professional handle things for him feels great! He doesn't have to say anything, and someone cleans everything up for him.

"Of course, of course! No problem, I will write you a receipt now. About the donation certificate, I'll have to bother Mr. Hall with that." Sharp James said quickly. There's a saying, fail to take advantage of someone's stupidity. Although this money can't be used for other things, it can be used to improve some police equipment, which is nice. You know, the funds for such grassroots police stations are extremely scarce.

This is a donation of nearly two million! Hall is worthy of being a professional. Even laws of Flame Nation are not a problem for him. While Luca was busy with this matter,

Headmaster Green, standing next to him, spoke somewhat awkwardly: “Finn, hello, I’m sorry. I only just found out about this. I came to handle it immediately. You were wronged. Don’t worry, a student as excellent as you, our school could never expel you.”

(Damn, your face changes real fast. Before, Mr. Wood called saying you were all preparing to have a meeting to discuss this, damn!) Although Finn was scolding in his heart, he naturally wouldn’t show it. He wasn’t stupid. Besides, this matter had nothing to do with Headmaster Green. Finn naturally wouldn’t cut ties with Headmaster Green. He smiled and stretched out his hand to shake Headmaster Green’s hand and said: “Headmaster Green, you’re being too polite. I didn’t lose anything.”

Finn’s attitude let Headmaster Green breathe a sigh of relief. From the previous incident, it was clear that Finn had a temper. He dared to curse Robert Thomp to his face. This wasn’t what a good bird would do. Even if he had talent, it was the temperament of a man of letters. But Headmaster Green didn’t care about any of that. As long as Finn was at F University, the headmaster would be praised. Not every college could produce the largest individual shareholder of the world’s largest technology company.

Not in the entire Flame Nation! Finn was the first person to achieve this!

“Mr. Lewis, this needs your signature.” Luca quickly got things settled over there and brought a donation certificate over to Finn to sign. Sharp James next to him was mentally cursing Luca for being a damn brown-noser. Originally, he was going to hand it over for Finn to sign, but Luca quickly grabbed it.

Finn quickly wrote his name on the paper. After signing, Finn spoke to Sharp James again: ‘Mr. James, I think you should call Cora Franklin over and explain the situation to her. Don’t let her say in the end that you embezzled this money. Believe me, a woman like her would do such a thing.’

After saying that, Finn laughed coldly a few times, and then asked, “We can leave now, right?”

“Of course, Mr. Lewis, we can leave now.” Before Sharp James could speak, Luca quickly replied..

Chapter 17: The Ambitious Bad Boy (Part 2)

Watching Finn Lewis walk away, Sharp James shook his head. This kid was a serious grudge-holder. He knew exactly why Finn wanted to call Cora Franklin over. Wasn't it blatantly just to annoy that girl? Thinking more about it, he figured he'd be just as furious if he were in her shoes. The boy would rather give it away for free to someone else than give it to her.

In the end, they got nothing out of the situation and had made fools of themselves. But considering what Finn had said, Sharp James thought it might be a smart move to explain the situation to that girl. If she were to go to the press and accuse the police of embezzling confiscated items? He had the donation certificate, sure, but who knows how the media would spin it. Sharp James had no intention of creating more problems for himself.

Lewis, would you like to ride with me to school? We could chat in my office."

"Headmaster Green, thank you for coming to testify for me. However, as you can see, things were a bit complicated today. And I still have some matters to attend to. Therefore, how about we meet up tomorrow instead?" responded Finn words.

"Sure, I'll be waiting in my office tomorrow morning." Headmaster Green glanced at Luca Hall who stood beside Finn, and there was a tinge of envy in his eyes. He understood exactly what Finn intended to do next. Both he and Mr. Wood had seen the stock transfer form held by Luca.

As soon as Finn signed his name, he would own 4.8% of A Company's shares.

To be precise, that was a wealth of 313 billion Federal coins! When converted to Flame Nation coins, it was more than 180 billion! Can you comprehend that figure?

After Headmaster Green left, Finn turned towards Luca, extended his hand, and said smilingly, "Mr. Hall, thank you for your help. Without you, I wouldn't have known how to solve today's problem."

"Mr. Lewis, there's no need to be humble. With your astounding capabilities, you wouldn't face any problems even without anyone's help." Mr. Hall replied respectfully.

Laughing joyfully, Finn replied, "Mr. Hall, I really fancy what you just said. Yes, I fancy it a lot!" He found Mr. Hall to be quite intriguing. Such words put his heart at ease.

“I’ve grown quite fond of you, Mr. Hall. I’m not sure of your occupation in the North Federation or where you currently work, but I’m hoping you wouldn’t mind sharing it with me. How about we grab a meal now? My treat,” Finn suggested cheerfully.

“Mr. Lewis, ‘admiration’ may be a more apt term for your feelings towards me. Besides, I believe you’re interested in pretty ladies rather than an old fogey like me,” Luca shrugged and pointed out.

“Haha, interesting. Let’s go. Any preferences for food? To be honest, I’m not sure where to find a well-known Federal restaurant in Celeston City,” Finn chuckled.

“No, I’m not keen on Federal meals. Let’s settle for Xiyian Cuisine!” Luca replied quickly. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Finn paused for a moment, then responded with a smile, “Alright, we’ll have Xiyian Cuisine.”

Finding a Federal restaurant might be difficult, but finding Xiyian Cuisine was relatively easy. Finn quickly located a respectable Xiyian Cuisine restaurant. Although it was his first time there, he had no worries. With lots of money, there was no hurry.

They ushered themselves into a private room and found a server. Finn had no issues with spicy food, but he did not expect Luca to be so knowledgeable about food. Luca appeared to be a connoisseur of Flame Nation cuisine, rattling off a string of dish names fluently, even mixing in some Xiyian phrases that took the server by surprise.

Once they were served, they didn’t start eating immediately. Luca quickly pulled out two documents from his bag. “Mr. Lewis, these are the stock transfer agreements entrusted to me by the A Company Board of Directors. As soon as you sign this stock certificate, you will own 4.8% of A Company’s shares, becoming A Company’s largest individual shareholder.”

“Hmm.” Finn responded, his excitement evident. Though he didn’t understand the legal jargon in the document, even if it was in both Flame Nation and Federal languages, he knew it was significant.

Zero’s voice echoed at the right moment, “There aren’t any issues with these two files. You can sign.” And with Zero having vouched for it, Finn found it easy to sign his name.

Having quickly signed his name on the documents, he passed them back to Luca. Luca checked it carefully and then extended his hand to say, “Congratulations, Mr. Lewis. Welcome to the ranks of the world’s wealthiest.”

Finn chuckled. Luca was indeed likable. “The pleasure is mutual, Mr. Hall. Congratulations to you as well on earning your hefty commission. Now, could you perhaps elaborate on your major line of work in the North Federation?”

Upon hearing this, Luca became excited. He knew why Finn was asking this but chose to stay silent. He quickly explained his job responsibilities in the North Federation. After listening, Finn asked with a smile, “So, Mr. Hall, would you consider working for this member of the world’s wealthiest?”

“Absolutely! Should I start calling you my boss?” Luca responded without missing a beat.

“Aren’t you interested in your salary?” Finn asked with a teasing grin.

“I trust that a member of the world’s wealthiest would never shortchange his employees,” retorted Luca, standing up for his rights.

Finn couldn’t help but laugh again. Who said foreigners couldn’t suck up?

As Finn chatted with Luca, Headmaster Green and Mr. Wood also returned to school. As Mr. Wood was preparing to leave, Headmaster Green called him into his office. After some thought, he voiced, “Mr. Wood, you were involved in this too. You know how sensitive these matters can be, and some things aren’t to be propagated. However, about Cora Franklin’s matter, perhaps we should conduct an investigation? As per school regulations, isn’t it strictly stipulated that no one is to cross a certain boundary when it comes to cohabitation?”

“Er, yes,” Mr. Wood answered while caught off guard. These were school regulations, and Mr. Wood was in no position to argue. Although, he didn’t get why Headmaster Green would say such a thing. Understanding his cue to leave, Mr. Wood agreed, “I see. I’ll join in for the meeting later,” and left Headmaster Green nodding in his office..

Chapter Eighteen: The Sour-Sweet Rhythm (Part Two)

The next morning, Cora Franklin received a phone call asking her to confirm certain matters. Excited by the news, she rushed to respond. In her mind, it must mean the investigation into the source of Finn Lewis's money was completed, and it was obviously illegal. If not, why would the police want her collaboration? So, thrilled, Cora Franklin hurried off! Even though she knew she couldn't get her hands on the money, the mere thought of Finn's displeased expression made her day!

"How dare he insult me in public by flaunting his wealth? Now his scam is exposed! Losers will always be losers. Who knows where he stole the money from?" An elated Cora Franklin turned up at the police station and upon seeing Sharp James, she quickly asked, "Where's Finn, Director Samuel?" "Finn? He's gone home," replied a stunned Sharp James.

"Gone home? Why did you let him go? I had filed a complaint against him! You shouldn't have released him until the probe is over!" Cora Franklin fired back loudly.

"Of course, we're done with the investigation! You were called here as the complainant to be informed that Finn's money sources are all legit, hence we have no grounds to detain him anymore. This case is now closed. Also concerning the matter of the missing money, Finn has dropped pursuit. We thought it was prudent to inform you," Sharp James explained rapidly.

"Donated? He donated everything to you?" Cora's eyes turned deathly red at the news. He donated all the money, not even a penny for me?! But, realizing her lack of importance, she grew defeated. Yes, as a university student, Cora wasn't illiterate. Since the police station had cleared everything, it implied that Finn's money came from legitimate sources.

If Finn's money was legitimate, did it mean she had missed an opportunity on a millionaire who could casually throw around two million?

Sharp James noticed her defeat. He couldn't help but curl his lips disdainfully thinking about today's women's entitlement. They would put up statuses daily asking why men don't love them. But when someone loves them, they complain about not receiving enough money. No wonder so many men resort to mistresses and second wives.

Coincidentally, moths always get attracted to fire, and Cora's case was even worse. With that, he couldn't help adding, "Finn is extremely rich, not just from the two million. He supposedly earned over a hundred million Flame Nation coins from an invention he sold, of which he has already received over a hundred million."

A hundred million?! For Cora, two million was already astronomical. A hundred million was an even more unreachable figure! Remorse flooded her being and she hardly knew how she exited the police station or how she got back to university. But when she returned, she was greeted with shocking news.

"...After deliberation, we've decided that our third-year e-commerce major, Cora Franklin, student ID: 3456* ** has brought considerable disrepute to our university due to her misconduct. Following our findings, Cora Franklin will be under probation! We urge all our faculty and students to learn from this incident.”

Reading the announcement on the bulletin board, Cora felt as though the sky was falling! What was going on? How did everything change in just one night?! Cora was lucky enough that the university spared her the mortification of revealing the reason for her disciplinary action. Otherwise, she would've lost all dignity.

Even though the announcement didn't mention the reason, almost everyone knew why Cora was disciplined. Not only Cora, but the entire student population was shocked to hear the news! What the hell is going on? Such drastic changes in just one night!

Finn wasn't punished for disrespecting Robert Thomp in his office and speaking the words many students wanted to say to him. Rumors were swirling that he was in line for the “Triple A” student award and even the presidency of the student union. And what about the previously domineering Cora and her new boyfriend, Yuri Lucas?

Everyone knew Yuri Lucas was a high school friend of Finn, but, they had had a big fallout over a girl. Yuri Lucas held a grudge since and started dating Finn's girlfriend the moment she became available. But with the current revelations, what was the truth? It appeared more likely that the girl was discarded by Finn and picked up by an overjoyed Yuri Lucas. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

And why did the university's high-ranking members decide this way? An influential faculty head like Robert Thomp couldn't even sway the decision. Guess what the counter-attack was?

The entire university's forum was in a frenzy. Imaginative dudes were creating all sorts of wild hypotheses. According to the most popular post: “This pace, this thrill, beats any Hollywood film. From now on, Finn will be the representative of the underdogs in our university!”

Finn didn't return to his dorm last night. He stayed in a hotel as he had matters to discuss with Zero, an AI. When Finn returned the next day, he found himself stunned by the events that had unfolded in his absence. Nonetheless, the only sentiment he expressed was, to avoid dying, don't do stupid things.

As for Cora, when Finn had thrown wads of Flame Nation currency at her, he was over her. Women who would stoop to any low for money like her weren't worth his time. But if Cora was just a small character in this saga, there was another he wasn't planning to let off!

A year ago, when he accompanied a senior female colleague drinking — she had downed three bottles of white liquor, violently vomiting and sobbing —

Finn had vowed revenge. He didn't have the power back then, but now, even if he got expelled from university, he didn't care.. Who cares about Robert Thomp's influential background?

Chapter 19 - 19: A Gentleman Must Always Repay His Enemies

Chapter 19: Chapter 19: A Gentleman Must Always Repay His Enemies

Translator: 549690339

"Chapter 19: Keeping a Grudge is Uncouth

Upon recalling that he had agreed to go to the headmaster's office yesterday, Finn Lewis immediately turned and walked straight to the headmaster's office. By the time Finn entered the headmaster's office, Robert Green was already waiting there. Seeing Finn, Robert immediately greeted him with a smile, saying, "Ah, Finn, you're here. Please have a seat."

Finn was somewhat helpless. He was still not too accustomed to these pleasantries, Shrugging his shoulders, Finn asked, "What is it that you need, Headmaster Green?"

"It's about yesterday's incident. I've spoken with Director Thomp. Listen, Finn, we're all in the same school. How about you sit down with Thomp and apologize to him? That way, this matter can be settled. What do you think?" Robert inquired tentatively.

Finn was taken aback before he sneered and said, "Headmaster Green, let's be frank here. We both know what kind of person Robert Thomp is. Keeping such a person in F University is the real blemish on the school's reputation, not students like me who insult teachers or even students like Cora Franklin. If he hadn't done those things, I wouldn't have had a reason to curse him."

Robert felt a throbbing in his temples. When he brought up his suggestion, he knew Finn might be reluctant. Honestly, Robert wasn't really expecting Finn to apologize to Robert Thomp. After all, even though Finn used to be poor, he is now worth over 300 billion Federal coins. Would he care about a department head? Apologize to him? Are you kidding? If Robert were in Finn's shoes, he wouldn't apologize either.

But that wasn't Robert's aim. If Finn was not willing, then Robert would try to talk Finn out of having any conflict with Robert Thomp, and thus minimize this matter until it was over.

If he could just get through one more year until Finn graduated, his life would be much easier. Don't presume that having a god-like figure in your campus is something to be proud of. Yes, while it is impressive that a student has accumulated such an enormous fortune on campus, it represents a great deal of pressure for any teacher.

Given Finn's current net worth, he could be indifferent to anything. To put it bluntly, if Finn wanted to stir up trouble, anything Robert said wouldn't matter. Besides, as long as they aren't breaking the law, nobody could do anything about it.

So Robert was under considerable pressure. Now that Robert Thomp and Finn had a falling out, Robert had to diffuse the situation. But Robert never expected that Finn, who declined to apologize, would be so blunt. He was so blunt that Robert didn't even know how to retort.

"That's all?" Seeing that Robert wasn't saying anything, Finn asked directly.

"Err, my point is, we are all in the same school, and we will inevitably run into each other. If you don't want to apologize, that's fine. Thomp indeed went too far yesterday by not investigating before speaking. I'll have Thomp apologize to you. Is that acceptable?" Robert mused, realizing he needed to change the direction of the situation.

Finn laughed lightly, stood up, and said, "Headmaster Green, you might be a gentleman, but let me tell you, I don't think I can accept Thomp's apology. I know what you're worried about, rest assured, I won't embarrass him publicly.

I'll just ignore him in the future. If there's nothing else, I'll be going now."

Robert considered himself a scientist. Last night, Finn asked Zero whether Robert had any issues. Zero gave a series of answers. Although Robert had some minor issues, they weren't significant. He could still be considered a role model, but having been in this position for years, he had shed a lot of his scholarly demeanor, and had become more like a politician. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"Alright then, you can leave first." Robert said, helplessly. If Finn wasn't even willing to accept an apology, then that was that. As long as Finn didn't embarrass Robert Thomp publicly, that would suffice.

Leaving the headmaster's office, Finn headed directly to his dormitory. As for Robert Thomp... hehe.

When Finn returned to his dormitory, to his surprise, all the students were present. Seeing that Finn had returned, the five people in the room cheered, "Haha, Finn, you're awesome. How can you be so cool? Hey, Mr. Finn, this is simply unbelievable! You've reached incredible heights!” Chubby Callum gave Finn a thumbs-up as he entered the room.

“Exactly! Finn, you truly are inscrutable. We didn’t see it coming. You’re really amazing. Now, tell us quickly, how did you get this money? Don’t give us the ‘rich second generation’ nonsense. We know your family better than anyone.

We’ve met your aunt and uncle. Tell us quickly.” The bespectacled man next to Chubby Callum couldn’t help but ask.

“Hmm, there’s not much to it. I just wrote a program and some software, sold it, and made some money. But I can’t tell you what exactly it is right now because it’s a trade secret. It’s not that I don’t want to tell you.” Finn explained.

He didn’t even know what Zero sold to A, but considering that A was willing to exchange 4.8% of their shares for it, it must be worth a lot more than the shares. Otherwise, A would not have done it, they aren’t fools.

“Come on, Mr. Finn, you’re not being honest. This is not a ‘little money’. Can you stop being so modest? Anyways, remember to treat us! And last time you took those three out and didn’t invite the two of us.” Another chubby guy said quickly.

“Sure, sure, don’t worry. I will definitely treat you all. You guys can choose the place. But I have some things to take care of recently. Once I finish, I will definitely treat you all. Do whatever you want. Can’t say I’m not generous.” Finn patted his chest confidently.

“That sounds fair enough. But, Mr. Finn, will you start a company or something? Your brothers here are counting on your salvation.” Chubby Callum remarked.

“I don’t have any plans right now. But if I do start a company, don’t worry, I won’t forget you guys.” Finn replied, smiling.

After questioning Finn, everyone quieted down. Finn packed up a few belongings before leaving the dormitory. For now, he wasn’t quite suited to live in the dormitory. He still had some things to ask Zero..

Chapter 20: The First Task?

Back at the hotel near F University, Finn Lewis couldn't wait to ask, "Zero, what's your suggestion? How can I find evidence against Robert Thomp?"

"I'm not here to come up with plans for you," Zero replied without any change in its tone.

"Damn!" Finn rolled his eyes, soon quickly adding, "Zero, think about this. I am your first representative on Earth, right? Even if I'm not sure what you're up to, at least I'm your front man, right? If someone tries to frame me, you should protect me, right?"

"Correct."

"Ok, then. I can't just sit back and get framed! I can strike back, right?" Finn quickly responded.

"What's your plan?" Zero asked, ice-cold.

"Simple. Can you monitor Robert Thomp 24/7?" Finn immediately threw out his question.

"Yes!"

"Can you hack into computer networks?" Finn's eyes lit up as he continued questioning.

"Yes, and stop asking me such basic questions. I've told you, on Earth, as you put it, I am omnipotent," Zero emotionlessly responded.

"OK, so, almighty Zero, can you start monitoring Robert Thomp now? Also, help me gather all his incriminating information from the internet, preferably videos. Any problem?" asked Finn.

"No problem, but there's a price: monitoring for one hour costs 2 credits."

Finn: "... He doesn't even have a feather, where on earth is he going to get credits from?"

"I can provide lending services, the interest rate for every 100 credits per month is 5 credits." Zero casually responded.

"Damn, you can lend credits? Why didn't you say so earlier?!" Finn nearly yelled. If he could borrow credits, why did he have to bother so much?

"The borrowed credits cannot be used for exchanging goods." Zero added another comment for Finn.

Then what the hell is the point of borrowing?! Finn had the urge to drop dead. His dilemma grew, the credits could be borrowed, the interest rate wasn't high, but if they were only borrowed to screw Robert Thomp, he had no idea when he could repay them. Finn started to wonder if he should wait until he had enough credits to do so. After all, Robert Thomp couldn't go anywhere.

After a long deliberation, Finn clenched his teeth in hate. He couldn't wait for ten years to seek revenge as others might. Finn was made differently; he believed in an eye for an eye. Screw it!

"Alright, you help me monitor Robert Thomp! Whenever you find evidence of his crimes, let me know. Also, help me find several people," Finn quickly requested.

"Okay. Whom do you want?" asked Zero immediately.

Finn quickly listed the names of several female students who might have been exploited by Robert Thomp. "All of them are from F University. Don't find the wrong people," Finn added.

"Don't try to guess my logic with your logic," Zero responded, disappearing immediately after.

Damn! Was that contempt? He must have been despised, right? Just when he was slightly annoyed, a thought struck him. With Zero working on the case, Finn didn't believe that Robert Thomp could keep hiding. Those students were just afraid to come forward. If everyone who was victimized by Robert Thomp came forward.

He could suppress it if it was just one or two people, but how could he suppress so many? However, everyone has their own choices, so Finn didn't want to comment more. For his senior, Finn understood that to a certain extent, she was also a volunteer. As for reporting the situation, it's uncertain what kind of punishment Robert Thomp could receive based on the police.

Therefore, they still need to find other evidence. After handing the matter over to Zero, Finn finally started to seriously consider what he should do next. Undoubtedly, credits were the most important. Although he had some money in his hand, he bred his time to see the effects of money-making, especially after subtracting the cost of money-making from his tens of millions.

Although Finn could invest, not every investment could yield profits. All those venture capital firms worldwide, which one of them made money in the short term? Take G Company for instance, the venture capital that initially invested in G Company did make money, but how long did it take for them to start earning? G Company started by losing hundreds of thousands of Federal coins each year and went to losing billions every year!

Finn was sure that G Company's profits were built on losing tens of thousands, hundreds of millions, and even billions of Federal coins each year. Even if Finn had found such a company to invest in, he wouldn't have had the patience to wait that long, and he also didn't have that much capital.

Wait for tasks? But he didn't know when the task would show up! Finn had an unbearable headache. Isn't there anything worse than seeing a massive cake in front of you that you can't eat?

The next day, Finn got up from the hotel bed and, after freshening up, decided to go to school first without thinking much. Being at a bit of distance from F University, Finn merely chose to walk back as he had some time. In his three years of college, Finn was always busy, his free time was spent either working or thinking about his future.

Such leisure time was too scarce. Only when he walked did he realize that he wasn't all that familiar with the road to F University.

There was a large job fair between the hotel and F University, which was always bustling every day. Finn had previously come here to find work, but the companies hiring here were more or less small businesses, scarcely any notable ones.

Just as Finn was reminiscing at the entrance of the job fair, Zero's voice suddenly rang out: "You've got a new task, do you want to accept?"

"What? A task? Damn! Accept, accept, accept! Hurry up and accept," Finn hesitated initially but soon realized what was going on. Thinking about the items he could exchange for credits with Zero, he couldn't wait and responded immediately. His sudden shout drew weird looks from several passersby.

"Confirmed, task accepted," Zero emotionlessly responded.

Finn swiftly took out his earphones and put them on, so he didn't look crazy talking to himself.

"What's the task?" Finn quickly lowered his voice to ask.

"Task: hiring a full-time female assistant. Requirements: appearance and figure no less than 80 points. Time: 2 hours 30 minutes. Reward for success: 100 credits, punishment for failure: unknown." Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Once the task was clearly stated, Finn was flabbergasted. "What the hell? Is this a task? Damn it, Zero, are you positive you didn't make a mistake?" "You have 2 hours and 28 minutes left," Zero confirmed the time for Finn.

“What’s this ‘unknown punishment’? There is even a punishment on failure?” Pacing to the job fair, Finn asked in a hurry.

“Isn’t there a punishment when you fail a game task?” Zero retorted, “As for the failure punishment, that depends on your performance during the task. Don’t worry, it won’t harm your life.”

Upon hearing this, Finn was a bit amused.. Even if it didn’t affect his life, the punishment sounded quite terrifying, didn’t it?
