

Super Spender

Chapter 191 - 186: Making a Move

Chapter 191: Chapter 186: Making a Move search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Translator: 549690339

Fine, if worst comes to worst, I'll just quit playing with you. What if I just sell my shares and go abroad? You gonna bite me now? Yuri Johnson isn't afraid anymore, he's barefoot and doesn't fear wearing shoes. He only holds 20% of the shares now, what's he got to worry about him threatening?

"Sure, it's alright if Mr. Johnson conducts big business, he really is generous, so be it." After Yuri Johnson spoke, Bryski Miller knew it was pointless to say more. He had no intention to stoop to making verbal threats. Shooting off one's mouth, anyone can do it. But it's about who is competent enough to take practical action.

However, he has to consult his father on this matter. Bryski Miller thought for a moment and called his old man. Now not only his own things were involved, but the Blackfield Group was also brought in as well. Of course, the business of the Blackfield Group does not have a big connection with ordinary people, they are all engaged in heavy industry and some large upstream companies. So, although ordinary people are attacking, the impact on the Blackfield Group is not great.

"Do you need me to tell you what to do? We underestimated that girl, but now that we've started, we can't just raise the white flag, where would the Miller Clan's face be then? Who introduced you to each other, do I need to teach you what to do?" After Falcon Miller finished speaking, he simply hung up the phone.

Bryski Miller smiled faintly, he understood what to do. In fact, he was just confirming with his old man. Anyway, their family hadn't broken the law, hadn't killed anyone, so who would say anything?

The next day, WY Corporation suddenly received several investigation notices, saying that a few newly developed games by IVY contained prohibited content. Some game costumes or so need to be modified. Upon receiving these several notices, Yuri Johnson simply flipped through them. Besides the two cartoon games, almost all the others were served a notice.

The game characters wearing sexy clothes, there's nothing wrong with that. They can be said to be on the borderline of what can be banned and cannot be banned. Most of them are not banned, but if you insist on banning them, you can't refute it even if it truly is somewhat ambiguous.

All Yuri Johnson could do was let out an expletive and put this matter aside for the moment. This was clearly the work of the Blackfield Group behind the scenes, but the authorities obviously also left room for maneuver and did not issue a public notice. Releasing this notice on the cusp would make them look like they were roasting themselves over the fire. So many netizens were already on Kay Lee's side, now the officials were strictly investigating WY, wasn't this a clear sign that the Blackfield Group was behind this?

Of course, the authorities wouldn't dare slap their own faces. They also grabbed the essence, WY itself didn't dare to disclose it. Obviously, if it were disclosed, it would be seen as completely offending the authorities. By that time, how could you still play if you were known to have completely offended the directly subordinate department above you?

All Yuri Johnson could do was call Finn Lewis and tell him about these issues. He can't stand up to it anymore. Even though Yuri Johnson has connections in the circle, his connections can't resist the Blackfield Group.

After receiving Yuri Johnson's call, Finn Lewis sneered. He had predicted these matters a long time ago. What other means could Bryski Miller have? However, do you really think I got no way out?

"Zero, find out for me how many people spoke up about the confiscation of these WY games. I want all the illegal information about these people. I don't believe they aren't corrupt!" Finn Lewis said viciously. Are these officials clean? Finn Lewis really doesn't believe that there are virtuous and incorruptible people. If they could violate less rules, everyone would probably be thankful.

When it comes to officialdom, some things are no big deal. However, once these no big deal things are exposed to the public, they would become a big deal!

"Consume 7000 credits!" Zero gave a direct answer.

"What? That's a lot?" Finn Lewis was shocked. The last time he investigated Robert Thomp, it only cost him a little bit of credits.

Zero didn't answer Finn Lewis, who had already gotten used to Zero's attitude. After a while, he gritted his teeth and said rapidly, "Do it, I want all the illegal and criminal information about these people. If there are any upright people, as long as there are irregularities, I want to know."

“Confirmed, it will take 24 hours.” Zero said.

“Understood.” Finn Lewis nodded and after hanging up the phone, he immediately dialed Julia Parker, “Book a ticket to the capital, we’re going to the capital today.”

“Yes, Master.” Julia Parker did not ask why, she didn’t need to know why, she just needed to know what Finn Lewis needed.

The scariest thing for a celebrity is not having popularity, and Kay Lee’s popularity now... can be said to be unprecedentedly high, although her popularity is very high, it does not greatly change Kay Lee’s predicament. As the Blackfield Group launched its first wave of strong slander, it soon fell silent.

And this silence does not mean that they are not refuting it, but they have started to downplay Kay Lee. They hardly report any news about Kay Lee, so naturally, Kay Lee’s popularity will soon drop. It’s clear that Bryski Miller already knows that as long as the media reports on Kay Lee, whether it’s a negative or positive report, Kay Lee’s popularity will not decline.

News on the internet can easily become viral, but likewise, news on the internet can also be easily forgotten, which is why so many stars are eager to hype up their news every day, because now more people are on the internet, and the attention of traditional media is starting to decline.

As for these maneuvers, Finn Lewis doesn’t have a good solution for now, but Finn Lewis doesn’t care about this because in 15 days, when Olivia Thatcher’s new game is released, the media will have no choice but to report it. Finn Lewis is confident about this, so he is not afraid of this cold treatment.

The media is a kind of a creature that to put it bluntly, it’s the same everywhere, they are all despicable. When you really want them to report, they won’t report, and when you don’t want them to report, as long as you have gossip, they are eager to report on it.

Speaking of which, this is Finn Lewis’s first time to the capital, and it’s actually no different from Celeston City. The only difference is probably that there are more vehicles and more upper-level departments here.

Finn Lewis waited for Zero’s information in the hotel, with only two or three hours left until the twenty-four hours was up. Julia Parker went with Finn Lewis, but Finn Lewis let her go out to have fun by herself.

After the last second ticked by, Finn Lewis’ phone rang. He picked up his phone and saw that it contained tons and tons of data. All of this data were about some irregularities of these guys. Finn Lewis briefly skimmed through them, and then all he could do was sneer coldly. These people, they really won't die unless they do something evil..

Search the * website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 192 - 187: Killing in Minutes and Seconds(Part 1)

Chapter 192: Chapter 187: Killing in Minutes and Seconds(Part 1)

Finn Lewis really wanted to throw all this information onto the web and see how many of these people would still manage to hold on. Given the harsh circumstances they were facing now, none would probably stay afloat. However, Lewis now held back from such a move. With all this compromising dirt in his hands, who would dare to cross VVY in the future?

Unfortunately, the amount of data was overwhelming. Lewis skimmed through it all. If he were to organize these documents by himself, it would probably take a whole day. But now, he didn't have to. He had Olivia Thatcher. Having her sort out everything and arranging it according to priority, Lewis swiftly got hold of the first person's information. search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

After looking through the details of this individual, Lewis chuckled coldly and headed out of the hotel. By the time he reached the first floor, two Flying Horse G65S were already waiting by the entrance. The vehicles were driven by bodyguards arranged by Zero, of course, it cost Lewis a bit of credits to have them summoned.

"Olivia, locate. Find me the first person's location." Lewis spoke in a detached tone.

"Yes, master. The position has already been determined. He is within a private room in a restaurant approximately 4.2 kilometers from here." Olivia's voice quickly responded.

The two black G65S swiftly drove towards the destination. The bodyguards' driving skills were beyond question, and very quickly Lewis was before the entrance of the restaurant. He glanced at this place that looked more like a private club before walking in straight away.

"Excuse me sir, do you have a reservation?" The two doormen scrutinized Lewis and then peered at the four muscular men in uniform behind him. After a moment of hesitation, they respectfully stopped Lewis and asked.

"No, notify Mr. Bing Wilson in box 706, tell him an old friend has come to see him on urgent business." Lewis shot a glance at the doorman and spoke.

“Alright, please wait a moment.” The doorman exhaled in relief after hearing Lewis’s words. It’s just that the intimidating presence of the men behind Lewis was too strong. “May I enter now?” Lewis pointed inside.

“Well...alright, go ahead. Please wait in the waiting area inside.” The doormen hesitated for a moment before finally nodding their heads. They led Lewis inside, not wanting to block the entrance anymore.

After waiting inside for two minutes, a waiter came over and asked Lewis in a low voice, “Sir, Mr. Wilson feels a bit confused, could you please tell me who you are?”

“I’ll give him a call.” Assessing the waiter, Lewis reached into his pocket for his phone, recomposed himself on the couch, and dialed the number.

Getting their numbers with the help of Zero was far from complex. Very soon, a middle-aged man answered the call on the other end, “Hello, who’s this?”

“Me, Liu, who I am doesn’t matter to you. What’s important is, I’m downstairs in the hall of the restaurant where you’re dining. If I can’t see you in three minutes, I have no problem revealing the 30 million yuan under the name of your favorite aunt, not to mention the villas under certain names. I assume you understand what I’m saying.” Lewis stated coolly.

Immediately after he finished, Lewis hung up the call without giving the other party any time to react. Lewis was convinced that this incident should have left a deep impression on him. Sure enough, three minutes later, Lewis saw a middle-aged man with signs of a receding hairline hastily come out of the elevator and start looking around.

Upon spotting Lewis sitting there and the four muscular men standing next to him, the man hesitated before quickly approaching them.

“Who are you?” The middle-aged man asked with a solemn face as he approached.

“Finn Lewis.” Lewis looked at him and then pointed at the waiter, “Mr. Wilson, I hope you don’t mind if we get a private box and discuss things more comfortably? Please, let’s get one big enough, otherwise, I’m afraid it won’t be spacious enough. Do you catch my drift?”

There was a saying one should never brag about their wealth in Celeston City, and never brag about their high-ranking official status in the Capital. In Imperial City, tossing a brick at random might hit a high-ranking official. Wilson was one of the highest-ranking officials among those whose information Lewis had acquired.

Being a high-ranking official himself, he seldom visited such luxurious places unless invited by someone else, hence he was rather cautious. Initially, he intended to leverage his power to intimidate Lewis since the information disclosed on the phone by Lewis had unnerved him greatly.

However, before he could flaunt his power, Lewis's casual demeanor startled him. What Lewis then said left Wilson stumped. Reluctant as he was to refute Lewis's words, he found out to his dismay that he had done those two things in utmost secrecy. There was no doubt that Lewis must have possessed substantial evidence.

"Get us the largest private room, please. Can you please go up first, sir? I'll join you momentarily." Wilson was quick to instruct the waiter.

"Yes, please follow me, sir." Seeing that even Wilson didn't dare to object Lewis, the waiter thought Lewis must be someone of extreme importance. Without uttering another word, the waiter swiftly led Lewis towards the elevator, showing utmost deference.

"Well, Mr. Lewis, let's discuss things peacefully, please. Well, I need to go handle an issue first." Wilson hesitated for a bit before deciding to see what happens first.

"You have five minutes." Lewis glanced at him and dropped those words.

Lewis was swiftly led to a private box, and after instructing the doorman not to allow anyone except Wilson inside, he sat down quietly in the room. Within less than five minutes, merely three minutes later, Wilson walked in.

The moment Wilson opened the door, he saw Lewis sitting at the chief seat of a large round table. A laptop in front of him was playing a video, the room echoing with the intimation of a romantic engagement between a man and a woman. However, on hearing those voices, Wilson's face turned chalk-white instantly. He was all too familiar with his voice in the video.

An upright gaze from Lewis met him, then he began in a light tone, "Mr. Wilson, you do have diverse interests, and impressive skills at that. Also, the video I have here seems quite well-rounded, why don't you appreciate your exuberant performance from a third-person perspective?" Having said this, Lewis cocked his head, and the bodyguard standing behind him immediately picked up the laptop and carried it straight to Wilson, placing it right in front of him..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

- Chapter 193 - 188: Killing in Seconds (Middle)

Chapter 193 - 188: Killing in Seconds (Middle)

Chapter 193: Chapter 188: Killing in Seconds (Middle)

Translator: 549690339

When Bing Wilson saw the video on the screen, cold sweat broke out instantly, especially when he saw the other files behind the video player. He almost blacked out. He had no idea how these videos were leaked, but he had never filmed any of them.

The question was, how did they end up in someone else's hands? If these videos were only of him and a few second- and third-tier actresses, then the other photos, account data, real estate data, all made Wilson break out in sweat and shake like a sieve. If these things were to leak, Wilson knew what the consequences would be.

"Mr...Mr. Lewis, what... what do you want?" Wilson barely managed to stay calm. Since Finn Lewis had these things in front of him rather than directly delivering them to the prosecution department, it meant there was still a chance to fix things. Unless he wanted to go to jail and give up his current life, he had no choice.

"What do I want? I ask what you guys want! How dare you go after my future wife? You think no one can touch you?" Finn Lewis slammed his hand on the table, raising his voice by an octave.

The sudden loud volume and the cursing from Lewis made Wilson tremble, but he caught quite a bit from Lewis's words. Future wife? A woman? And since he was looking for him, it obviously had to do with a celebrity, a celebrity they were recently targeting.

The first person that came to mind was Kay Lee.

As promised, an update! You guys are incredible! I just took a nap and there were already over 300 votes. But as promised, I am updating with every 50 votes. If you dare to vote, I dare to update! I'm ready to be killed by your votes!

"Is it...is it Miss Kay Lee?" Wilson stammered out. He had no choice but to be afraid. Lewis had incriminating evidence on him. Those, who had enjoyed a good life, are always reluctant to give up the luxury, and Wilson knew firsthand what his end would be. But once those items were in Lewis's hands, what else mattered? As for the wishes of those who gave him money? What does that compare to his position?

"What do you think?" Finn Lewis sneered, raising his head to glance at him before continuing indifferently, "NetEase, I've already bought it. I can tell you very frankly that appointing Kay Lee as the ambassador for NetEase's new game was my idea. Now, do you understand?"

"Un...understood, understood." Wilson nodded like a pecking chicken. If he didn't understand by now, he would be an idiot. At this moment, Wilson cursed internally at Redfield Group. They said Kay Lee had no other backgrounds? Could this be considered 'no other background'? Although he didn't know who Finn Lewis was,

anyone who could obtain so much incriminating evidence on them in such a short time couldn't be without formidable background.

Damn it! What would it look like if they did have a background? Would they annihilate competitors in an instant? But what was the difference between this and an instant annihilation? It was less than 24 hours since they sent the announcements to YVY, and their opponents have directly confronted them. It was common knowledge that Kay Lee had a strong backing, and Wilson had expected that someone might try to appease them.

But what Wilson did not expect was that instead of appeal, the opponent directly came with such an aggressive posture. It wasn't appeal anymore, it was more like an ultimatum: either do it and keep your position or go to jail. What choice was there to make?

"Very good, then Mr. Maxwell, please call this person. I believe Mr. Maxwell must have his contact information." Finn Lewis spoke indifferently. As Lewis spoke, a name appeared on the computer screen in front of Wilson. When Wilson saw the name and the contact information below, he couldn't help but give a bitter smile.

Of course, he had the contact details as the person too was part of his department. After a moment's hesitation, Wilson dialed the number. As soon as the call was connected, Wilson began talking. Lewis didn't pay attention to what he was saying, just sat in place waiting.

The other party arrived pretty quickly, roughly half an hour later, appearing in Lewis's sight. Just like Wilson, after the display of documents in Lewis's hand, the man didn't have any chance to resist either.

Like this, one person called another. Finn Lewis just sat quietly there, watching as more and more people filled the room, until dinner time, almost an entire table was filled with people, without any exceptions. How was he supposed to play this?

However, seeing all these people gathered together, Finn Lewis was somewhat shocked. At least, Redfield Group could influence so many big shots, no wonder their power was so strong. But now, these people, without thinking, knew whose side to stand on.

"Number 1, how many are left?" Finn Lewis looked at the time and asked.

"Young Master, there are still seven people left." Number 1 glanced at the computer and replied. The other officials in the room broke out in cold sweats as the number of people in the room increased, their fear growing increasingly intense. How powerful did one have to be to collect all their criminal data in such a short time? Could this really be the work of the rumored state intelligence department?

But what about this address (young Masterd who could one possibly address like this, it sounded like a title for a prodigal son. Sëarch* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Alright, no need to call anymore. I’m hungry, I don’t want to wait. Let’s go back for dinner. Send the data of the remaining seven directly to the relevant departments. As for those related to you, find a way to clear your relations. If you can’t, just go in yourself. Also, tomorrow, I want to see the relevant announcements from WY retracted. Understand?” Finn Lewis spoke calmly. After saying so, Finn Lewis stood up, “Let’s go, it’s time for dinner.”

After he finished speaking, Finn Lewis left without paying any heed to the people in the room. After Lewis left, Bing Wilson breathed a sigh of relief, his heart filled with bitterness. He didn’t know whether to feel lucky for himself or to feel sad for those seven people. Just because he was hungry and didn’t want to wait, he directly threw all of the seven people’s data to upstairs..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 194 - 189: Killing in Minutes and Seconds (Part 2)

Chapter 194: Chapter 189: Killing in Minutes and Seconds (Part 2)

Translator: 549690339

Isn’t this akin to killing a chicken to scare the monkeys? Especially the last person who arrived, continually wiping the sweat off his forehead with a handkerchief he plucked from his pocket. He’s actually faring well; although somewhat frightened, the torment in his mind isn’t as severe. Can you imagine what Bing Wilson is feeling?

It’s like your days are dragging on for years! An entire afternoon! Each time someone was called in and handled, he would call the next person. As the room filled up, Bing’s fear grew thicker, not knowing how many more people Finn Lewis had under his control.

The critical point is, there’s a high chance that the weaknesses of these people were discovered in a very short time. If the opposition had such power, it wouldn’t possess such targeted investigations on these insignificant people, because all these individuals have connections with the Redfield Group!

This is the most despairing thing; if the opposition had begun collecting data earlier, then fine. But to have such damning evidence in such a short time... What a force to be reckoned with....

“You all know what to do, right?” Bing coughed dryly before starting, looking around the room, even though he wasn’t himself a saint, he still felt a bit depressed. He abruptly realized that, damn, these people...were all his own!

What does this imply? It implies everyone here has been caught in one net!

Finn Lewis couldn’t care less about how Bing and his team handled things. He didn’t believe these people would stay upright, even when threatened, and not side with him.

Since there had recently been a change in management, those in the top-level positions weren’t much of a problem. Although Finn had their data, it wasn’t as deadly as the others’, and their issues, compared to those below them, were as innocent as white lilies.

By the time Finn returned to the hotel for dinner, the BC Corporation in the Graham Kingdom had finally passed the final resolution. David Lancaster glanced through the resolution in his hands and handed it directly to his secretary, instructing: “Send this to the Flame Nation branch of Flying Horse. Tell them to expedite the execution of this settlement!”

“Yes, President.” The secretary nodded and promptly exited. On the document in her folder, a series of federal texts displayed: ‘Resolution concerning the termination of the endorsement contract between Flame Nation’s female star Kay Lee and Flying Horse’.

As the president of Flying Horse in the Flame Nation, Miles received this resolution immediately. As he read through the document, Miles was shocked!

He quickly pulled out his phone and dialed David Lancaster directly.

“Chairman,” Miles started, “Is there any issue with the resolutions sent to us?”

“None. Just execute it as written. Understand? Flying Horse doesn’t lack that bit of money. Even if the advertisement can’t be aired, continue to film the ad, understand?” Lancaster snapped impatiently.

“Alright, I understand.” Upon confirming the authenticity of the document, although Miles couldn’t wrap his head around it, he didn’t ponder about it. As Lancaster had said, to Flying Horse, this expenditure was just a drop in the ocean, albeit a baffling one.

He had sent back his suggestion of terminating the contract with Kay Lee to the Flying Horse Headquarters. Who knew that the resolution sent back by the Graham Kingdom branch of Flying Horse didn’t agree with his proposal but requested a two-year contract renewal between Flying Horse and Kay Lee instead? And what’s more, they were asked to at least double the endorsement fee!

This...Miles was utterly lost. This actress has been through a calamity, and the recent entertainment news surrounding her wasn't favorable. Why would Flying Horse Headquarters make such a baffling resolution? To break away from Kay Lee wouldn't cost any breach of contract penalties!

Why, indeed? The reason? Of course, it was because Finn Lewis had called David Lancaster and dropped a line, "Kay Lee is my fiancée. You do the math." With just that sentence, he hung up. Lancaster reluctantly had to consider the implication of Finn's words.

Need to ask? Initially, Flying Horse was indeed considering terminating the endorsement contract with Kay Lee, but Finn's words made Lancaster rethink. The car model currently rolling off the HyperCraft production line has everyone at Flying Horse surprised. Let's face it, that car model can outperform any car model in the world!

The technology integrated into this car model can be considered revolutionary! If Finn didn't already have a policy of not selling it to the public, and only producing it for his own family, Lancaster could easily predict that if any information about this car model leaks out, and is up for sale, all the world's top luxury cars will face one embarrassing situation – they will not be able to sell a unit!

So Lancaster persuaded the board to curry favor with Finn. If they partnered with Finn and utilized a bit of his technology in their regular sedans, within minutes, they would be up to speed with Volkswagen! Flying Horse has been left in the dust by Volkswagen for so long, now, they can far exceed Volkswagen! This is the ambition of every board member! As for Kay Lee's endorsement fee, to put it bluntly, what these board members reached into their pockets and pulled out, was more than that.

Moreover, the money isn't coming from a single board member, but from the company. Therefore, everyone didn't care! Which resulted in the resolution in Miles' hands! In any case, it's just some money, it's mere peanuts to Flying Horse. It's better to curry favor with Finn. If they could join hands with Finn, it would be a launching pad for Flying Horse's future.

With all information about Kay Lee on the internet being nearly wiped clean, Bryski Miller scoffed. Wait for the buzz to cool down for half a month. Without popularity, this star won't have it easy making a comeback. But soon, Bryski's expression became more gloomy, his eyes fixed on the webpage on his computer screen. He had noted this, but this time around, he wondered how she will get out of this difficulty.

As a game company, having received investigation notifications for nearly all the major running games, it certainly was a fatal blow. For a game, one would not need much time, just a month of non-operation, and they would lose a lot of players after.

Bryski squinted, ignorant of blessings, this time it's your turn to be blocked for a month. I wonder how you will promote your new game without it being inspected? Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

As this idea hadn't even settled, his phone started ringing. Picking it up, Bryski's expression revealed a smirk when he saw the caller's ID. Answering the call, he laughed and spoke, "Mr. Maxwell, hello, how's our deal going?"

"Mr. Miller, I'm calling you because of this." Bing Wilson responded with a bitter smile..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 195 - 190: It's Not That I Don't Understand

Chapter 195: Chapter 190: It's Not That I Don't Understand

Translator: 549690339

"Oh? Please speak, Mr. Maxwell." Bryski Miller immediately said with a smile.

"Tomorrow, we will directly withdraw the several notices against I,VY Company." Bing Wilson straightforwardly mentioned his request.

"Mr. Maxwell, what do you mean by that?" Bryski Miller was startled, and then his face immediately turned grim, and he asked with a deep voice.

"There is no ulterior motive. I'm just giving you a heads up. In addition, I would like to advise you, Mr. Miller, to at least clear up a person's background before dealing with him. Getting angry at me won't do you any good, In fact, not only me, but everyone in my department who is siding with Mr. Miller, will change their stance tomorrow." Bing Wilson hung up the call right after he finished, not caring about Bryski Miller's feelings.

Bryski Miller's face was so gloomy it seemed like it was dripping water. However, he was also secretly shocked. The money had already been delivered, but they had called to say this. What was more, it wasn't just him, everything was made very clear in the conversation just now. Almost all the people related to Redfield Group are going to change sides, which meant one thing.

A powerful force that they couldn't resist had stepped in! Only this could lead to such a situation! Could it be Kay Lee's grandfather? That seemed unlikely. Even if Kay Lee's grandfather wanted to influence them, it would probably be quite difficult as he was relying on his comrades, not on himself.

Besides, the factory's rank is not low. To influence this level, the background needed to be quite significant. Even now, Bryski Miller couldn't influence such people. Of course, it was not that he couldn't but it wouldn't be worth it.

Would he really use such power just to smear a female celebrity? Would that not be a waste? But if it wasn't Kay Lee's grandfather, then who was it? Could there be an unexpected person involved? Bryski Miller suddenly became alarmed, as he fiercely remembered that if it were indeed IVY's own doing, he had known Yuri Johnson before.

Given Yuri Johnson's personality, he absolutely wouldn't make such a decision. Thus, someone must be backing him up, giving him the audacity to completely ignore his own threats.

At this thought, Bryski Miller couldn't help but frown. Seemingly, this matter was not as simple as it seemed. What should he do next? The domestic broker companies and the like were supporting Kay Lee for now, but once the wind changes, these companies will switch sides very quickly, with basically no professional ethics at all. But now, Bryski Miller had backed himself into a corner, he couldn't just back down like this, right?

Bing Wilson notifying him in advance was already quite courteous. However, the things that needed to be done still had to be done. Bryski Miller immediately picked up his phone and made a round of calls to people in the circle, confirming what he needed to do, before hanging up.

Taking down the notice was no big deal, since it hadn't been announced to the public anyway. Removing it won't cause any trouble, as long as there's no major fluctuation in the media.

After dealing with matters in the capital, Finn Lewis immediately flew back to Celeston City, as his parents had already arrived. They were planning to proceed with adoption procedures for Zoe. As for Kay Lee, there shouldn't be any significant issues in the short term, and Finn Lewis didn't need to personally oversee things in Galaxyshire. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Considering the nature of the department, how could Yuri Johnson not understand? To retract a notice, they'd typically withstand it for at least half a month and then say there's no problem after the investigation before revoking it, so that they wouldn't lose face.

But what was happening? They had actually withdrawn the announcement on the second day! This... Yuri Johnson immediately thought of Finn Lewis. Only he could have made this possible! But he was astonished about the kind of person Finn Lewis actually was. Just how powerful was his background? It didn't take long, and he had already resolved this issue!

“It’s already withdrawn.” Yuri Johnson’s secretary, of course, was equally shocked. But no matter how shocked she was it wouldn’t change anything, and Yuri Johnson himself didn’t understand, so she had no way of knowing. She was only aware that the current boss of WY might have handled this matter cleanly. But the efficiency in dealing with matters was a bit too fast, wasn’t it?

When Finn Lewis had first come here to acquire WY, she felt a bit speechless. A transaction amounting to hundreds of billions of Federal coins was completed in less than a day. It felt like child’s play. And now, the same thing happened with this matter, resolved in less than 24 hours. This new boss was really swift and aggressive.

However, something even more shocking happened. Less than halfway through the morning, Yuri Johnson received a message from online journalists, Flying Horse Flame Nation held a press conference to introduce a new collaboration deal with Kay Lee regarding the spokesperson contract.

When Yuri Johnson got the news, one can imagine his shock. It was understandable if this impacted domestic affairs, but why was Flying Horse also siding with Finn Lewis?

Now was not the time to consider this. Yuri Johnson quickly turned on his computer and began to watch the live broadcast. The press conference organized by Flying Horse didn’t invite many media outlets, but there were still fifty to sixty of them. When Kay Lee appeared at the press conference, nearly all the reporters were continuously snapping photos.

An incessant array of flashes covered the area, and all along, a smile could be seen on Kay Lee’s face, with no abnormalities at all. However, Kay Lee’s astonishing confession two days ago was still causing a huge sensation on the internet. A lot of people went to dig up dirt on Kay Lee as she had mentioned, but just as she had said, those internet trolls who smeared her online basically couldn’t find any supporting reasoning for their claims!

Such a result made countless netizens sigh with emotion, Kay Lee seemed to be the only person whose words matched her actions. In the past, when many celebrities encountered problems, they would release apology letters, public notices, promise letters, etc. promising to do better. But the next day, countless pieces of evidence would emerge, leading to another round of apology letters. In short, they treated fans as fools.

They would try to delay it day by day, but how about Kay Lee? Her words truly lived up to the saying, “A spit and a promise”. Up until now, no one could find evidence to smear her. For this reason alone, quite a few netizens, who were not originally fans, became fans of Kay Lee.

Today, even though the press conference organized by Flying Horse didn’t invite many media outlets, there were many online users paying attention to it and the number was quite large. Because of Bryski Miller’s influence, many media outlets suppressed news about Kay Lee and didn't report on it. That left netizens wanting to know about Kay Lee's latest situation with no place to find news. Suddenly, a piece of news emerged.

Netizens who had been suppressing their curiosity were naturally drawn to it.

When the press conference officially started and Miles walked onto the stage with a smile on his face, the reporters below had a feeling that today's proceedings might not go as they thought. Otherwise, if it was really about terminating the contract with Kay Lee, Flying Horse Company absolutely didn't need to hold a press conference and they could just release a notice directly..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 196 - 191: But The World Changes Fast

Chapter 196: Chapter 191: But The World Changes Fast

Translator: 549690339

"Good day members of the press, I called you all here today to clarify a recent matter." Miles began directly.

When the room quieted, Miles continued smiling, "There have been rumors online suggesting that the Flying Horse Company intends to terminate the endorsement agreement with Miss Kay Lee. However, please understand that the Flying Horse Company is an honest and contract-abiding business. We would not terminate our contract with an endorser just because of certain issues. We are aware that Miss Kay Lee has recently faced some troubles." "However, we believe these issues will eventually pass. Today we called you here, firstly to clarify the situation, and secondly, in regards to Kay Lee's endorsement contract, Flying Horse Company will terminate its previous contract with Miss Kay Lee and draft a new one." Miles paused here, giving journalists enough time to react.

Sure enough, a journalist quickly stood up and asked, "Mr. Miles, could you shed some light on the reasons behind drafting a new endorsement contract?"

"Indeed, after careful consideration, the headquarters of Flying Horse Flame Nation and Flying Horse Graham Kingdom feel the current contract fails to reflect Miss Kay Lee's value. Thus, we terminated the previous contract before its expiration, raising the annual endorsement fee from five million Federal coins to ten million Federal coins," Miles stated his decision.

When the decision was announced, all the reporters and people watching the news in front of the computer were buzzing in disbelief. Weren't there countless rumors that the Flying Horse Company was going to terminate its contract with Kay Lee? Turns out they did terminate it, but they replaced it with a larger contract! An annual endorsement fee of 10 million Federal coins!

This is by far one of the top endorsement contracts worldwide! First, it was WY, now it's Flying Horse. Wasn't it said that Kay Lee's career was entering a downturn after her career's Waterloo? Could you tell me if this is a downturn? Just with these two contracts, Kay Lee's annual endorsement fee is 25 million Federal coins. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Who knows what the future holds? If there are more contracts to come, this is simply unimaginable. Yes, Kay Lee is currently unable to find advertisements,

TV dramas, or movies, but it seems that the news heat has not decreased much.

Afterwards, Miles passed the mic to Kay Lee. Today, Kay Lee looked much better than she did a few days ago, though she didn't say much, only some official lines thanking the Flying Horse Company for its trust and so on.

Seeing Kay Lee looking much better in front of the camera, Finn Lewis showed a smile on his face. Even though there was WY before, Kay Lee probably felt that WY was really using her as a gimmick for promotion. Now that there's a second contract with Flying Horse, she should regain confidence in herself.

However, at this moment, someone was looking extremely grim. Bryski Miller naturally watched the news today. But why?! Bryski couldn't understand at all. Has Flying Horse gone nuts? Not only did they not terminate the contract with Kay Lee, but they also increased the endorsement fee to 10 million Federal coins?!

This was completely nonsensical! It also made him extremely perplexed! Even if he racked his brains, Bryski could not comprehend why Flying Horse would do such a thing. Could they be influenced by Flying Horse's top executives? Even the Blackfield Group couldn't do it, or simply put, unless national laws were enacted, even some national authorities might not be able to influence the executives of Flying Horse. To put it bluntly, large corporations like this are generally treated equally by the government.

Therefore, Bryski hadn't considered any possibility that any other people could influence the executives of Flying Horse. Although it may just be a matter of spending an extra five million Federal coins, it is Flying Horse Company bringing trouble to itself. How many endorsement contracts does Flying Horse have worldwide? If Kay Lee's fee doubled without reason, what about the other stars? These stars' managers are not to be trifled with.

We can make a wild guess about the degree of Bryski's internal anger, but no matter how furious he was, there wasn't much he could do. At most, he could restrict the company by not airing Flying Horse's commercials, but would Flying Horse care about this? It clearly states: I'd rather not run these commercials than not sign this contract. As to why, no one knows. Even those who know the truth have no idea!

As reporters, they were also a bit puzzled. As for such a star scandal, they had seen quite a few outcomes. Either the star admits their mistake, reaches a private settlement with the other party, then the scandalous treatment is lifted. Or the second kind, that is to completely retire from the music, film industry and gradually fade from the public's eyes. Then there's the last kind, which is suffering a few ups and downs before experiencing a resurgence several years later.

They were either one of these outcomes, but Kay Lee's case was too unusual. When the issues about Kay Lee first surfaced, she indeed faced numerous problems, and the strength of the opponent almost made her collapse. But later, the development of the situation became inexplicable for everyone.

First, it was the sudden appearance of WY, which paid Kay Lee's two-year endorsement fee in one payment at a staggering annual rate of 100 million Flame Nation coins. Then Kay Lee further confounded people by openly admitting to the problems in a press conference, causing an uproar and discussion on the internet. Afterward, the Flying Horse Company suddenly appeared, not only did they not terminate the endorsement contract with Kay Lee, they immediately signed a double endorsement deal.

One piece of news after another, like a roller coaster, made everyone dizzy, completely unsure of what was happening. If all this was the result of Kay Lee's connections, it would be even more confusing. If they wanted to help, why didn't they do it at the beginning of Kay Lee's problems? Did she have to pay a penalty of as much as 600million, and nearly be pursued for debt by the bank, even selling off all her assets?

But if it's not because of the people behind Kay Lee, then who? Nobody is a fool. Although Flying Horse and WY did not admit it, this does not mean that these two are suddenly stupid, spending more money and also facing the risk of fighting against another large international multinational group.

Flying Horse is okay, they can ignore the Blackfield Group, but WY is different, is not as strong as the Flying Horse Company.

This question is not only asked by countless netizens and media, but even Kay

Lee herself also wants to know. Kay Lee isn't stupid, contrary she is intelligent.

WY's sudden appearance didn't cause Kay to think much initially, but with Flying Horse acting so mysteriously, not only did they not terminate the contract, they even doubled the endorsement fee..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 197 - 192: A Chin on the Ground

Chapter 197: Chapter 192: A Chin on the Ground

Translator: 549690339

It can't be described as strange any more, it's simply against the norm. All of this made Kay Lee feel as though someone was helping her from behind the scenes, but she couldn't think of anyone who would. Her father, impossible! Kay Lee barely had any contact with him. Although he was rich, he fell far short of the Blackfield Group.

The most critical point was that her father couldn't possibly influence IVY, let alone Flying Horse. "Emily, who do you think it is? I'm completely lost right now." In her own car, driven by Emily, Kay Lee asked somewhat bewilderedly from the backseat.

"I don't know either, but whoever it is, they haven't shown themselves yet. I think they must be a good person." Emily thought for a moment before speaking. She had been by Kay Lee's side for quite a while and had seen plenty of men flattering Kay Lee, including several male celebrities. However, after Kay Lee's scandal, they had vanished as though they never existed, not even speaking out on her behalf.

Even if they had shown some support on micro research, that would have been good, but there was none. It was as if everyone had forgotten about Kay Lee while this enigmatic helper had not yet made an appearance, as if they didn't exist. However, Emily along with all others believed that whether it was WY or Flying Horse, they wouldn't act without reason.

Kay Lee didn't respond to Emily's words and gazed out the car window, consumed by her thoughts. The press conference organized by Flying Horse had ended, but the uproar on the internet was silently changing course. Realizing that Kay Lee might not face any repercussions, plenty media outlets stealthily started reporting on the matter. Although her name wasn't mentioned too often, social media was awash with information.

Most prominently, WY was advertising these news extensively. As the rest of the websites rarely reported about Kay Lee, became the lone front-runner, its traffic increased by more than 30% in a short span.

What does a portal website need the most? Of course, traffic! Yuri Johnson could hardly hide his glee. The traffic of WY was already substantial, and now with an abrupt increase of 30%, it was even more monstrous. Moreover, the mysterious game, touted as endorsed by Kay Lee, catapulted to the top of the internet search charts!

The new boss of VVY is a genius. Yuri Johnson was filled with awe about the finesse with which this individual could make things happen.

The next day after the Flying Horse press conference, another news came in. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Owen Things Cola's Flame Nation franchise also announced an increase in Kay Lee's endorsement fees, albeit a smaller one, from 3 million federal coins a year to 4 million a year.

Even though the increase wasn't much, it was reasonably large for Owen Things Cola. The brand, due to its different products, had signed up numerous celebrities and maintained a lower endorsement fee structure unlike companies like Flying Horse. Even top-notch celebrities in the Floral Village couldn't earn more than a few million from them. But now, with this deal, Kay Lee had definitely entered the top tier.

Owen Things Cola's move added fuel to the flame and left everyone, including Bryski Miller, perplexed. Could the world be changing? God, what's happening? For an out-of-favor celebrity, barely getting any TV, movie, or endorsement deals, how could companies keep increasing her endorsement fees? Didn't foreign companies pride themselves on being thorough? Weren't they supposed to be accountable to their board of directors? What on earth was going on? Bryski Miller was on the verge of a nervous breakdown! He could never have anticipated such changes! But he must admit, Owen Things' move was truly astute.

In fact, even Finn Lewis didn't expect Owen Things to raise Kay Lee's endorsement fee so soon after Flying Horse's decision. However, Owen Things primarily targeted young consumers, and young folks were undoubtedly the most passionate. Neither Flying Horse's products nor WY's games were affordable for younger people.

But Owen Things Cola, the drink was just three yuan a bottle, affordable for all. Sure enough, many had switched to it right away. "I won't drink Coke anymore, I'll switch to Owen Things, especially in support of their business style!"

In just two days, Owen Things' sales had increased by 10%. Never underestimate this figure; for a company as big as Owen Things, even a 3% to 5% increase would have been a cause for celebration.

All it took was an additional annual endorsement fee of a million federal coins. What mattered now was retaining these new consumers group. Finn Lewis thought it was rather peculiar, but not too much. He didn't know Owen Things' management, but that didn't mean Owen Things didn't have their market analysts who could foresee the resurgence of Kay Lee. Following suit at this juncture was bound to yield unexpected benefits. After all, their commitment was merely an annual endorsement fee of one hundred thousand federal coins, and the contract would expire in a year. Even if it ended in loss, it would only cost them two million. For Owen Things, this was peanuts, not even worth mentioning..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 198 - 193: What is a Movie-Level Image? (Part Two)

Chapter 198: Chapter 193: What is a Movie-Level Image? (Part Two)

Translator: 549690339

With Kay Lee's issue resolved, the WY press conference was finally set to begin.

"I'm sure you're all wondering why we've chosen to hold this press conference in an IMAX theatre. Perhaps some of you have made a guess or two. Well, you've guessed correctly! Our reason for hosting the press conference in such an unconventional setting, is precisely to allow all members of the media, as well as the players, to experience what true cinematic imagery truly feels like!" Yuri Johnson, standing at the podium, declared with unabashed ambition.

Observing Yuri Johnson's command of the stage, Finn Lewis felt somewhat dejected. 'Damn, this perfect chance to make a positive impression has been stolen by this guy,' he thought. But he didn't retort. After all, courting a woman like Kay Lee required utmost concentration, and one mustn't slack off until the last minute. 'There will be other opportunities for me to shine; let him have this one,' he thought.

As for 'keeping a low profile'? 'Nah, who needs that?' he shrugged. 'I didn't scrape and slog for all this money to fade into the background. If not to steal the spotlight, what am I doing all this for?'

And, as expected, upon Yuri's proclamation, the crowd of journalists stirred. It's not something one could idly declare. Insisting on making such a big deal out of it, but ending up with poor quality visuals is nothing short of a self-inflicted slap in the face.

This had happened before in the gaming industry. False promises, overhyped advertising... proclaiming that a game's release had to be delayed for the sake of better graphics, only to present a terrible end result. The hype might be there, but all it earns are curses and scorn. So, if one wishes to make a splash, they better have the means to do so.

Otherwise, you'd simply be teaching yourself the lesson of lifting a rock only to drop it on your own foot.

“I believe that today marks an epoch in the gaming world. A new era of unparalleled graphics that will make players question whether they are playing a game or stepping into a vivid, lifelike realm. IMAX has a slogan: ‘Are you watching a movie, or are you entering one?’ And today, we will pose a similar question to all our players out there, ‘Are you playing a game, or are entering a real gaming universe?’ On behalf of myself, Ms. Kay Lee and all the members of the development team, I’d like to assure all journalists and live-stream viewers that what you will see next are authentic in-game engine renders. Not a single post-production enhancement has been made! If we have to admit to one addition, it’s that we have transferred these renders onto IMAX film and converted them into 3D images. That’s all!”

Having said that, Yuri Johnson along with every team member present offered a bow to the seated journalists, before heading to join them in the audience.

The IMAX theatre at the Tech Museum had been chosen for its ample space and therefore, the comfortable seating arrangement it allowed. It was unlike many commercial IMAX halls, where the first two rows were positioned unfavorably for movie-viewing. Given the spacious interior of this hall, Yuri Johnson, amongst others, were seated in the fourth row, which was arguably the best seating location.

Once Yuri Johnson and his team had settled down, the lights in the theatre began to dim. In fact, even Yuri Johnson had yet to see the promotional video. His only experience with the ‘New World’ game had been a brief interaction with its user interface. The uncanny realism of the in-game graphics had overwhelmed him then, and he was naturally thrilled to see how the promotional video would turn out.

As the screening began, the first image that appeared was a pitch-black night sky, followed immediately by an echoing roar of a dragon. Subsequently, a massive shadow of a dragon leapt out from the side of the screen. Upon seeing this, every journalist in the room gasped in pure astonishment.

The image on the screen was indeed a Dragons of the Flame Nation; incredibly lifelike, similar to the Transformers. From the moment the dragon entered the screen till it exited, it commanded everyone’s attention. As its massive, winding body flew past floating space rocks, a sense of awe swept over everybody in the audience.

Again, the knowledge of how magnanimous the budget must have been to pull off such graphic detailing was not lost on each of the reporters in the audience, many of whom were entertainment journalists. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

However, soon enough, the viewer’s perspective changed as a player’s user interface appeared on the screen. This was a typical player interface view. Even the reporters who didn’t play games regularly could tell, as there was a skill bar at the bottom, an auxiliary skill bar on the right, and a miniature map, among other features.

However, the in-game character at the center of the interface bore a striking resemblance to a photographic image. Its realistic attire only added to this effect. All the reporters present were taken back, feeling the graphic interface was out of place. The entire image gave the impression of a real-life event inside a game frame.

Next, the on-screen character, clad in an extremely luxurious mage robe, began to walk towards a nearby city. Upon entering the city, the powerful depiction of ancient architecture and the complete absence of CG effects caused everyone present to gasp in amazement.

“How...how is this possible?!” A reporter finally couldn’t help but exclaim. As the mage player had lowered his viewpoint, they were seeing, as if they were in a movie where a person ventured into a fantastical town. The vendors yelling around and the stalls, everything was incredibly realistic.

This image was indescribable! This preface of course was to let everyone know that this picture hadn’t undergone any embellishments, so soon the main point was revealed. A team of twenty had formed! When these twenty individuals combined, their dazzling gear made everyone gasp in awe.

There were many splendid items in the game, but at first glance, they looked extremely fake, merely dazzling to the eye. However, when this splendid equipment becomes incredibly tangible, exactly resembling real-life gear, it gives off a strong impression, letting them sense the powerful force encapsulated within these items!

When these twenty people all mounted their white horses – basic accessories from the system, but these white horses exuded an exceptional allure!

Especially up close, the muscular lines full of power on the horse’s body, along with the explosive force within, it always drove people who saw this scene to a spontaneous surge of exhilaration.

“I’m done for! Damn it, is this really gameplay graphics? This horse looks bloody magnificent! It completely devastates the ordinary horses given away in other games!” Players watching the live stream online had gone wild. What they were currently watching was not transmitted directly from a camera recording the scene on site. After all the on-site event was 3D, while a camera could only capture it in 2D.

What online viewers were seeing was Olivia Thatcher’s synchronized ultra-high-definition version, albeit in 2D. When the twenty horses started to gallop, the rhythmic quivering of the horse’s muscles due to running gave everyone a sense of the immense power it harnessed!

These twenty people and their neat formation gave off the vibe of a legion of soldiers! Only when these twenty people arrived at the mouth of a terrifying valley did the players realize, this should be a game instance.

The game characters on the screen had voice overs provided by Olivia. At the moment, everyone was getting to know the game instance, and the story of this instance from these voice overs.

“Warriors! My power can only allow twenty warriors to enter the true depth of the illusion, where you’ll face enemies at 100% difficulty, are you prepared?” With these words from the grey-robed elder, the heavily clad young man leading them spoke with a grave face, “We are ready.”

With the rise of a grand magic array, everyone was instantly transported inside a massive canyon. High mountains on both sides, continuously blowing gusts of wind and fluttering sand, all attested to the meticulous detail of the graphics!

Entering the canyon, the twenty individuals finally confronted the enemy, a squad armed to the teeth. At this moment, the players finally discovered that the viewpoint seemed to have been locked, no longer displaying the entire screen as in god mode like before. Moreover, earlier they could see their own characters, now they could only see the other characters.

“Charge!” With the young man clad in heavy armor leading them, belting out a roar, he powered up his body in a flash. A faint golden dragon’s shadow burst out from within him. Countless golden patterns began to rapidly expand around him as the center, forming a wide and terrifying spell array under his feet.

Players watching now could see, golden aura kept flowing in from the vast pattern formation under his feet into the bodies of characters within this spell array’s boundaries. Their skin seemed to begin shining with a faint golden light. Players experienced with Top Three could immediately recognize, “Damn, isn’t this the Dragon Flying Formation? Jesus, I’m floored. Look at this Dragon Flying Formation and then the game I’m playing now. This is like comparing a chicken to a phoenix. Shit!”

With another roar from the young man in the lead, an enormous golden barrier appeared around him, enclosing him within. Then, he abruptly brandished his shield with his left hand and pulled his frightening-looking broadsword with his right, issuing a low roar. He swiftly turned into a flurry of light, launching a counter charge at the cavalry rushing in!

With a “crash”, four, five incoming cavalry rammed into the man’s shield, as if they had run smack into a terrifying wall, flying off in all directions. This intense rendering effect made these Imights fly off in the exact way real-life impacts would have them flown off.

“Damn it! This is how a real MT should be! No more words, I have got to play this game just for these effects!” The players watching the screen were starting to get excited!

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 199 - 194: What is a Movie-Level Image? (Part Three)

Chapter 199: Chapter 194: What is a Movie-Level Image? (Part Three)

Translator: 549690339

Chapter 194: What Do You Call Film-Like Graphics (2)

Next, not just the players and reporters, even Yuri Johnson and Kay Lee were watching with intense concentration, they were fascinated. They had completely forgotten this was a video game. They felt like they were watching a movie, especially when these twenty or so people pushed the BOSS. They had already seen all kinds of powerful effects of the Major Eight Sects and the stunning effects literally stirred up the players watching right in front of their computer screens.

When they saw the BOSS, all the locked angles made everyone gasp. Especially when one realizes that you're up against a monster as tall as a six-story building, it's daunting. It may not sound like much in a game, but imagine for a moment standing at the bottom of a six-story building and engaging in a duel with a creature of that size. How terrifying does that sound?

The approaching BOSS fight left everyone thoroughly astounded. The battle was way more thrilling than any sci-fi movie out of Floral Village, especially with the endless skills of the BOSS, coupled with the various positioning requirements for the players. It's a game of high difficulty.

However, one thing became etched in everyone's mind, the young man always holding the frontline against the gigantic BOSS. His size seemed out of place on the screen. To prevent this dissonance, Celestial Order had created a spell that could increase the player's size and strength.

Also, in many games, if the BOSS's axe is long, it only harms its target and nobody else, unless the skill description states it's an Area Of Effect damage. But here it's not the case. It's all too real. Even the room attacks. The BOSS's axe came down and the shield in the left hand of the Celestial Order man in the front enlarged instantly to block it.

But because he's smaller, at least smaller than the BOSS, his character instantly takes a kneeling posture, including the details like dust rising from the ground. And the rest of the axe that overflows would hit other characters too.

Another melee class got slashed, and although quickly healed, it left a strong impression on the players. From beginning to end, the video felt more like a blockbuster movie from Floral Village than a game featuring a dungeon boss fight.

One couldn't deny though, the glorious and terrifying skills presented in the video game left a deep impression on everyone. At the very end of it all, they finally brought down the BOSS. When the team exited the dungeon, a beam of golden light shot up, and right at the dungeon's entrance, the names and statues of the 20 players stood firmly.

When the video ended and the music began, the lights of the IMAX cinema lit up. The livestream revealed the stunned expressions on the spectators faces while online viewers were completely blown away by what they saw.

At the event, after the shock had worn off, applause broke out. Some reporters couldn't help but ask questions. Seeing the excitement in their eyes, Leo Johnson knew he had succeeded! He had bet and won! His game, with everything it offered, definitely had the potential to surpass Monster World!

Yuri Johnson, stepping back up to the temporary stage in front of the movie screen, picked up the microphone and said with a smile, "I'm sure all the journalists and players have seen what can be truly called a film-like screen! This is the game we've honed for ten years! I believe it will be a revolutionary invention. Now, I'd like to take some questions from our journalist friends."

Oddly enough, the first journalist that Mr. Johnson picked was a blonde foreign lady. She asked, somewhat excitedly, "Mr. Johnson, do you know how I felt while watching this clip? It's almost as if I were watching a blockbuster production from Floral Village! So my question is, Mr. Johnson, do you realize how amazing your game engine is, how it can be compared to the special effects seen in Hollywood releases? You might change not only the gaming industry, but also the film industry!"

This lady didn't really ask a question but excitedly stated a bunch of things. The other journalists were taken aback, but they had to agree! The graphics were so amazing that everyone thought it was a Hollywood joint, and even with the skill bars, most people just ignored them. They were watching it like a movie! This brought them to the question that the foreign journalist had posted: they too had seen the NPC rendering, and it was far more realistic than special effect rendered characters. They wondered how the game engine developed by NetEase achieved this?

A foreign journalist warmed up the room by heaping praises, which made Yuri Johnson very happy and he called upon a second journalist. This reporter was from a professional gaming media, he stood up and voiced his concerns, "I have to say Mr. Johnson, your team has developed an astonishing game! In terms of graphics, it is indeed unprecedented! However, I'm worried about how high the computer's configuration has to be to run such graphics?"

“Thank you for the question, my fellow journalist. This indeed is a part of what I wanted to address. The reason it has taken us so long to complete this game is that the current computer hardware has finally met our requirements. Most importantly, our gaming engine has made a significant breakthrough. While providing high-quality graphics, it also minimizes the demands on the user’s computer. In other words, any mid-range computer worth around 4000 Flame Nation coins can handle this game perfectly well!” Yuri Johnson said with a smile. Search the * website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Wow, that’s fantastic news, thank you for the answer, Mr. Johnson.”

“Damn, that’s awesome? I was just worrying about what kind of superior configuration would be needed to run this game. But from what I see, my current computer could do it!”

“Yeah, hell, though my computer is a bit outdated, but for this game, I’m totally getting a new system!” Gamers online were discussing eagerly, and numerous players were already excitedly chatting away.

“Mr. Johnson, if you’re just starting to advertise this game, does that mean that it’ll be quite a long time before the game is released general public? After all, we all know that there’s quite a gap between the start of a video game’s promotion and its public beta test.” Another journalist specializing in gaming asked.

“Hehe... I’m sure many players watching the live stream, as well as our journalist friend over here, are eager to know the answer to this question. But I can frankly tell you all; unlike the typical game development cycle, I’m pleased to announce that this game was fully completed before we called this press conference! Although we had some differences when deciding on the game’s charges, as soon as we finalize the fee model, we will immediately start preparing for the game’s operation.” Yuri Johnson quickly replied.

“So, Mr. Johnson, are you planning on charging players based on time spent or on items sold in the game? Also, I noticed that the game seems to switch to the first-person perspective once entering a dungeon?” The reporter immediately followed up.

“Hehe... This journalist is quite observant. I’ll answer your second question first. It’s not that the game switches to the first-person viewpoint once a player enters a dungeon, but only specific ones use this format. Just like the one in the trailer we’ve just watched. It belongs to the legendary difficulty, the hardest level in our dungeons! In such difficulty, the player’s viewpoint changes to the first-person, as seen in the video, allowing players to feel like they have really stepped inside the game world. Of course, the player’s movements are greatly limited in this view as it’s not a Gods-eye view.”

“Regarding your first question, charging players based on item usage is currently the mainstream method. However, this greatly affects the lifespan of a game. And if we aim to make a quality game, maintaining balance within the game is crucial. Therefore, a time-based fee would be fair to all players. It's a dilemma. So there are some disagreements between me and the CEO of the company. Although we haven't made a decision yet, there is a high probability that it would be a time-based fee. This mainly involves some matters of the Top Three veteran players, as everyone should know, this game and Top Three share the same root. Out of responsibility for the players, we can't ignore the old players of Top Three." Yuri Johnson said.

"Thank you, Mr. Johnson." The reporter promptly sat down.

Yuri Johnson quickly pointed to another reporter, "Mr. Johnson, I noticed that you mentioned some disagreements with the company's CEO in your speech. As far as I know, WY should be your own company." This reporter apparently caught the hint in Yuri Johnson's words.

Once the reporter's question was asked, everyone present instantly perked up their ears. Yes! This could be big news. Could it be that Yuri Johnson was no longer the CEO of NetEase?

Yuri Johnson slightly smiled, then replied: "Actually, I'm no longer the largest stakeholder of the company. The current largest stakeholder of WTY is a former player, a Top Three player. I believe the players who have played Top Three should have heard his name. His game ID is Literati Saucy Poet."

As Yuri Johnson finished his sentence, there was a stir among the group of gaming journalists below, whereas the players watching the live stream at their computers immediately blew up. After regaining their composure, numerous players were dying to share this news with everyone around them. In particular, the Top Three player community, there were very few players who hadn't heard the name Literati Saucy Poet.

Didn't know who he was? Just look at the global server rankings, the top 201 accounts in front of the list all start with 'Literati'. Now, how about that! The mesmerizing story of Literati Saucy Poet's rise to power had been documented by many and posted on the official forum. Of course, on the night when these 200 accounts appeared, Literati Saucy Poet wrote a reply to his allies saying he would consider their suggestion of acquiring WY..

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 200 - 195 (Part 1)

Chapter 200: Chapter 195 (Part 1)

Translator: 549690339

Chapter One Hundred and Ninety-Five: Are You Doraemon Albert? (1)

To actually hear such news from Yuri Johnson? Damn, how cool was that!

Sawyer, is this for real? The forum on Top Three's official website was freakin' overwhelmed.

"Holy crap! Is it real? Did Sawyer really buy WY? Damn, this is driving me nuts!

Sawyer, how come you are so badass, take my kneel!"

"Damn, I'm completely blown away. I've played so many games, and only dreamed that one day I could buy the gaming company I play at and make them change the game as I want! Now someone actually did it. But seriously, Sawyer, is this really cool?"

As the saying goes, the one who speaks is indifferent, the one who listens is interested. Others were surprised that WY changed its owner without a sound.

But for Kay Lee, it was a slight stir in her heart. She believed, though Leo Johnson hadn't mentioned it, that he probably wasn't the one to offer her the endorsement. Kay recorded this matter and the ID in her mind, but she didn't say anything more.

The Top Three game forum exploded, and so did the channel for the Yan Guoliu Qing Clan. Although Sawyer wasn't part of the Yan Guoliu Qing Clan now, Dream was still there, and both sides were still using Dream to communicate. Moreover, the big wing players of Sawyer were pretty good, they all had friendly attitudes, and there were quite a few girls among them. The most important thing was, these girls were damn good at gaming.

Finn had no idea Olivia was not only executing his tactics perfectly but also creatively. These accounts were online almost every day, logging on and off at different times. They could even operate in multi-languages and could talk in multiple languages ... Who would have ever expected that behind these two hundred accounts was a single artificial intelligence controlling all of them?

It really fit the old saying, when you chat online, you never know if there's a person or a dog on the other end. Now, even a computer program is playing the game. The world is so crazy. Of course, Finn had no idea what Olivia was up to. Knowing it, Finn probably could only give her a thumbs-up and say, "You rock. "

"Besides, our company is also going to work with another company to adopt a new technology" After everyone somewhat calmed down, Yuri spoke again, "this new technology will completely transform a game. As we all know, the term 'online game' is for interaction and co-gaming with other players. The number of players in a server will have a huge impact."

“So, the latest technology we are using will allow a server to accommodate up to two hundred thousand players! This means there will be two hundred thousand players playing together in a server, twenty times more than any current game on the market!” Yuri announced.

Although all the journalists were shocked, those from game media were even more excited as they knew what it implied.

“Mr. Johnson, now that we’ve heard about this new server technology, there will be two hundred thousand players in every server. But on the other hand, there will be bigger events happening, such as wars between thousands of players. I believe this is something you will include in your new game.”

“Yes, our new game has a fresh guild war setting. The number of gaming players involved may reach more than half of the total number a server can accommodate.” Yuri nodded.

“So, Mr. Johnson, how will you solve the problem of server lag when many players are PvPing? For example, if a thousand players use their skills together, won’t their computers crash directly?” inquired the gaming journalist.

Yuri gave a smile and replied, “That could happen. But I can assure you that even with such a huge increase in the player count in the servers, the game’s smoothness will definitely not be worse than those on the market! Besides, there is another thing everyone will discover after entering the game. But I’d like to keep that as a secret for now.”

Since Yuri decided to keep it a secret, it must be some inconvenient news. However, his promise that it won’t be worse than the current games implies strong technical support in this area. Therefore, this problem was replaced with relief.

Meanwhile, Bryski Miller in front of the TV was wearing a stern face. Although Kay Lee might just be suspicious, Bryski was sure that it was the new shareholder of who did all this because Yuri would never dare to cross him like this.

Bryski called to investigate WY’s new shareholder. Serious in thought, he realized that given the influence on the frontal figures, the launch of WY’s new game would face no hinderance. Judging from the shocking imagery displayed by the new game, it would likely become incredibly popular upon its release.

Of course, WY’s stock price would also rise. When that time comes, everyone would know that the pace of WY’s expansion will quicken even more. The enemy will be harder to deal with then. The key issue now, however, is how to deal with Kay Lee. After this game starts to roll, given that Kay Lee is the spokesperson, banning her again will be extremely difficult.

From the game's roaring popularity, Bryski could see that the Redfield Group, not being an official entity, can't possibly ban Kay Lee completely. Reporters have started reporting now. These signs could already be seen.

But Bryski understood the defeat of the ban. However, he just cannot let this slide. Sitting behind the chair, Bryski wore a gloomy face and shifted his attention away from the press conference on the computer screen.

As the press conference wrapped up, Finn Lewis let out a sigh of relief. Judging by the atmosphere at the venue, the conference was a huge success. Moreover, with Olivia Thatcher and the dynamic balance system, the game's playability was beyond doubt. He expected the difficulty of the dungeons to keep players hooked. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

The news conference was streamed live and thus spread faster than expected. All game companies were secretly panicked by the breathtaking epic scenes revealed – it was like crying wolf. Moreover, they were utterly speechless about the acquisition of NAN.

Good god, they were all businessmen, what hadn't they seen? The rude customers, the game hackers, those who call the customer service just to mess with them and those who throw fits at game development companies. But they'd never seen someone going to such lengths as to buy a gaming company just to play a game!

How rich must you be to pull that off? Particularly since WY was significantly larger than their own companies. To acquire more than fifty percent of them would face the problem of whether Yuri Johnson was willing to sell. But now, ne naa maeaa sold. INO one Knew the details, DUt everyone Knew that there must be something irresistible for Johnson in the deal.

Regardless, it was clear that the game player with the ID 'Literati Saucy Poet' who had purchased IVY was extremely powerful. Meanwhile, the Memory Empire server players were somewhat dumbfounded. Damn, was he really trying to make an enemy out of game company's boss? Was he looking to die sooner? How many high-level accounts he could possibly have?

Although for game balance, people can't just freely generate equipment, but they must also bear the costs. People spent money, which was circling around in their own game, and in the end, the money still ended up back in their own pockets. So, if you tried to compete with them by spending money, wouldn't that still end up in their pockets?

What's going on? Spending money, seeking punishment, and in the end, helping others make money? Am I really this servile?

Regardless of what they thought, Finn anticipated not having time to play the game for quite some time in the future. The press conference was in the afternoon. It had already past dinner time, around 8 o'clock when it was over. Finn was about to go out for some food.

Just as he got in his car, he heard Olivia saying, "Young master, I have something to tell you."

"What is it?" Finn asked with some confusion.

"Miss Kay Lee is strolling alone now. She seems to be going to the Bund on Boulevard Road. Do you want to go and check on her?" Olivia suggested.

"Just her alone?" Finn felt surprised. Kay Lee had been doing this often before, but she seemed uninterested lately. Unexpectedly, she was in the mood to go out alone today.

"Yes, just her."

"Well, let's follow her. By the way, did she have dinner yet?" Finn thought for a moment and said.

"No," Olivia responded crisply. There must have been a dinner event after the press conference, but Kay Lee had left on her own. There was no doubt that she hadn't had dinner.

Finn was also hungry. Kay Lee only attended Yuri Johnson's banquet at noon and probably didn't eat much. She must be starving now.

"Give me a route. Before she gets there, we can go and buy some food on the way," Finn thought and said.

"Okay, young master," Olivia had detailed information about Kay Lee and naturally knew what Kay liked to eat. So, Finn didn't need to tell her where to buy food, just let Olivia plan the route.

Okay, I'm speechless. Seeing your discussions in the group about how to reward me, pour on the monthly tickets, I'm just overwhelmed. However, Windbreak is truly touched, really! On this Valentine's Day, thanks for all of your support! Without your support, Windbreak wouldn't have achieved this! But your current pace is about to play me to the ground, is this really okay?

All right, here, I am adding an extra chapter for 400 monthly tickets sure, let's release three more chapters! Happy Valentine's Day! But I think I'm having a sad day today. Am I going to add five more chapters? According to these monthly tickets, there are about to be 450 votes! But a man's words are like nails. One says, one does! 50 votes, one more chapter! Humph! All of today's three planned chapters are gone! Try again! But ... please show mercy, don't exhaust me in one day.. I can't take it!

Search the * website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.