Chapter 21: Hiring a Full-Time Female Assistant

Finn Lewis was familiar with this job market. The job market was not very large, but it wasn't small either. Lewis walked briskly to the main office, paid out two hundred yuan, and finally found a booth. He got a piece of cardboard and had his requirements printed at a nearby print shop.

When Finn Lewis walked out of the print shop, the shop owner gave him a bizarre look. Lewis awkwardly ignored the owner's gaze, carried his poster to his booth, and set up his poster.

The area was always busy with job applicants. However, most of them were temporary workers. Large companies seldom came here to recruit employees. Instead, they preferred to advertise in universities, company websites, or other places.

Only small enterprises or businesses seeking to hire temporary workers came to this job market. Therefore, when people saw Finn Lewis occupying a booth, they quickly surrounded him to see who he was hiring. However, when Finn Lewis lifted his recruitment poster, the onlookers were stunned.

Right now, Finn Lewis wished he could hide behind sunglasses. The recruitment specifications were embarrassing. The task required a full-time female assistant, available 24/7. How could anyone interpret it other than he was hiring a mistress rather than an assistant?

The problem was, these were the requirements of the task from Zero! Lewis could not change a single detail. Even worse, Lewis accepted the task without reading the details. Now, if the task failed, there would be failures and penalties! Worst yet, there was a time limit! This task was absolutely ridiculous!

"What the hell? The kid does not look that old right? Is he seeking a female assistant or a wife? Even a wife could not be available for 24 hours a day!"

“Eh, the society nowadays, too corrupt. He also wants good-looking assistance, isn't this just him looking for a mistress?” “Tsk, I thought he looked decent, now I see he is just a beast.”

“Does this guy have issues in his head?” Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Quick, snap a picture of this, send it on Wechat. You see all kinds of odd things these days.” Upon hearing the surrounding comments, Finn Lewis decisively blocked his face with his sleeves. One should never underestimate the power of Wechat friend circle! By the end of the day, the entire nation would know about this.

“You don't have to hide it. Rest assured, they can't capture any clear shots of your face.” The voice of Zero echoed in Finn Lewis' mind.

Are you kidding me? I'm hiding from taking photos, isn't this super embarrassing? Finn Lewis almost snapped. This was a crazy stupid task.

However, Finn Lewis had one piece of good news. Zero would be responsible for all the costs related to the task. Lewis didn't know where Zero got the money from, but Zero had already told Lewis that although the stock was registered in Lewis' name, he had no control over it. Therefore, Lewis only had one hundred million left. Well, now it was around ninety-four million.

Yet Finn Lewis was not worried about Zero running out of money. This meant that the money to hire the female assistant would not come out of his pocket. But even so, the public had condemned him, who would dare to apply?

Time passed bit by bit, and Finn Lewis had less than an hour left. Although there were still many people who looked at Finn Lewis with strange eyes, at least it was not as exaggerated as earlier. Finn Lewis finally felt relieved.

However, contrary to Finn Lewis' imagination, there was no situation where no one came to apply for the job. Soon after Finn Lewis dropped his hands, a woman walked straight up to him, and without any hesitation, sat down across from him. As Finn Lewis looked up and down at the woman's appearance, he was instantly dazzled. The woman was very beautiful. looked around twenty-seven to twenty-eight years old, but much prettier than Cora Franklin.

Besides, her makeup was exquisite, and her hair was made into a bun on her head, revealing her pale neck. She was wearing a loose knitted T-shirt, the bulge on her chest was obvious to anyone's eyes.

“Hello, are you looking for a full-time female assistant?” The woman sat down with an enchanting smile on her face and asked.

“Yes, I am.” Finn Lewis nodded, “Can you meet all these requirements?” Finn

Lewis apparently was speaking to this woman, but in reality, he was asking Zero in his mind. After all, the task also had a creepy condition that the appearance and figure must be above 80 points. Who would judge this? Obviously, it would be Zero.

“Sure, I can be available 24/7. You can call me at any time. My name is Sophie Lewis, but you can just call me Sophie.” The woman smiled at Finn Lewis.

Finn Lewis felt a fire kindling within him, this was truly a seductress. But Finn Lewis held back his feelings, because Zero immediately told him in his mind, unqualified! Although Finn thought the woman in front of him at least scored 80 points in both appearances and figure, Zero said she wasn’t qualified, so she wasn’t qualified.

So, Finn Lewis simply shrugged and said, “I’m sorry, you don’t meet my criteria. Sorry.”

“Of course not, I’m sorry.” Finn Lewis stated directly.

Sophie Lewis was momentarily shocked, her face cooled instantly. She got up and walked away without a word, and Finn Lewis watched her back, leaving, particularly focusing on Sophie’s tight and perky bottom. His mind was plagued with a thought: If she can’t meet the standards, how high are these standards?

Many other people overheard Sophie Lewis’s conversation with Finn Lewis, and a few of the women brightened up. They were ready to throw their hat in the ring and give it a try. Despite being well aware of Finn Lewis’ actual purpose of hiring a female assistant, they still believed they stood a good chance due to their beauty. They also thought that compared to working with middle-aged or old people, working with Finn Lewis would be a far better choice.

And then, a girl who looked like she was fresh from college came over. She was the only woman that made Finn Lewis double look. She was really pretty, both in terms of her looks and her figure. From Finn Lewis’s mouth, she was able to find out the monthly salary of this full- time female assistant.

“The basic salary is fifty thousand. Then there are other allowances such as clothing fees, makeup expenses, telephone fees... not set yet. Including accommodation and meals.” Finn Lewis gritted his teeth and spoke out the terms. Despite the fact that it was Zero’s money, it still had to come out of Finn

Lewis’s hands..

Chapter 22: An Epic Task Failure

However, in the end, just as Zero was about to score, Finn Lewis heard three icy words, "Not qualified!"

After the beautiful woman had left, Finn, ignoring the curious gaze of the people around him, thought about the generous offer he gave out which had made many women's hearts flutter. Salary of fifty thousand a month, not including clothing expenses and free meals, free housing, that's practically an easy fifty thousand. That's seven hundred thousand a year! Some sly old dogs would not be able to give their mistresses so much money in a year!

Ignoring the surroundings, Finn didn't care anymore. In a hushed, frustrated tone he muttered, "Tell me, where was she not qualified? Hell! She even looks prettier than the ones from before!"

"You want to know?" Zero directly replied.

"Damn right! You must give me a reason!" Finn responded immediately.

"She was even inferior to the first one; Sophie Lewis scored 72, while she only scored 60. Her breasts, butt were made-up, her eyebrows were pulled, she had liposuction and a nose job, and her cheekbones were also slightly adjusted. If you need, I can send you her previous photos." Zero spoke directly.

Finn was stunned, "No... no need." Finn was about to cry, god damn it, he could even detect plastic surgery. But Finn was also secretly relieved. The women were not pure at heart, and Finn naturally would not be pure to any extent. If they didn't mind, then Finn also didn't mind. However, just the thought of possibly sleeping with a woman who had undergone plastic surgery just like Amber Vance made Finn shiver dreadfully.

"Times up, your mission has failed," Zero suddenly said after Finn finished his questioning.

Only then did Finn noticed that he had wasted two and a half hours, "Considering that your mind was filled with hormones in the recruiting process, as a punishment for task failure, your sexual ability will be blocked. The time of unsealing is unknown." Zero immediately pronounced Finn's punishment for task failure.

“What!” Finn didn’t care that he was at a recruitment venue, he jumped up. But as soon as he stood, he felt a cold sensation within him. It quickly disappeared, but a chill ran down Finn’s spine. Holy shit, don’t tell me it is serious?

This was related to his life’s happiness! Finn ditched everything, including the cardboard he was writing on, and ran towards the job market, he didn’t go to school but directly ran into a hotel. While locking himself inside a room, Finn couldn’t help but yell, “Zero, get your ass over here, are you crazy? If I can’t perform anymore, then it would be better to kill me.”

Finn did not want to end up being the last eunuch in Flame Nation, “Since you yourself accepted the mission, you have to bear the punishment for failing the mission.”

“But you did not say that failing the mission would be so severe!” Finn shouted with wide eyes.

“Don’t worry, your body is completely healthy, you just can’t perform temporarily. After unlocking, things will return to normal,” Zero replied.

“You’re saying, I’m not a eunuch?” Finn let out a sigh of relief.

“No, but at least during the sealing period, you cannot perform any sexual activities.” Zero’s tone was unfaltering.

“When can I unlock this?” Finn immediately asked. If it’s one or two days that’s acceptable, but if it’s for several decades, they might as well kill him. “It depends on the progress of your tasks.”

Finn was agitated, but right now he had no other way. He had already experienced Zero’s mystery. Finn turned on the computer in the hotel room and started looking for some romance action movies, but unfortunately, no matter how many he watched, just like Zero said, he had no reaction down there.

Finn was about to cry, even monks must be more relaxed than him, right? “When can I unlock this task!” After resigning to his fate, Finn couldn’t wait any longer.

“When the task is available, I’ll find you. But tomorrow, I will give you a task. However, it’s not an unlocking task.” Zero directly replied.

“Alright, alright.” Although it’s not an unlocking task, at least there were points obtainable. Finn accepted! Thinking about points, Finn couldn’t help ask again: “By the way, if I earn points, exchange them for the +1 sexual ability potion, if I drink it, can it unlock?”

“No, although your related abilities will enhance, you will remain in the current state before unlocking.” Zero’s voice didn’t leave any room for bargaining

He made some quick plans to attend school later, but considering his current situation, Finn had no mood to attend classes and called in for a leave directly to Mr. Wood with a glum face. Luckily Mr. Wood knew about Finn's circumstances, thus he smoothly allowed him for a leave. As evening fell, Finn's mood improved slightly. After all, it wasn't a permanent seal and having the tasks was great news! This indicates that the fantastic items inside Zero were already open to him.

The next morning, as soon as Finn woke up, he anxiously asked, "Didn't you say that you've got a task for me today? What task?"

"Now that you're awake, head to the Bund city." Zero instructed.

Bund city? Finn was stunned for a moment, what was he supposed to do there? It's a large business center. Since Zero said so, Finn didn't question it and quickly got out from bed. After he had freshened up, he headed to the cab towards his destination. Roughly an hour later, Finn finally arrived. There was no way out of it. It was the rush hour and the traffic was congested. In such a condition, reaching there within an hour was indeed commendable.

"What am I here for? Is the task related to this place?" After getting out of the cab, while looking at the luxurious decorations, Finn asked.

"Of course, it's related to this place." Zero replied.

"But are you sure you want to accept the mission? If you fail, things may get worse." Zero's tone took a sudden turn as he asked.

Finn was taken aback, to accept it or not? Yesterday's mission had made Finn more cautious about Zero's tasks, his expectations lowered a lot. Those tasks were not easy to complete, so what if he fails again? Yesterday, they sealed his sexual ability, what would they seal this time? But most importantly, why didn't he give such a warning yesterday?! Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

But if he didn't accept, should he reject all the future tasks as well? And if he didn't perform the tasks, how was he to solve his current eunuch status? Considering this Finn rolled his eyes and reluctantly answered, "Accept! What task?!"

Who is afraid of those without shoes anyway?

Chapter Twenty Three: Cultivating the Noble Temperament (Part I)

“Task: Cultivating the Aristocratic Temperament, first side mission: Spend 20 million in this plaza within two hours, and what you purchase has to be usable for yourself. Task reward: 200 points, ownership of the purchased items. Task Failure: Unknown punishment.” When Zero read the task out loud, Finn Lewis was completely dumbstruck.

“Damn it! Are you sure we are cultivating a noble demeanor and not a nouveau riche temperament?” Finn asked in disbelief.

“One hour, fifty-nine minutes.” Zero’s voice remained steady, utterly ignoring Finn’s objections.

Well, damn it all! Finn simply flipped a middle finger and dashed towards the Bund shopping center up ahead. He finally understood why Zero wanted him to come here. It was inevitable because this was where all the luxury goods in Celeston City were located. There was also a specialty store owned by George Emadia Jackson, who would come and provide personal tailoring services for clients here from time to time. Other stores didn’t offer such exclusive treatments.

In reality, this place wasn’t that different from any other large shopping complex. The only thing that stood out was that many of the stores were renowned luxury brand boutiques from around the world. Once he entered the complex, Finn suddenly became a little disoriented. Although there were a lot of stores, he had no idea where to start.

‘Glancing’ around, he discerned that the stores on the first floor generally sold cosmetics and such. Spotting a security guard nearby, he figured he could ask for some directions. “Excuse me,” he asked. “Do you know where I can find a shop that sells watches?”

“Watches? What brand are you looking for? The watches here are quite pricey.” The security guard sized Finn up before replying.

“Breguet.” Finn selected the most expensive brand he could recall.

“Uh...” The guard choked a little, looking at Finn with a weird expression. Finn, somewhat annoyed, said: “Look, bro, I’m in a hurry. Don’t bother about whether I can afford it or not. Is it a crime to look around?”

“Alright then. It’s on the second floor, on the left-hand side. Walk further inside and you’ll see its specialty store.” The security guard explained after Finn’s retort. He wasn’t surprised because many people who came here couldn't afford the goods. After all, ordinary people couldn't afford watches that cost millions.

Considering Finn's current attire, the total value of his outfit probably didn't even exceed 500 bucks. Being security in a mall like this, one should have a keen eye for these things. They were exposed to luxury goods daily, so they could more or less guess the price of customers' outfits.

Finn paid no attention to the guard's wary gaze. He had limited time. He dashed to the elevator and headed straight for the second floor. Following the guard's directions, he found Breguet's specialty store. It wasn't very crowded at the moment—just one man and woman. The man seemed middle-aged, and the woman looked about twenty-three or twenty-four years old.

Finn couldn't care less about what they were doing. As he walked in, two salespeople promptly greeted him, "Welcome!" Strictly speaking, this wasn't just a Breguet specialty store; it was a joint store that also showcased other timepiece brands, such as Vacheron Constantin.

The salespeople were considerate and didn't act haughty at all. In boutiques like these, the salespersons were highly trained professionals. Of course, nobody knew what they were thinking.

"Sir, what type of watch are you interested in?" As Finn approached the counter, a stunning saleswoman greeted him with a warm smile.

Although the pricing of Finn's clothes was discernible by all, she still addressed him politely. Scanning the items displayed in the counter, Finn saw watches ranging from several hundred thousand to over a million. But he didn't have time to choose!

"Can you tell me which watch is the most expensive?" Finn bluntly asked.

"Uh, it would be this one." The surprised saleswoman showed Finn towards a nearby timepiece, assuming he was just window shopping.

It was sheer coincidence that the timepiece was next to the middle-aged man and woman. The man was showcasing a watch, probably worth over a million, to the woman. When Finn approached, the man glanced at him and frowned, but he said nothing.

"Could you please make some room?" They were blocking Finn's way.

"What? Can you even afford it? If you can't afford to buy it, don't just casually look around. You won't be able to cover the costs if you accidentally break something," the woman whined.

Finn simply ignored her, looking straight back and repeating, "Excuse me, please make some room."

The woman wanted to say something, but the man besides her tugged her sleeve and made way, seemingly avoiding conflict with Finn. However, he muttered under his breath, "Why the hell is he even looking if he can't afford

"Sir, this one is the most expensive piece in our store. It's the 5074R Rose Gold Automatic Mechanical Watch." The saleswoman introduced it to Finn. It wasn't as flashy as he thought, with diamonds encrusting everywhere. Instead, the watch was elegant: a golden case surrounding a black dial. The sporty leather strap was impressive too.

"How much is it?" Finn directly asked.

"The current sale price is 4.65 million. After the discount, it's 4-45 million." The woman was a bit puzzled from Finn's question.

Without a word, Finn immediately took out his bank card and handed it to her. The entire store was shocked by his action.

"Sir?" The confused saleswoman asked.

"What? I'm buying it. No need for packaging; I'll take it as it is. And I'm in a hurry, so speed it up," Finn urged.

"Uh, okay sir, wait just a moment." The saleswoman carried a brilliant smile, a genuine one this time, as she briskly went off to issue an invoice for Finn. He rushed to pay the bill, and the expressions on the faces of the other salespeople, including the man and woman, were priceless. "Holy crap! He's buying a Breguet as if he's buying cabbages!" The man exclaimed in a low voice. Others did not hear him, but the woman beside him did. Though she was envious, she mumbled 'nouveau riche' and kept silent.

Earlier, she criticized Finn, saying he couldn't afford it. Who would've thought, the guy purchased his goods faster than them. They'd been in the store for half an hour, struggling to decide on a watch, while Finn finalized his purchase within two minutes of entering..

Finn Lewis was a bit frustrated, as the process of paying for the watch turned out to be quite cumbersome, taking at least five or six minutes. Only after paying did he hurriedly stuff his bank card back into his pocket. The attractive saleswoman who had been serving him quickly handed him a business card with a genial smile, "Sir, this is my card. You can call me anytime if you have any questions. I am at your service."

Though Finn was not particularly interested, he couldn't help but ask, "Anytime?"

The saleswoman was taken aback, looking slightly flustered. Such practices related to business cards were generally understood, but one didn't usually ask about them so overtly. But she gritted her teeth and answered, "Anytime."

"I see," Finn nodded, then turned around and left. As he was leaving, he casually put the watch onto his right wrist. Seeing how well the top-tier designers had crafted it, Finn found himself admiring it more than he initially had.

Only when he had put it on did he truly appreciate its design. "This is what a watch worth over four million looks like?" Finn couldn't help but murmur to himself.

"Indeed, and this isn't even the most expensive one. If you visit the real Breguet exclusive store, their most expensive watch is valued around 14 million Flame Nation coins," Zero chimed in.

At Zero's reminder, Finn suddenly recalled something, and strode back into the store. The salespeople, who were busy discussing whether he was a low-profile millionaire or a nouveau riche, were struck by gauging Finn as a legitimate wealthy man.

Finn bought his Breguet watch faster than one could buy vegetables, and without uttering a word. But midway through their discussion, the salespeople spotted Finn coming back. They couldn't help but feel a jolt of anxiety. Was he returning to request a refund? Breguet did offer such a service, after all. "Sir, is there anything else you need?" The same saleswoman who attended him earlier quickly strode over to ask.

"Does this watch have a matching model that is for women?" Finn dangled his own on his wrist, "If there is, give me one of those too."

"Um, I'm sorry, sir. We only have this one model here. However, we do have other options for a women's watch," the saleswoman apologized. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Oh, never mind, then.” Finn dismissed her with a wave of his hand and headed straight for the exit. The saleswoman behind him almost broke down into tears, had a potential business deal just slipped away? It wasn’t fair to blame her, of course. Breguet had never released a couple’s edition of this particular watch.

Working in sales is perhaps most frustrating when dealing with customers who don’t easily soften their stance, people who fixate on just one thing and don’t want anything else, regardless of your sales pitch.

After he left the watch store, Finn continued deeper into the shopping center. Coincidentally, after not very long, he found another huge store selling a limited range of clothing. Its logo was familiar, it was George Emadia Jackson.

Finn sauntered in, greeted immediately by a saleswoman. As this was still early into the shopping mall’s opening hours, the number of customers was few. Even fewer were in this particular store. “Hello, sir. Is there anything specific you would like me to show you?” The saleswoman asked with a smile.

“Show me all the clothes that would fit me,” Finn gestured towards the apparel in the store.

“Certainly.” The saleswoman nodded and took Finn towards the items she thought would interest him. Since it was sweltering in Celeston City, she brought out some T-shirts. Finn checked the price of one and found it to be just over 800 yuan. He internally complained, with these prices, how much would he need to buy to spend 20 million?

“Wait a minute, weren’t Emadia’s clothes supposed to be very expensive? I’ve heard they can cost tens of thousands or even hundreds of thousands of yuan.” Finn looked at the saleswoman, puzzled.

The saleswoman was torn between laughter and tears, had she recommended the wrong items to him? However, in light of the “the customer is always right” principle, she carefully explained, “Sir, George Emadia Jackson is not the only brand under Emadia. It has four sub-brands designed for average consumers, with prices ranging from a few hundred to around ten thousand yuan” “Then why did you bring me here? Show me the most expensive stuff,” Finn immediately demanded.

The saleswoman was momentarily speechless. She couldn’t help but curse under her breath. Judging from what he was wearing, how was she supposed to know he was able to afford the high-end clothing? However, seeing as Finn was now asking for it, she guided him towards the more costly area of the store without further ado.

She soon found herself in disbelief. During her year or so of working at Emadia, she had never seen anyone shop like Finn. Every time he found a piece of clothing that looked reasonably good, he’d ask her to pick out one that would fit him and then tell her that he wanted to buy it.

This process repeated more than a dozen times, which made the saleswoman start to doubt his motives. Was he there just to mock her? Who shopped for clothes like this? It felt more like he was sweeping the shelves clean. If it weren't for his unyielding attitude, the saleswoman wouldn't have dared to continue picking out clothes for him. Naturally, she couldn't handle such a large amount of clothing on her own.

After a short while, nearly eight salespeople were following Finn around, all carrying clothes for him. At first, they managed to keep their composure, but soon began whispering and discussing amongst themselves. It was too shocking a scene to behold. Did he think this was a wholesale market in Galaxyshire? Was he buying clothes by the pound?

On top of that, Finn indiscriminately chose clothes with no regard for the current season, even including a few woolen overcoats! While the saleswoman felt a myriad of emotions, her professionalism helped her maintain her composure, albeit with a somewhat strained smile.

When it seemed he had chosen from every available item, Finn asked nonchalantly, "I've heard that Mr. George often comes to this store to get his clothes custom made, is that true?"

"I'm sorry, sir. That's no longer the case. However, renowned designers from Emadia do drop by occasionally. Mr. George is already 80 years old and has been focusing more on creative guidance since last year," the saleswoman explained respectfully.

"Oh, I see. Well, that will be all then. Oh, do you offer delivery service? I can't carry all these things alone," Finn gestured towards the pile of clothes.

"Yes, we do. As long as you provide us with your address, we can have these items delivered to your doorstep." The saleswoman looked at the massive pile of clothes. If Finn did end up paying for them all, it would be a transaction of historic proportions.

"Oh, right, one more thing. What if I were to tell you that I don't want any of the items I just picked out, what would you do?" Finn grinned mischievously.

As soon as his words left his mouth, the atmosphere in the store dropped several degrees..

Chapter 25: Spending Money is Also a Physical Task

At that moment, a clear, beautiful voice came from the entrance: "Hello, is anyone there?"

"Someone's here." The salesperson behind me quickly placed all the bags she was carrying on the couch, then hurriedly walked towards the door. The collective resentment from the six or seven women was too strong. Finn Lewis quickly spoke, "Just kidding, just kidding. I just thought you all looked tired carrying those bags, so why not lighten the mood a bit?"

Lighten the mood? The beautiful salesperson was almost dumbstruck. Seriously, he thinks this is amusing us? Isn't this toying with us? "Excuse me, sir, this isn't a funny joke," she awkwardly said with a forced smile.

"Alright, let's hurry up and check out. I'll take all of this." Finn Lewis promptly replied.

Upon hearing Finn's comment, the lady finally exhaled a breath of relief. She was genuinely scared that Finn meant what he said. This was no joke, it was life or death. Finn bought at least dozens of clothes. Just taking them all out and then rearranging them onto the shelf would take more than an hour. It's not as easy as it seems!

Kay Lee came over today to buy a birthday present for her father. Her old man was fond of Aimadia's clothing, so Kay Lee managed to take time out of her busy schedule to come to this specialty store to buy a few items. As a triple-threat star in music, television, and film, Kay Lee reached the peak of her career at just 23 years old.

Although she can't claim herself to be a top international megastar now, she does have a good reputation internationally. In her own country, she's undoubtedly a top star. The time that she has to shop for herself is very limited indeed. Fortunately, there were not many people in the shopping mall, so she didn't bother to disguise herself much today. She wore a pair of sunglasses and a hat, and only brought her assistant along. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

However, as soon as she entered the Aimadia store, Kay Lee was somewhat stunned. How come there was nobody at the counter? Kay Lee couldn't help but ask aloud. Then, a salesperson rushed over from the back. Shortly after expressing her needs and before the salesperson could even respond, she saw a man in ordinary clothes rushing out from the back, with seven or eight salespeople trailing behind him, all carrying clothes in their hands.

However, she had never seen anyone buy so many before. There must be at least a hundred items, right? Moreover, it was a man who bought all these! No wonder there were no salespeople at the counter just now.

She felt surprised, but Kay Lee didn't say anything. She just turned around to enter the store and headed to the deepest part of it. She had been to this store several times before, so she naturally knew where the clothes she wanted were. However, soon after Kay arrived at that area, she was shocked again. The wall where the clothes used to be hung was almost empty. It reminded her of the man from just now and left her speechless.

What to do now?

While the salespeople were tagging the clothes, Finn Lewis was waiting around bored. For some reason, Finn felt like he had seen the woman in front of him somewhere, and judging by her figure from the back, she's undoubtedly very attractive.

After retreating a few steps back, he took out his cell phone, put on his earphones, and quietly asked: "Hey, Zero, how much would you rate the woman just now?" Finn knew about Zero's peculiar abilities. It even knew if someone had plastic surgery. A pair of sunglasses wouldn't make a difference.

"97." Zero spat out a number that made Finn's jaw drop.

"Damn it!" Finn couldn't help but exclaim, but his voice was a bit loud, attracting the attention of several busy salespeople.

When he saw several salespeople looking at him, Finn waved his phone to signal that he was on a call. Although it hadn't been long, Finn had formed a habit of taking out his mobile phone every time he talked to Zero – just to maintain appearances.

Thinking about the beauty whom Zero had given a score of over seventy, and then the score given to the woman just now, Finn felt like drooling. Oh, a beauty with a score of ninety-seven? How preposterously beautiful she must be!

"Are you sure?" Finn lowered his voice.

"Yes, and there's a long-term task, do you want to take it?" Zero suddenly announced another task.

"Wait, let's finish this task first, shall we?" Finn thought for a while and said.

"Yes."

Only then did Finn Lewis heave a sigh of relief. Now that there was a task, he didn't want to let it go. However, based on his previous experience, Finn had developed an understanding of Zero's wickedness. After completing this task and finding a secluded place to learn more about it, he would then decide whether to take this task. This was the first time he had heard of a long-term task.

“Oh, by the way, I should remind you. According to your current pace, you have a 98% chance of not completing the task, ” Zero’s voice suddenly sounded again.

Finn stood there motionless for a moment, then suddenly leaped up and rushed to the counter, “Can you speed up a little? I’ve got something urgent!”

“Uh, sure, sir.” The salespeople were a bit stunned, but they still nodded. To them, the customer’s request was supreme, especially for a big customer like Finn. Still, they couldn’t help but wonder whether he was using the ‘urgent matter’ as an excuse to back out from buying the stuff.

It has to be said that human imagination is truly powerful. Especially Finn’s unusual shopping process gave the salespersons an unrealistic feeling. Therefore, they all unconsensually sped up their work. Luckily, Finn didn’t leave. He simply stayed on the side, hurrying them.

“Sir, we’ve finished scanning. The total is 2.16 million, after the discount.” The cashier couldn’t help but swallow her saliva. She asked herself, who spends more than 2 million within such a short time?

“Only a bit over 2 million?” Finn was taken aback, but still handed over his bank card. The salespeople beside him were at a loss for words, though they decided to say nothing. This was too demoralizing – they had seen rich people before, but they had never met anyone like Finn.

And now that he had spent more time here, even if Finn picked clothes extremely fast, the total time for picking out the clothes, the salespeople fetching them, and checking out now had added up to almost half an hour. That was forty minutes gone, with just over an hour and ten minutes left.

Right now, Finn had only spent over six million, but he still had over thirteen million left to spend in half the time remaining. This.... what to do now?

Chapter 26: Mission Accomplished

Finn Lewis quickly swiped his card to pay, leaving his phone number and taking a business card from the shop. He rushed through his words, "You can leave everything here, I don't know my address yet, but I'll call you with the details later, and then you deliver it to me. Can you do that?"

"Sir..." The salespeople were halfway through a reply when Finn cut them off with a wave of his hand, "No problem, right? This is my number, so it's settled."

As soon as he finished, Finn took off, leaving behind several gaping salespeople. They soon returned to their senses – after all, Finn had already paid. The products were still in the shop, but even without an address, they didn't see it as a big problem. The money was already in their bank account.

"Who was that guy?" The salespeople whispered amongst themselves.

"Who knows, maybe some down-on-their-luck rich kid? Man, the way he was buying things, it's like picking up cabbages from the market." The salespeople were worn out despite the short time spent serving him.

"You've been watching too many Korean dramas," another salesperson giggled,

You may have noticed, despite his ordinary outfit, that watch on his wrist, that was a Breguet. I saw it in a shop nearby before, it's worth over four million yuan." Another sharp-eyed salesperson chirped.

"Of course we noticed, why else would we have been recommending clothes for him so enthusiastically?" The others agreed. They had been trained to assess a customer's purchasing power based on their attire, jewellery, and wristwatches, then provide suitable recommendations to avoid upsetting the customer.

While they continued their discussion about Finn, he was blowing the minds of staff in several more luxury boutiques. By the time he heard Zero announce a mission completion in his mind, he was nearly wiped out.

"Man, I never realized spending money could be so exhausting," Finn expressed, being close to throwing up, after he'd sat down at a roadside café and ordered a coffee. "I can't believe I spent twenty million yuan in under two hours!"

The money Finn had spent was directly transferred by Zero and not from the initial hundred million, but Finn's heart still felt an undescrivable sensation. In the past, he had to work for a month to earn a little over 3000 yuan. Now, in just two hours, Finn had spent the equivalent of 555 years' worth of his past income!

This feeling... it was like being in a dream.

“Mission complete, points have been credited.” Zero’s voice, like music to the ears, rang out as the time ran out.

Finn was eager to see what was in Zero, but he restrained himself. It wasn’t the right time and place. Although no one could hear Zero’s voice, the virtual screen that it projected could be seen by others.

But even without a peek, Finn knew very well that his 200 points weren’t even enough to redeem the cheapest item — the potion.

“Zero, I’d like to know, how do you determine the efficacy of Strength +1, Agility +1 potions? For example, how much is my strength according to your evaluation?” Eventually, Finn asked seriously after some thought.

“The standard level for an adult human is 20 for both strength and agility. If both are at 20, it means the person has optimal health. The standard for intelligence is 15. Human potential is capped at 100.”

“All capped at 100?” Finn asked in surprise. A standard level of 20 doesn’t sound like much, but he was certain that he could never reach it. He Maggies not have the worst physique, but it was far below average.

And if the human limit could reach 100, wouldn’t that be five times the strength of an adult? That’s almost like being a Superman.

“Really? There’s such a big gap?” Finn couldn’t believe that he was that far behind, even though he was slim.

“My data is never wrong.” Zero responded without a trace of emotion, but Finn was exhilarated. Did this mean he could become a master like those in movies? He might not know shit about fighting, but if he had superhuman physiques, he could easily beat up ten people at once, right? Who doesn’t dream about becoming a superhero? There must be a reason superhero movies are so popular.

“Give me two bottles of Strength+I potion”. Finn exclaimed, without any hesitation. It’s not that he hadn’t considered saving points, but there is a significant gap to the first item he could redeem with his points. Therefore, Finn unhesitatingly redeemed the potion.

In the past, he’d been extremely envious of those with toned muscles. Now, as his stats improved, he’d definitely have muscles, wouldn’t he?

“Redemption complete,” Zero’s voice quickly echoed, “Do you want to withdraw it now, or later?”

“Later.” What did this strength potion look like and what would happen if someone saw it when he took it out? Finn decided it would be better to wait until he was back in his hotel room.

After finishing his coffee, Finn quickly hailed a cab to his hotel. There were fewer cars on the road at this time, so he reached his hotel quickly. As soon as he stepped into his room, he immediately said, “Quickly, bring out the potion. How do I drink it?”

“You can drink it directly.” As Zero finished his sentence, two bottles of red potion materialized on the table. The potion bottles looked like test tubes from the lab, one end sealed with a cork.

“I just drink it directly?” Finn asked, pointing to the potion, “I don’t need to inject it or anything?”

“Nope, but I’m sorry, you can’t drink it yet.”

“Why?” Finn was taken aback, “Didn’t you just say I can drink it directly?”

“Because increasing a human’s physical qualities is a comprehensive process.

In other words, you have to exchange your points for a bottle of Strength Potion, an Agility Potion, and an Intelligence Potion, and then consume all three together.”

Finn: ‘

“Why didn’t you tell me this before? Why only tell me after I’ve exchanged my points?! Also, if physical qualities need to be improved comprehensively, why are you selling the potions separately?” Finn was about to lose his mind! Did Zero know how hard it was for him to earn those 200 points? Those 200 points were equivalent to two million yuan! It was all wasted! He had no idea when he’d get to complete his next task and acquire more points!

“Selling the potions separately helps to boost their sale value,” Zero replied calmly.

‘ Finn was speechless at Zero’s shameless comment.. After a long pause, he choked out: “Well played!”

Chapter 27 - 27 – Long-Term Task

Chapter 27 – Long-Term Task

“You just said there’s a long-term mission for me. What’s that?” Trying to keep his emotions in check, Finn Lewis lay down on the sofa and asked in a weak voice.

“Mission objective: Make the top domestic celebrity, Kay Lee, your girlfriend.”

Finn, taken aback, sprung up from the sofa and hollered with bloodshot eyes,

“Zero, damn you!”

Finn behaved like a wild cat whose tail has been stepped on, becoming hysterical in an instant.

“Why are you reacting this way? Is it because I have entered your life, discovering some of your secrets?”, Zero inquired in its usual indifferent tone.

“Hell with you! I don’t want you messing up the ideal image I have in my mind.”, Finn vented and then calmed down. He faltered onto the sofa with a bitter smile.

The reason for Finn’s anger wasn’t because he had met Kay Lee. That would have been impossible. She was a top celebrity at home and internationally known, whereas he was just an ordinary kid from a farming family. There was no way they would cross paths.

Everyone has something they hold dear in their hearts and do not want others to touch. Kay Lee was Finn’s — someone he admired, like almost everyone once did, although he had started a bit late. She had become a top woman star without a single scandal in this chaotic entertainment era, an unimaginably rare feat.

Finn once joked with his roommate that he would win over Kay Lee if he was rich one day. But, that didn’t mean he was comfortable with Zero unmasking his secrets bit by bit.

Suddenly, Finn felt powerless. Zero had become a part of his life, and it was impossible to change that since he shouted those words by the river. Regardless of how hard Finn tried to guard his secrets, unfortunately, it was nearly impossible to do so in front of Zero.

“What else do you know? Go ahead and do what you want. I don’t seem to have any secrets in front of you anyway.”, said Finn, regaining his indifferent demeanor quickly after venting his emotions.

“I don’t think you should feel this way. You should know what my presence means to you. The things you’ve only dared to dream of can now become a reality. You once fantasized about spending millions in an afternoon. Today, you accomplished that within just two hours. Look at the watch on your wrist. It’s the same one you bragged about to your roommates, and it's real, isn't it?" , Zero uncharacteristically vented in a lengthy speech.

"What are you trying to say?" , Finn asked helplessly.

"It's simple. Are you going to accept the mission or not?" , Zero asked casually.

"Before accepting it, I have a question." , Finn hesitated.

"You want to ask if Kay Lee is still a virgin?" , For the first time, Zero's voice had a different tone, but Finn was too stunned to notice this.

"Damn!" , Finn blurted out a curse. He was going insane. It felt like he couldn't hide anything from Zero.

"I know the answer. Do you want to hear it?" , Zero's voice returned to normal.

Finn was torn – to hear or not to hear. Even he himself didn't know if he wanted to know the answer. Every man has a goddess in his heart, and undoubtedly, she is perfect. But what if the given answer is not expected? Wouldn't it better to live in blissful ignorance?

After a while, Finn gnashed his teeth and said, "Tell me! If my goddess is shattered, I will hate you for the rest of my life, Zero."

"Well, you won't have a chance. She's always been single." , Zero told Finn directly.

"Wow." , Finn couldn't help but punch the air in excitement before immediately answering, "Accept. I'll take on this mission."

"Mission objective: Make Kay Lee your girlfriend. Time limit: None. Successful reward: 10,000 points, one-time use of my power within the permissions granted. Failure penalty: Deduct 50,000 points." , Zero materialized the mission into a virtual screen in front of Finn.

"By the way, the woman you met in Aimadia today was Kay Lee." , Zero suddenly added. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Finn was speechless. He didn't have the energy to comment on Zero anymore. He regretted not having the opportunity to see Kay Lee in person, but it was a good thing. He didn't know then that it was Kay Lee, he might have recalled the mission.

Looking at the rewards of the mission, Finn couldn't help but be excited. The penalty for failure was also terrifying, but Finn felt there was a catch to the reward that allowed one-time use of Zero's power.

“Can you tell me what it means to use your power once within the permissions granted?”, Finn asked.

“It means you can use my power for anything, not just limited to protection.”

“Anything?”, Finn raised an eyebrow.

“Even illegal things?”

“Earth laws have no effect on me. You decide everything.”

Hearing that, a light suddenly flashed in Finn’s mind, and he eagerly asked, “Wait, I have a question. You once said that the money I earn can be exchanged for points, is that still effective?”

“Always effective. As long as you earn money, you can get the corresponding points, and the money you earn, I won’t confiscate.”

“Why, even illegal money?”, Finn asked with eyes gleaming. That was the crucial point he wanted to ask.

“As I mentioned earlier, Earth laws have no effect on me. Everything is up to you.”, Zero’s response made Finn swing his fist in satisfaction. Previously, Finn had only thought about starting a company, forgetting that any method of making money could work, but subconsciously, he had limited himself to legal channels.

“List out the items I can exchange points for.”, Finn said quickly.

Soon, a virtual screen appeared in front of Finn. Finn quickly scanned it and after about ten minutes, he finally found what he was searching for: Subspace Storage Device. Using Jotium parallel subspace principle, it controlled space property structures and could store any non-living object. Each cubic meter of storage space cost 1,000 points.

When Finn saw this, he couldn’t help but snap his fingers. It could store any non-living thing — a godsend for smuggling! With the current Earth’s technology, it would be impossible to detect. Although Finn didn’t have points now, if he could exchange for this thing... go to Hidden Island, procure some goods, and then transport them to the North Federation or the Southern Federation, the reselling price could multiply by tens or even hundreds of times!

Would he still be worried about points then? However, he could not do this often, as Finn didn’t want to be targeted. After all, although he could store things, he still had to live on Earth. Recalling scenes from movies, Finn shuddered. But, it was nonetheless a way out..

Chapter 28 - 28: A Powerful Smartphone

Chapter 28: A Powerful Smartphone

Finn Lewis suddenly felt that Zero hadn't told him many things, and he had to discover them all by himself. When he came across this storage space, he immediately thought about Zero. Where was Zero storing all this stuff? And what exactly was Zero's existence? Finn had no idea.

Thinking about it, a gleam flashed in Finn's eyes and he quickly asked loudly, "Zero, I have a question. About principles like sub-space storage, do you provide storage services? Like if I spend points with you, would you help me store stuff?"

"We provide storage. The price to store an item for twenty-four hours per cubic meter IS 200 points. According to this formula, the price doubles for every doubling in volume," Zero replied quickly.

"You are greedy." Finn couldn't hold back anymore. My goodness, your hourly fees are this high?

"You can choose not to use it."

"Alright, one last question. Can you modify my cell phone? At least let me have a place to check what I can exchange, how many points I have. Every time you communicate with me like this, it's easy to scare me sick, and it's also easy for others to spot something is off," Finn pointed to his phone and spoke.

"Yes." This time Zero didn't refuse, nor even mention the matter of points. Finn put his domestic cell phone on the coffee table. Shortly after he put it down, the phone disappeared.

"By the way, can my phone change the..." Finn was about to ask if he could change its appearance. He's wearing a watch worth millions but can't continue with a phone given with the prepaid card.

Before Finn could finish his sentence, a large-screen phone appeared on the table in front of him. Recognizing its familiar design, Finn picked it up in surprise. It had approximately a 5.5-inch screen. "Wow, is this the latest model from company A?"

"Yes, it's the model A Company is planning to launch in the country next month."

“Holy shit, it hasn’t been launched worldwide yet, and you’ve already gotten me one. Who wouldn’t assume it’s fake when they see it?” Finn was speechless.

Hey, company A hasn’t started selling yet, and you’ve already given me one. “You’re a shareholder of A Company, what’s wrong with using a phone in advance?” Search the * website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Alright...” Finn was left speechless by the retort. He had forgotten, it seemed he indeed held the status of a shareholder in A Company.

However, Finn was still excited to pick up the phone and play with it. The interface looked similar to Chubby Callum’s A5S etc., but the screen was much bigger. Finn also felt the phone was slightly heavy in his hands, which was very comforting.

Upon opening a few apps, they loaded at a blistering speed, which was many times faster than the phones Chubby Callum and his batch used, almost instantaneous. Certainly, company A’s technology couldn’t have achieved this. On the phone’s desktop, Finn found an app-like icon labeled “Zero”.

Upon trying to open it, Finn found it had a fingerprint lock. “In addition to the fingerprint lock, it also includes iris and facial recognition programs, so you don’t have to worry about the wrong person opening it. If someone else gets hold of your phone, they won’t be able to open any secret areas. For example, with this app, it would basically just crash if they tried to use it.”

Finn nodded in approval. He wasn’t worried about this, considering Zero’s tech capability, sorting out these things was too easy. Once Finn opened the app, he saw many familiar items he could exchange. However, Finn didn’t have a single point at the moment.

“By the way, I have another question. When I earn money, it can be converted into points, but can points also be exchanged for money?” Finn asked. “Yes, one point can be converted to five thousand Flame Nation coins for use.”

This time Finn didn’t ask any questions. Being able to exchange was enough. After all, the money in Finn’s hands was less than a billion, if he bought something, there wouldn’t be much left, and the money Zero had was only given out when needed for a mission, Finn had no way to spend it elsewhere.

Sitting on the sofa pondering, Finn thought his next target should be to buy a house, otherwise, he would have no place to put all the stuff he bought in the morning. Just the clothes could probably fill up the entire dormitory, let alone the fact that Finn spent nearly 20 million on all kinds of luxury goods.

Even for luxury goods, 20 million could buy lots. Finn himself even forgot what he bought, and just knew the number of items brought back would be huge. Anyway, Finn had less than a billion which was his own left, and whatever house he bought would definitely be his.

Once decided, Finn went out of the hotel, opened the map on his phone and said, “Zero, find me a property, preferably furnished, move-in ready, close to school with good security. No villas please.”

It wasn't that Finn didn't want a villa, but with his current money, it couldn't all be spent on buying a house, and even if he spent it all, he probably couldn't afford a good villa.

Following Finn's instructions, the map in his hand began to flicker quickly, and soon a property appeared on the map. Seeing this property, Finn couldn't help but ask, “There are still houses for sale here?”

Finn knew the property well since it was right next to F University, only an estimated 20-30 minute walk. Finn had seen it many times before. There was lots of greenery in the community and other facilities were pretty good, but wasn't it opened last year? Weren't all the units filled?

“There are 11 duplex units for sale on the top floor. The house you purchase mustn't be too small, your home needs to accommodate a lot of stuff in the future,” Zero explained.

Finn gave it some thought. He was very familiar with the community and was quite happy with the environment, location. So without hesitation, Finn hailed a cab and headed towards the sales office of the community. While in the taxi, Finn played with the map on his phone and found the phone Zero had conjured truly awesome.

The GPS positioning on his map was probably even better than what could be found in the army. The map was extremely accurate when zoomed in, not a bit off. And when Finn switched the view to satellite mode, he found the map could even zoom in to a 1:5 scale, and pedestrians, cars, and other things on the street were all moving, as if rendered in real-time satellite imagery..

Chapter 29: Buying a House

Finn Lewis got out of the taxi and walked straight into the sales office of the residential community. It wasn't crowded; after all, it was not a newly opened real estate project. Only two sales ladies were present, and one of them greeted Finn as he entered.

"How may I assist you, sir?" The beautiful young woman asked with a friendly smile.

"Well, I'm interested in viewing some houses; I assume there are still some available?"

"Yes, there are still some houses left, but it depends on how many square meters you need. There are only 11 units available, all of them are large-sized, elegantly furnished, split-level, and options are limited as houses of other layouts have already been sold out. Would you like to take a look?" She hesitated before giving Finn a brief introduction, speaking in a tactful manner, obviously considering Finn's feelings.

Her eloquence impressed Finn, and he developed a liking for her. He smiled and asked, "Can you show me around? Are all 11 units the same type?"

"No, each of the 11 units has a different layout. If you would like, we could start by looking at some floor plans?" She promptly shook her head and answered.

Varied layouts? Finn found this surprising; isn't it true that most property layouts are typically the same due to the architectural structure?

"Could you please show me the houses instead? I won't bother with the floor plans." Finn voiced his preference after thinking for a moment.

"Sure, please wait for a moment. Are you interested in seeing all of them?" She hesitated, then nodded her approval. Not many people came to visit the properties.

As such, they didn't have much to do, and were not permitted to do other tasks whilst in the sales office. Although it may be boring, accompanying Finn on the tour was a welcome engagement. Despite having visited the houses multiple times, the grandeur of the properties never ceased to amaze.

The saleslady quickly fetched the keys, then led Finn through the sales office's back door into the residential complex. "Let me introduce myself properly. My name is Finn Lewis." While walking into the complex, Finn jovially starts the introduction.

"I'm Luna Green." She extended her hand, shaking hands with Finn while introducing herself, "I'm quite familiar with this complex as I have been here before. But can you tell me why the prices of these 11 split-level units vary?"

"Well, many people ask this. It's quite simple. When the property was designed, 22 exclusive penthouses were planned. There are 11 high-rise buildings in this community, each having 2 penthouses. When the building was completed up to the 26th floor, it was capped, and then 22 unique split-level penthouses were built.” Luna smilingly explained to Finn.

“Oh, basically, it’s like building villas on top of the building, right?” Finn now understood why the layouts varied.

“Yes, and all layouts were designed by renowned designers. Unfortunately, the generally unsatisfactory market response was due to the developer’s inability to face market realities and the excessive prices considering the location and environment. Therefore, some houses still remain unsold.” Luna nodded acknowledgingly.

“You’re telling me all these insider details of the industry, aren’t you afraid I’ll take advantage and drive the prices down?” Finn found this situation amusing; typical saleswomen generally avoided discussing such issues with potential customers.

“Haha, Mr. Lewis, you’re going to be disappointed. The one responsible for designing these split-level penthouses is the boss’s daughter, and she is notoriously headstrong. She would rather keep these units unsold than lower the prices. So even if I tell you this, there’s no chance you could cut the price.” Luna chuckled as she explained.

Finn immediately shrugged his shoulders, “Alright, seems like your boss’s daughter is quite wilful. But I guess this isn’t good news for you guys? After all, isn’t your commission based on successful sales?”

Luna chuckled, then she smiled and replied: “Well, yes and no. Those of us stationed here permanently are given an additional monthly 5000 yuan allowance from the boss’s daughter personally. Even though we could earn a substantial commission if we sold these houses somewhere else, the current real estate market is in recession. Having the allowance to fall back on isn’t bad, even if it takes several months to sell a house here. Plus, the remaining 11 units are stunning, and we are confident they will sell eventually. As for us two colleagues, we have agreed that whoever sells one of the houses will handle all subsequent customers. After all, in the end, the money will all be ours, right?”

“Haha, you are satisfied with what you get. So, it looks like it’s your turn to sell this house?” Finn laughed. He found Luna’s personality to be rather intriguing.

“Yes, that’s why we rely on people like you, our generous clients, to make a little money.” Luna laughed.

“I’m not some big boss; I’m just a student at F University.” Finn raised his hands in jest. “I’m just here to take a look today. I’ve been interested in these houses for a long time, and today I finally mustered up the courage to come for a visit.” Finn said cheerfully.

“Oh, I see. Then let me show you the most beautiful unit we have. Its neighbouring unit was sold, which I consider the most impressive unit. Since you’re here to appreciate the grandeur, let me take you on a fascinating tour. I hold the boss's daughter in high regard; the houses she designed are simply splendid. I always feel that when I get married, I will strive to buy a house designed by our boss's daughter." Luna stated while laughing, her stride jubilant with newfound excitement.

Finn was surprised; he thought Luna would be upset. But instead, it seemed that she was reverting back to her usual up-beat self, dropping her professional facade. Finn noted that her demeanor had changed; her smile wasn't that of a salesperson anymore, and her walking style had altered, more akin to having a friendly conversation with a close friend.

All along the way, she kept telling Finn about the magnificence of the boss's daughter's creations Finn kept in his end of the chapter_ eager in this utterly beautiful house Luna was gushing about. search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"The two top floor penthouses are each equipped with a private elevator, accessible only to the residents living in these two houses." Once they were inside the building, Luna led Finn to the innermost elevator, continuing her introduction.

Despite being exclusive to only two residences, this elevator was even larger than the ones accessible to regular users, capable of accommodating up to 18 people. This was most likely considered for ease of transporting furniture; after all, people able to afford such homes would surely have elaborate and elegant furniture..

Chapter 30 - 30 Bought

Chapter 30: Chapter 30 Bought

Translator: 549690339

"Chapter 30: Bought it

As the elevator reached the top floor, the doors opened to a breathtaking sight. Finn Lewis and Luna Green stepped out into the space between two split-level penthouse villas. A garden sprawled out before them, and above, at about three meters high, a huge chunk of clear glass rested on stainless steel brackets, forming a canopy that covered both villas. It looked like a secluded little world.

"Pretty, isn't it!" Luna beamed, as if she owned the property herself. "Each split-level property has a greenhouse garden of about two hundred square meters. Even in winter, once the glass canopy is closed, it remains warm like spring. In summer, the canopy can be opened from all four sides for ventilation. And don't worry about ventilation in winter; there's a separate ventilation system."

"Let's take a look inside now." Luna led Finn into the house. Its interior boasted a typical minimalist European style but skewed heavily towards a high-tech feel. The walls, the coffee table, and all other elements carried a futuristic science-fiction flair.

"Actually, I prefer the house next door, which has a pastoral style, compared to this one with a futuristic style. But this one is still beautiful. All the curtains here are automated. You can set the opening and closing times. In the master bedroom on the top floor, the roof can be opened for star-gazing." Luna excitedly explained each feature of the house to Finn.

Apparently, Luna had ceased considering Finn as a client and instead treated him like a friend, sharing her joy and enthusiasm for the house with him. Finn also had some admiration for the owner's daughter, credited for the house's design. It wasn't for nothing—he would have called it the work of a top designer. But was it suitable for a split-level building like this?

"What is the price of this place?" Finn interrupted Luna's enthused descriptions to ask.

"Ah? Oh, it's quite expensive. The garden is provided for free. The total area of the house is about 345 square meters. It can't be larger because it's on the rooftop. It's priced at 108,888 yuan per square meter. The boss's daughter personally selected all the materials used here," Luna quickly replied.

"How much?" Finn almost choked on the number Luna just mentioned.

"108,888 yuan per square meter." Luna's voice was softer, as if she, too, found the price excessive. Even though the 200 square meter garden was considered free, the price was outrageous. The average price per square meter in this neighborhood was only 18,000 yuan. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"How much are the apartments below in your complex?" Finn asked, pointing downstairs.

"28,000 yuan per square meter, fully furnished," Luna quoted a price.

Hearing this, Finn realized why these 22 flats were not selling. The apartments just below were selling for 28,000 yuan per square meter, fully furnished, yet the price shot up to more than 108,000 for the rooftop flats, an increase of nearly five times. No wonder they were not selling.

Of course, the design was splendid, but splendid design didn't warrant such an outrageous price. However... Finn indeed, really liked this house, "Are the other houses priced the same?"

"Yes, the price is the same, but we offer five years of property management fees included." Luna replied in a low voice.

Finn was speechless. How much could five years of property management fees amount to? "What about the other houses' designs? Are they all designed like this on the outside?"

"No, several of them have open designs, but I think this design is better. It won't get too cold when the wind blows in winter. Of course, each has its own advantages. This kind of design will result in higher electricity charges as the ceiling consumes power, not to mention the extra maintenance charges," explained Luna.

"Okay," Finn nodded. After pondering the hefty price of 108,000 yuan per square meter, which far exceeded his initial budget, he couldn't help but admire the beauty of the house. Looking at Luna's expression, it was clear she adored it too. In total, this house would cost over 37 million yuan!

"I'll take it." Finn declared after a brief moment of contemplation.

"Huh?!"" Luna was taken aback. She hadn't perceived Finn as a potential buyer until he mentioned his purchase intention clearly. Now, her mouth hung ajar as she began to process the surprise.

"Are you sure?" Luna asked, still taken aback.

"Of course. What else do you think I'd buy a house for?" Finn replied with a smile.

"Ah, okay, I'll take you to the office to finalize the paperwork." Luna's face broke into an excited smile. She'd earn a considerable commission from the seller if she managed to sell a house, particularly a house like this one. Based on a 0.5% commission rate, Luna would earn over 180,000 yuan—a substantial amount.

"Remember to invite me to dinner after you receive your commission," Finn chuckled as they descended in the elevator.

"Ah... Okay, but don't order anything too expensive," Luna replied, seemingly still caught in her excitement. After processing Finn's comment, she cautiously added, "You, being able to afford a house worth over 30 million yuan, must certainly have expensive tastes. Although I will earn a substantial commission, my regular salary isn't that high. I also need to save money for buying a house and a car."

“Haha.” Finn couldn’t help but laugh at Luna’s cautious response. After chuckling for a bit, he reassured her, “Don’t worry, we won’t eat anywhere too expensive. However, can I have the keys as soon as I finish paying for the house today?”

“You’re paying in full?” Luna was surprised again.

“Yes, full payment,” Finn nodded.

Luna was lost for words. Knowing the total price of the house, she was surprised that an ordinary-looking young man like Finn could pay nearly 40 million yuan upfront without even blinking. No one buys a house like this— look around, seal the deal, and not even see any other houses first. Despite working in real estate for a while, Luna had never seen anyone purchase a house like this.

Frankly speaking, she might have met wealthier people, but none as decisive as

Finn.

“If you’re paying the full amount, as soon as the contract is signed and the money is deposited, you can get the house key card immediately. If you need to change the house card, we will assist in making the arrangements. Yet, you can also change the information settings of the house card yourself at home,” Luna, usually so casual, stammered her explanation..
