At least for the short-term, only the wealthy could afford such consumption. As for the Yunwu tea or Nightingale tea, the supplies were rather limited. The only way to increase the supply would be for Finn Lewis to cultivate on a large scale. But large-scale cultivation is not easily sustainable, and there are certain justifications for not supporting vast cultivation.

About half an hour later, Olivia Thatcher suddenly spoke, "Young Master, I have found that this foundation is quite similar to our own charity foundation. It's non-profit and solely devoted to charity. All the funds are provided by the members themselves, just like our foundation. They don't seek any recognition, only to anonymously assist those in need after careful verification."

"Hmm," said Finn Lewis, nodding in slight surprise.

"The foundation has been established for around 11 years. Currently, there's not many members, only 27 in total. These people raise money for the foundation in various ways, and never resort to any unacceptable methods. Many people even regularly donate their inflexible income to the foundation. Over the years, they've spent around 340 million and helped 1,746 people," Olivia quickly relayed the main data.

Finn Lewis nodded quietly. Earning 340 million in 11 years seemed minimal, even pitiful. However, considering that these so-called third generations had no source of income and raised money through diverse legal methods, this amount was no longer negligible.

Moreover, the people they helped were as Sarah Wood stated, they were mistreated by certain individuals despite being innocent. They attempted to restore their reputation by aiding these people, though their method seemed a bit naive.

Finn Lewis shook his head. Even if they were doing real work, not many people knew. Even if people found out, reputations weren't so easily restored. As they say, destruction is always easier than construction. Twenty years of hard work might be ruined by one degenerate in a split second.

However, at least they were taking action and helping people, regardless of their initial intention. As long as they helped people, their efforts weren't in vain.

But Finn Lewis couldn't understand it. Surely, these so-called third generations should have some talented leaders among them. However, this was none of his concern. If it were up to him, he wouldn't recommend a Prodigal in the foundation.

Since they were already taking action, and Olivia was keeping an eye on things, he could withdraw at any time. But he had to think about how to spend his money. He didn't want to get too involved with them, just help them out occasionally.

Interestingly, some troublemakers can only be handled by these individuals. But those like Sarah Wood were quite unusual. Finn Lewis pondered – if he revealed the purpose of the foundation online, how many people would believe it? Probably not many.

However, Finn Lewis didn't currently require their help. Therefore he could contact them later when he needed them. After making his decision, he asked T800 to destroy the USB flash drive. As Kay Lee and Sarah Wood approached, Finn Lewis was deep in thought.

“Finished with your work?” Finn Lewis asked with a smile.

“Yes,” Kay Lee replied, smiling. She looked around and remarked, “It's really hard to believe that so many people are visiting our shop despite the high prices. It feels as busy as some of the popular shops.”

Finn Lewis laughed, “This is just the beginning. It will probably be less packed in the future.”

“Not necessarily,” Sarah from the side shook her head and commented, “The number of customers will definitely increase. In the future, the number of people coming here to drink tea each day may not be a small figure.”

“Speaking of which, about membership restriction, do either of you have any thoughts?” Finn asked after giving it some deliberation.

“Well, this is the right move. Currently, we are letting a large number of people in because we just started. However, I have made a rough estimate, and although we can't say that we have been able to attract all the rich in the country, almost all of the top-tier wealthy group has already gotten in,” Kay Lee said after some thought.

“If too many ordinary people are allowed in, it won't be good news. After all, for these rich people, they have no interest in getting to know ordinary wealthy people. I also think you should limit the number of people. However, another point is that your Purple Crystal Card should not be limited to only one person. If you want to limit the number,” Sarah Wood on the side also gave her thoughts after some thought.

“Elaborate on that,” Finn immediately responded with a thoughtful nod.

“Firstly, you establish a system where the Purple Crystal Card must be used by the original owner. In other words, other people can’t use someone else’s Purple Crystal Card. But the card can admit others, for example, each Purple Crystal Card can admit a maximum of ten people, but the expenditures of those admitted will be borne by the owner of the Purple Crystal Card. Actually, that’s not a problem for people who come here. They don’t care about money. But they are people too, and they also have the mentality of comparing with others,” Sarah Wood quickly said.

“You have such clear thoughts. Why don’t you start a business?” Finn curiously asked, looking at Sarah. Kay Lee had no other thoughts.

But Sarah heard other meanings in Finn’s words. She spoke helplessly, “My family doesn’t allow me to conduct business. It’s not that I can’t, but if I do business and make money, people will always have something to say.”

Finn Lewis nodded thoughtfully after understanding Sarah’s meaning. He thought for a while and said, “But it should be okay for you to work, right?”

“What? You want to hire me? Let me tell you first, I do not have a major in financial management,” Sarah Wood quickly said.

“I have such an idea, but haven’t thought it through yet. When I have a suitable position for you, I will call you,” Finn Lewis thought for a while. He was not very familiar with Sarah Wood. He decided to let Olivia start collecting some information about Sarah Wood in the evening. Her identity and background weren’t important, the primary task of Olivia was to evaluate if Sarah Wood has any special skills or talents..

Chapter 312 - 306: Reform Continued

“I think I know what you’re aiming for. Starting from today, we won’t issue Purple Crystal Cards generously as before. We’ve already caught those top-notch people in our net, and whatever is sold in Moon of West Lake implies that these folks will unite with us as a common interest body. Thus, we are not scared of others,” Finn Lewis thought for a while and voiced out the thoughts Sarah Wood hadn’t said.

“When these people start bringing their friends and family to boast about our business, those who can’t get our Purple Crystal Card would help us promote it,” Finn quickly added.

“I believe your idea is similar to mine. Our next step with the Purple Crystal Card would be to create an invitation-only system,” Finn said smilingly.

The so-called invitation system means that it’s useless if you want to join the membership, you can only join if we invite you. That is to say, before we invite you, you might not know whether you qualify to be a member here.

Be it rich or poor, people are all the same. The more they can’t get something, the more they cherish it. When the Purple Crystal Card of Moon of West Lake becomes commonly known among the world’s top tycoons, everyone will take pride in possessing this card.

“Exactly, if you can consistently supply the tea leaves here and ensure that the supply source is unique, then your hand will control a terrifying resource,” Sarah pondered and felt somewhat agitated. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

If it really develops like this, it would undoubtedly become the world’s top tycoon club. Perhaps these tycoons have competition among themselves, but if it involves the club owner, they would definitely give some face.

Finn thought about it, indeed, to reach that step would require years. After some thought, Finn started talking with a smile, “We already have our members’ contact information. Next, I will ask Olivia Thatcher to send a text message to these members, explaining the future operation method of Moon of West Lake.”

Kay Lee didn’t have any objection naturally, and Sarah had none as well, since this wasn’t her place. However, Sarah rolled her eyes and asked, “Shouldn’t you give me a pound of tea as a reward? I did give you a suggestion.”

“Okay, but it’s the lowest-grade Nightingale Tea. But don’t worry, its effects are the same as the highest-grade tea. It’s just that it takes effect slower, and it’s the same with long-term use,” Finn thought for a moment before readily agreeing.

“Really? Remember you promised,” Sarah didn’t expect Finn to agree and quickly asserted, although it was 100,000 a pot of tea. As long as Finn said the effect was the same, it must be the same.

“Of course,” Finn nodded and immediately contacted Hannah Lincoln. She would probably still be responsible for the future business here.

Finn shared his ideas with Hannah Lincoln as soon as he found her, and she agreed immediately. The best course was if this expansion continued, who knew who would come here in the future? If there were too many people, there would naturally be all sorts of folks. If there were conflicts, innocent mortals suffer during a clash of the immortals.

After explaining to Hannah Lincoln, Finn immediately contacted Olivia Thatcher to draft a text message. Using Olivia's capabilities, the message would be immediately seen by the members. After all, there were just this number of total members.

Soon, Olivia processed the text message as per Finn's instructions. Everyone's phone in the entire hall rang at once, and it was quite shocking. All the people had also noticed this and immediately took out their phones. Finn did the same.

"To all our respected members of Moon of West Lake Purple Crystal Membership Card, from today due to some product quantity issues, to limit the number of people, the Purple Crystal Membership Card will be reformed. Firstly, the Purple Crystal Membership Card will be tiered, ranging from 1 star to 9 stars. Currently, everyone's membership is 1 star."

"Secondly, the Purple Crystal Membership Card will adopt an invitation system. Moon of West Lake will set up a special group to review who are eligible to be members of the Moon of West Lake. Once invited and the person also agrees to join, a portion of the existing members will be selected for voting. The person can only join the membership of Moon of West Lake when more than half of the members agree."

"In addition, the Purple Crystal Membership Card will have the right to bring people here. Each Purple Crystal Membership Card can bring 10 companions, but all the consumption of the companions will be recorded under the card owner. Secondly, the Purple Crystal Card is for personal use only. Others cannot use the Purple Crystal Card nor can they bring people in."

"The above will be the new reform system. In addition, there will be more benefits for everyone. Moon of West Lake is committed to serving each member faithfully. Thank you, everyone."

After reading the message, Finn nodded approvingly. With this, the entire membership system would be more perfect. Finn hadn't figured out how to upgrade the membership tier yet, but for some time, everyone would be a one-star member. The difficulty to upgrade would be challenging.

The people in the shop had also finished reading the message. After reading it, most of them had a trace of joy on their faces and started discussing with each other.

"This guy, so cunning," Sarah also received the message. After reading it, she couldn't help but mumble to Kay Lee.

“Didn’t he just give you something? Is that how you talk about him?” Kay Lee looked up from her notebook and looked at Sarah helplessly.

“Kay Lee, you’re too naive! Although I don’t know his supply situation, it’s definitely not as he said that there’s a shortage of goods. He wrote this to avoid people who want to join here as members but can’t. But now, those who want to put pressure will have to reevaluate. How big is the power of Moon of West Lake’s 567 members?” Sarah shook her head and looked at Kay Lee helplessly..

Chapter 313 - 307: Prodigal Again – Part 1

Chapter 313: Chapter 307: Prodigal Again – Part 1

As Sarah Wood put it, people are selfish. You can gauge just how effective this cloud mist tea series is by looking at the rapidly increasing daily membership here. It’s only been a few days, and the number of members has already reached 567. Each new member represents at least several billions, or even tens of billions of Flame Nation coins’ worth of wealth. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

This is just the beginning. Pretty soon, the minimum wealth requirement for joining will be set very high. Perhaps even a worth of 100 billion Flame Nation coins won’t be enough. Finn Lewis wondered if he should set a minimum asset value directly, like maybe 30 billion Federal coins? Or only those with assets worth 50 billion Federal coins should be invited?

As per Finn Lewis’ specific instructions to Olivia Thatcher, because the product is limited in quantity, it would naturally evoke a subtle approach among these wealthy folks. If there were enough for everyone, they wouldn’t mind bringing their business friends over – there’s enough to go around anyway.

This way, they can earn favors, but if such valuable goods, especially those with great health benefits, are limited! That changes everything! What if too many members join and there’s not enough for themselves? Every additional day they can use it is a blessing!

With this mindset, the Purple Crystal Card application wouldn’t be a problem at all. For those who have already applied, the card allows them to bring others along. So, any immediate family members can be admitted using the card.

In this mood, they will definitely work together to support the “Moon of West Lake”. Anyone wanting to put pressure here must first measure their ability against the collective power of these 567 members. United, they are not to be underestimated.

Once the messages are read, Finn Lewis noticed some people going over to Kay Lee to inquire about the situation. They weren’t dissatisfied – these people were already members.

After those inquiring had left, Finn Lewis returned to Kay Lee. As he approached, he saw her watching a film. He sat by her side, intrigued, and asked, “What are you watching?”

“It’s not a movie, it’s a comedic video from New World; all made by its players.” Kay Lee laughed as she explained.

“Oh?” Finn Lewis raised his eyebrows in surprise. He hadn’t noticed that it was a video made by players of New World. It seemed just like a movie. It seems that the game engine of New World had indeed revealed some of its potency.

“Is it good? Let me see.” Finn Lewis got closer, curious.

“It’s quite good, although probably not the kind guys would be into.” Kay Lee laughed as she replied.

Finn Lewis began watching the video with Kay Lee. It wasn’t long, only about forty minutes; however, for a player-made video, especially one that required in-game filming, this was a considerable length. The creation could have taken these players hours or even more, including post-production audio match-up and the like.

After watching it, Finn Lewis honestly thought the story was decent. It was a love story, somewhat heartbreaking, set in a fantasy world. Overall, it had a solid storyline and plot, not too cliched. At least Finn Lewis had enjoyed it.

After watching, he thought there was potential in these videos. Pondering further, he asked, “Are there many of these videos?”

“There are plenty. Players of Old World had already been producing videos, though they were just game footage back then. Now it’s different. If the right shots are used, it’s no different from a real-world video. However, it does test the player’s ability to control the gaming character’s facial expressions.” Kay Lee explained while laughing. While doing so, she opened the video section for Finn Lewis to see the plethora of videos.

Seeing these videos, Finn Lewis got an idea, an idea to further boost the New World game’s popularity. After considering it for a moment, he immediately dialed Yuri Johnson on his phone.

In WY, the CEO is still Yuri Johnson. Finn Lewis wasn't able to manage WY himself due to a lack of time. The call connected quickly, and Finn Lewis swiftly said, "Mr. Johnson, what do you think about holding a video competition in New World?"

"A video competition?" Yuri Johnson paused in confusion, not understanding what Finn Lewis was suggesting.

"Yeah, a video competition! I just watched some of our players' self-made videos. They may not be perfect in terms of cinematography, but they're not serious flaws either. The skills and effects in our game are very impressive and realistic- much more so than what many film companies produce!"

"Therefore, I think we should hold a video competition. The story should be at least twenty minutes long and no more than 120 minutes. There are no genre restrictions. Depending on the runtime, we can divide the competition into three categories: under 60 minutes, 60-90 minutes, and 90-120 minutes. We'll award the winners. By evaluating the narrative and aesthetics of the videos, we can pick the top three from each category. The first prize winner gets one billion!" Finn Lewis spoke quickly.

Meanwhile, Sarah Wood's mouth was agape. His ideas were coming at her fast and strong! And his prize money was ridiculous! Even a laptop for the first prize would be pretty lavish in other gaming competitions. But this guy is offering one billion!

A prodigal, if she'd ever seen one! And now he was solidifying his position as the ultimate prodigal!

"Second place gets fifty million, and third gets ten million. Those who place fourth to tenth will each receive 100k yuan." Finn Lewis added quickly.

"Wait, Director Lewis, can you explain what the purpose of this is?" Yuri Johnson was feeling dizzy. Just like that, almost five billion was allocated. Yes, the game has made a lot of money for WY, but this is simply too extravagant!

"Nothing special; just a competition. Also, there's another reward! That is, for any movie that wins first place and is longer than sixty minutes, we will assist with post-production and try to get it screened in theaters!" Finn Lewis dropped another bomb.

Screened! Yuri Johnson almost bit his tongue. A video from a game, and he's considering screening it?! "Well, anyway, just promote it like this. As for whether it gets screened, that's for us to decide. Also, during the promotion, remember to mention that, if released, they will receive part of the box office earnings! That's your responsibility now!" Finn Lewis quickly added..

As the saying goes, 'experts are hidden among the common people', that was what Finn Lewis thought after just watching this video, to be honest, it was really well made.

"Also, set up a dedicated channel to apply for some special shots. After all, there are certain restrictions on the shots within the game. Furthermore, during the video, try to use their own faces as much as possible when pinching out character faces. Otherwise, we will not handle the disputes that arise from portrait rights," Finn Lewis added after some thought.

As for the rest, Lewis didn't care. After all, it was impossible to pinch out the faces of celebrities. The system directly restricted their use. With a natural matching system in the background, Lewis wasn't worried about anyone pinching out the faces of celebrities. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"Right, I want to see the event starting by tomorrow. Anyway, let's get this announcement out first." Lewis added.

Yuri Johnson was completely at a loss. If it hadn't been for Lewis's extraordinary talent in this field, he probably would have outright opposed it. But now, opposition was futile. After all, who allowed Lewis to own more than 50% of the company's shares? Although it was less than 51% now, more than 50% was enough.

"Fine, fine, I'll go deal with it now. But Director Lewis, if you have an idea next time, can you discuss it with me first? Don't suddenly pop up with a new idea. Also, I don't think we need to spend so much money on this video contest, right?" What Yuri Johnson really wanted to complain about was not the competition, but the prize money.

When has a gaming company ever offered hundreds of millions in prize money for an event? Isn't that too extravagant?!

"Generous! Generous! Mr. Johnson, you're the future top boss in the global gaming industry! You need to be generous! Being skimpy with thousands and millions in prize money, don't you think that's cheap? Aren't we too embarrassed to even mention anything if it's not in the hundreds of millions? Besides, our activities with telecommunications alone are worth several billion federal coins. Aren't we going to seem even cheaper if you penny-pinch now?" Finn Lewis quickly replied.

Yuri Johnson was left speechless. What did this have to do with being cheap? It seemed to him that this was to satisfy Director Lewis's own prodigal appetite, right? Yuri Johnson had a better understanding of Lewis's style at this point, essentially aiming for high-end luxury without caring about the money.

"I can't win against you, but Director Lewis, do you have any other requirements? However, if you want to be premiered in cinemas, I suggest we divide it into two categories. Videos below 60 minutes should not have this privilege, and the prize money does not need to be a hundred million either. After all, the timespan of the video below 60 minutes is too short, the cost also drops, a million in prize money is plenty." Yuri Johnson couldn't repress his words any longer.

"Oh my, we're a big company! Big company needs to exhibit magnanimity, treating everyone the same! All prize money is one hundred million! We don't care about an extra hundred million. It's settled! I'm hanging up now!" After saying his piece, Finn Lewis promptly hung up the phone.

"Yuri Johnson is good at everything except being too frugal." After hanging up the phone, Lewis couldn't help but mutter. Sarah Wood nearby almost spit her tea on Finn Lewis's face, inwardly flabbergasted. She didn't know whether Yuri Johnson would spit out a mouthful of blood upon hearing Finn Lewis's words. Is this called being too frugal? You're just too prodigal!

"Ah, I know quite a few people in entertainment companies and cinema lines. How about I introduce you to them? Of course, I can help you negotiate." Sarah Wood couldn't resist joining the conversation from the side, offering with a beaming smile.

"The chairman of the Flytech Group is among the members of our Moon of West Lake." Kay Lee nonchalantly chimed in.

"Kay! Lee!" Sarah Wood turned to give Kay Lee an annoyed pinch on her cheeks.

But Kay Lee merely laughed heartily, leaving Finn Lewis somewhat surprised: "Really? Boss Wang is also here?"

Finn Lewis didn't know about this. Kay Lee nodded and smiled, "How could such a big affair be kept a secret? Besides, a place like this is famous in our circle."

It was then that Finn Lewis realized, somewhat awestruck, that he had unwittingly achieved something great yet again. Speaking of which, could this be considered the most luxurious club in the country? Whether it was now, he was unsure, but it would be soon enough.

"Hey, are you going to use me or not? Give me a straight answer." Sarah Wood cheerfully chimed in.

“When I need you, I’ll give you a call. I can’t just run to you every time I run into some random street thug, right?” Finn Lewis shook his head wryly. These people and their identities should be saved for significant matters. They shouldn’t be summoned for every little thing. That would be an underuse of their abilities.

“Alright, but make it quick.” Sarah Wood reluctantly reminded him, which made Lewis chuckle. This... were they aware that if they revealed their identities, there would be many people in this club alone who would stick to them, hoping they could provide so-called ‘help services’?

“Don’t worry, don’t worry.” Finn Lewis hastily assured her.

With the reformation of the membership system, Kay Lee would inevitably have an easier time. There was only one person in the supposed ‘qualifications review department’, and that was Olivia Thatcher. And now wasn’t the time to activate the qualification reviews. Finn was confident, even if they did not consider the most important things like cloud mist tea, the food in the Moon of West Lake alone would attract these apex tycoons.

The fact of the matter was that the things they could eat there were indeed not to be found anywhere else in the world! Purely wild single-headed abalone, could you find me one? Even if you offered one billion dollars, there’s no place to buy it. Only at Finn Lewis’s place could you find it. So, for the sake of status, this place would attract many apex tycoons. It’s just that the presence of cloud mist tea turned their occasional visit into a mad scramble.

Of course, the food here was also unquestionably delicious. Plus, Finn Lewis had just come to know one thing, that the vegetables grown with energy conditioning fluid, although they don’t have the same effect as cloud mist tea since they were formed artificially, were nonetheless excellent in terms of taste, color, and health benefits.

Especially their nutritional value, which was absolutely top-notch! Although it couldn’t improve one’s genes or help prevent diseases, it could make one’s cells full of vitality and maintain a state of high energy for a long time. In a word, it was like a stimulant that was completely beneficial to the human body..

Chapter 315 - 309: Prodigal Again – Part 3

Chapter 315: Chapter 309: Prodigal Again – Part 3

Translator: 549690339

Not to mention its excellent taste, these are things that you absolutely can't find anywhere else. Unfortunately, Finn Lewis couldn't get the ingredients for the energy mixture yet because he hadn't unlocked the material exchange option. He merely had the recipe for now.

By the afternoon, Finn Lewis hadn't returned from Moon of West Lake yet when IVY's official website released a new announcement. The moment this announcement was out, all the gamers were shocked. The videos on the official website might look professional, thanks to some rough edits and post-production, but they're all made by fans who are into this.

Now, it was astonishing to many netizens that IVY was willing to shell out so much for them. The announcement had many gamers furiously commenting on the official forum. However, to Yuri Johnson's chagrin, he was once again the subject of the discussions.

"WY is making big moves again. Honestly, I've been playing WY games from the earliest Journey West till now, for about ten years from 2002. But when has WY been so generous? Three Stone is really not doing his part!"

"The truth has been spoken by the post above! Three Stone is such a miser!

Haha, Prodigal is doing a great job! His spending habits are ingenious! However, isn't everyone almost reaching the highest level? I saw a tech God posting that by early October, some players will reach the highest level, right? Haha, would it be too humble of me to tell everyone that I'm in the top ten ranking of our server?"

"Get lost, showoff! We must destroy all braggarts! However, I do agree that Prodigal has started being a spendthrift again. Pouring such a large sum of money into a video contest, although there are a lot of restrictions, it definitely provided an outlet for players who enjoy this field. Are they aiming to have the videos screened in theaters? Seems like they're moving into the entertainment industry! "

"I heard that Prodigal is now a shareholder of T Company. Time to check out Prodigal's 'micro research', I wonder if there are any bombshell revelations."

"I'm going too, I'm going too."

The forum was blown up instantly. WY's action was really impactful, wasn't it?! However, other domestic counterparts were almost in tears. Damn it! Can we play nicely? Brother! The gaming industry is indeed more easily navigable than before, with a large number of players ranging from adults to primary school students, and the students have money now.

But brother, the pressure from competition is also huge, right?! If you operate like this, aren't you breaking the rules of the industry? Some gaming companies almost wanted to rush into I'VY Company, grab Yuri Johnson by the collar, and scream at him, what the hell is this way to play? Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Actually, Yuri Johnson had already received several calls from his counterparts, the tone of their voice dripping with sarcasm, saying, "Mr. Johnson, what you're doing is breaking the rules within the industry. A laptop worth a few thousand yuan as the prize in a contest is already satisfying to players, and now you've raised the level of reward by several tiers."

No, this isn't just a few levels up; this is a jump from low-level saint fighter to the god level saint fighter, isn't it? Damn it! Even though Yuri Johnson received such sarcastic calls from other gaming company CEOs, he was secretly pleased inside because the news was topping the headlines of major media outlets just a few minutes after his post was out!

It's undeniable that the speed of news updates in various media in this era is astonishing! Seeing the news rapidly seizing various headlines, Yuri Johnson was so elated. Though the money was being doled out painfully, the effect was still overwhelming, wasn't it?

See, these media outlets are intensely promoting you free of charge, aren't they? Even many official media couldn't sit still and started reporting the news!

So, with the feeling of agony and elation, Yuri Johnson blocked the sarcastic remarks from the game CEOs who were on the phone with this sly response: "Ah, sorry, you can't blame me for this, our Director Lewis just made a call and with one sentence, all the funds for the activity are his personal funds. What can I say, right?"

His words left many gaming company CEOs speechless, while in their silence, they could only imagine a myriad of mud-horses parading in their minds. Damn it! The rich can do whatever they want, huh?! So, having money means you can be willful?! It means you can squander it just like that?! F* *k!

But... it can't be denied that having money indeed allows for willfulness. At least these people... don't stand a chance, do they? Do you dare to spend money too? But thinking about spending millions and billions... Damn, just hearing about it made their livers tremble! Could a normal person handle this kind of spending?

When they came out from Moon of West Lake, Olivia Thatcher had already been sent over by Fishy Wells. But Fishy Wells just sent Finn Lewis a message, she did not appear personally. Clearly, Fishy Wells understood that she shouldn't be appearing by Finn Lewis's side at that time. Or rather, she should not show up.

During the ride back, Finn Lewis drove Olivia Thatcher, and Kay Lee sat in Finn Lewis's car. As for Sarah Wood, she was asked by Kay Lee to drive Leah.

“Why don’t you put the emblem back on the front of the car? It feels like something’s missing.” As they were leaving the parking lot, Kay Lee asked Finn Lewis.

“Why put it on? It’s pretty good this way.” Finn Lewis replied with a smile.

“But... but it always feels incomplete. Besides, this car is so high-end, it feels kind of wrong without the emblem.” Kay Lee thought for a while and then spoke softly.

“The emblem only exists because of you. If it’s not there, it’s fine. Besides, isn’t there one at the back? It’s good this way.” Finn Lewis replied, laughing.

Kay Lee was momentarily speechless, a faint blush appearing on her face. The sight left Finn Lewis, who was driving, momentarily dazed. Apparently feeling Finn Lewis’s gaze, Kay Lee’s blush deepened. Kay Lee, who had been drinking cloud mist tea recently, had baby-like skin. The skin was not only white but also slightly red. When her face bloomed with a blush, it was like a red fruit, inviting enough to make people want to bite into it.

“What are you looking at?!” Kay Lee’s face turned beet red as she spoke softly.

Looking at Kay Lee’s shy expression, Finn Lewis couldn’t hold himself back any longer. He immediately leaned over for a kiss. Naturally, he let go of the steering wheel. Anyway, the car had Olivia Thatcher, and it didn’t matter even if there was no one in the driver’s seat. Finn Lewis was not afraid that anything would happen..

Chapter 316 - 310: Now That’s What I Call Squandering Money

Chapter 316: Chapter 310: Now That’s What I Call Squandering Money

Translator: 549690339

Kay Lee had Leah equipped in her car. Although Leah wasn’t as advanced as Olivia, the basic functions were the same. Kay knew that the car wouldn’t go out of control. When Finn Lewis leaned in to kiss her, Kay stiffened momentarily, then quickly wrapped her arms around Finn’s neck in response.

Feeling Kay’s response, Finn’s hands began to wander. She was barely dressed due to the searing heat. Even through her clothes, Finn could feel the warmth radiating off Kay. Unlike before, when Finn was physically weak due to Zero’s seal, Finn was now full of vigor. Especially after taking the potion, his energy was incredibly high, almost overwhelming. After all, apart from being with Emma Lewis, Finn hadn't been with anyone else.

Finn reluctantly pulled his hands away from Kay, his desire, however, was written all over his face. When they finally pulled apart, the blush on Kay's face had not yet faded. Their gazes collided in the silent car, making Finn stutter, "Can I... Can I come over tonight?"

The blush on Kay's face, which had faded, quickly resurfaced, her ears turning pink. Shyly, she responded, "But... Sarah has been staying over at my place... Maybe we could figure out a way around this?"

Fuming, Finn thought 'Sarah's really the ultimate third-wheel!'

"Never mind, we'll have other chances." Finn gave up, not wanting to cause any upheaval in Kay's house, especially with Sarah's knack for overthinking things and messing up plans.

Sitting upright, Finn refocused his attention on the road. Kay, sitting in the passenger seat, stole a glance at Finn and asked nervously, "You're not angry, are you?"

Laughing, Finn turned his gaze to Kay, "Why would I? There will be plenty of time. After all, she can't stay with you forever. You're not going anywhere." Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

A blush spread across her face at his innuendos. Looking away, she tried to suppress the wave of happiness bubbling in her chest. She found herself involuntarily envisioning what he had suggested.

'Am I falling for him?' The thought crossed Kay's mind. She stole a glance at him and smiled at his profile.

Having dropped Kay at home, Finn didn't achieve his goal, with Sarah obstructing him again. He contemplated whether he should go to Emma's. That idea, however, seemed devilishly tempting.

'Damn it!' Finn remembered the task. The task with the 100 ladies he apparently accepted! That's something he could never do! And it has nothing to do with completing the task. It's purely because of his character.

Looking over his reflection he thought: In the movie Ironman, Anthony Stark has a perfect character for this type of task. Hell, he could have completed the task in less than six months. Finn decided to leave the task for later; after all, Zero didn't impose any deadline.

'To hell with the punishment for incomplete tasks when I'm about to die.'

Shaking it all off, he pulled over. He called Fishy Wells and instructed her, “Fishy, you should go to my house, in the drawer of the living room coffee table, there’s a box labelled ‘Cloud Mist Tea’. Get a box and send it to Emma

Lewis. I’ll send the address ASAP.”

Running away isn’t Finn’s way to deal with things. He’ll take one step at a time. As soon as he ended the call with Fishy, Olivia chimed in, “Sir, if you intend to carry through the trade with Kim and others, you’ll need a private jet first.”

“That’s easy to say but not easy to do. Buying a private jet isn’t like buying a car. I can’t just walk into a showroom and make a purchase. I need to place an order first, then they’ll manufacture it. It could take a year or even two years from order to delivery.” Just like what was written in Olivia’s plan, Finn frowned.

“Don’t you have the big three banks under you?” Olivia broke into laughter.

“For the record, I don’t own those banks.” Finn argued.

“Okay, but you can call them over. They have vast connections in this field. According to my information, Sky Crane and Wolfhawk have nearly 14 private jets scheduled for delivery soon. If you include those scheduled within the next six months, the number rises to 28.” Olivia said, laughing.

That left Finn stunned. He couldn’t believe there were so many rich people in the world. Over the next six months, 28 private jets would be delivered! This world indeed has lots of wealthy individuals.

“Sure, I’ll notify the banks. Besides, purchasing the private jet would also involve applying for flight paths, especially to XX region, wouldn’t it?” Finn asked.

“Yes, that’s correct. The North Federation’s aviation company has an advantage over this. They have some regulations. I suggest you contact Luca Hall about that.” Olivia suggested.

Nodding, Finn reflected on how his funds for Luca came handy for the first time.

Once he got home, Finn quickly dialed Matthew Chan, Oscar Blair, and Lawrence Rodger. To his surprise, all three were in Celeston City. He didn’t ask why, but it seemed both Rodger and Blair had changes in their positions..

Chapter 317 - 311: Now That's What I Call Squandering Money (Middle)

Chapter 317: Chapter 311: Now That's What I Call Squandering Money (Middle)

Translator: 549690339

After all, they were just managers of a branch in Darwin Harbor of Proudly Nation, which is a second-tier city. It may be the largest port city in the northwest of Proudly Nation, but it is still a small city.

After finishing their calls, Finn Lewis made another call to Luca Hall. To be honest, ever since their first meeting, Finn had been quite pleased with Luca Hall— with his professionalism in handling matters. However, Finn hadn't phoned Luca Hall in a while even though Luca had been managing the affairs in the North Federation. After all, Finn had some obligations on the Fruit side.

"Boss." Luca Hall picked up Finn's phone call, not irritated at all even though it was already past four in the morning in the North Federation.

"Mmm, Luca, I need you to come to Celeston City, hmm, at 10 a.m. Gold Star City time tomorrow. Can you manage it?" Finn came straight to the point. "Boss, you're the Almighty. I will appear in Celeston City at 10 a.m. sharp tomorrow. However, may I ask what kind of business you need me to handle? So I can prepare materials in advance." Luca Hall respectfully asked.

Finn chuckled. He had to admit that Luca was talented. Damn, who said only Chinese people knew how to butter up their bosses? Luca wasn't any worse.

"Starting tomorrow, your annual salary will be five million federal coins." Finn gave Luca Hall a raise without hesitation.

On the other side of the phone, Luca was taken aback, blushing with joy.

Although the lawyer profession is considered high-income in the North Federation, and he himself ranked among the top three law firms in the whole federation, his annual income was only around one million federal coins. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

This income was already incredibly high. You have to understand, the law industry in North Federation places heavy importance on connections. Some superior lawyers, if you are not charged with crimes like treason, could even get you off even if you fall into the hands of the CIA or FBI.

This is the impressive aspect of prominent lawyers in North Federation. However, Luca wasn't on that level yet. Usually, lawyers of that caliber deal with matters for many senators.

But now, Finn directly increased his salary by five times! An annual salary of five million federal coins! Within the legal profession, it is almost the highest income.

"Thank you, boss." Luca tried to keep his voice as calm as possible.

"Hmm, I mainly want to buy a private plane, but I haven't decided between Sky Crane or Wolfhawk. And then there's the matter of the route." Finn nodded.

"In this case, with your current financial strength, you can try approaching Reeve Silver Group or Floral Group. Other banks and financial oligarchs are also an option, they all have strong connections," Luca immediately suggested.

"Hmm, I've already made the calls." Finn nodded. After chatting with Luca, Finn thought for a while, then called Matthew Chan again, revealed the purpose of their meeting tomorrow. He told them the objective and didn't bother to chat further.

After hanging up, Finn picked up the plan that Henry Lewis had sent. Henry needed a lot more detailed planning, especially since he needed a hefty sum of funds. Truthfully, Finn didn't have that much liquid cash on hand. After rough calculations, the amount of available funds converted to federal coins from would add up to around four to five hundred million federal coins.

Then there was the 100 tons of gold that Finn had asked the Rhine Kingdom Bank and Red Bank to handle valued approximately 46 billion federal coins. Of course, if Finn was willing, either bank or both could provide loans exceeding 100 billion federal coins for Finn. Therefore, Finn had a lot of available funds.

Firstly for Henry's part, Finn needed to purchase several companies, starting with a fisheries company. It also had to have open-sea fishing capabilities which weren't a problem. Then there was the need for an open-ocean shipping company with substantial shipping capabilities.

Next up are agribusiness companies, which were not a problem, and could be established directly since Henry had already prepared the farms and ranches. To put it bluntly, Finn wanted a complete industry chain.

Henry listed every company Finn needed to purchase in the plan. Finn thought a moment, let Jim Lewis print out this list as well just in case it was needed tomorrow.

When Finn reached Moon of West Lake at 10 a.m., Matthew Chan, Lawrence

Rodger, and Oscar Blair had already arrived. Finn had already notified Hannah Lincoln and given Mathew the Purple Crystal Card. Even if Mathew probably wouldn't spend as much, Finn still gave it.

Lawrence Rodger and Oscar Blair were first-timers here, and even though it was their first time, they knew all about the dishes served in this restaurant. So when Finn walked into their private room, he was met with Lawrence's and Oscar's speechless gaze.

"Mr. Lewis, Hello. Let me introduce you, this is Mr. Michael Bolton, the president of Sky Crane in Flame Nation, and this is Mr. Gary Greer, the president of Wolfhawk in Flame Nation," Lawrence quickly introduced Finn. At his side, Matthew Chan also stood up with a smile, "Mr. Lewis, let me introduce Mr. Dim Morris, who is the general manager of Aeronautics Company in Flame Nation."

"Nice to meet you, Mr. Morris, Mr. Bolton, Mr. Greer." Finn shook hands with all three men. Michael Bolton and Gary Greer had adopted Flame National names, as part of the process of adapting to local customs. However, both men were true foreigners. Yet, being the president of their respective companies in Flame Nation meant their understanding of the Flame National language and other local customs was deep and thorough.

However, Finn was confused about why Aeronautics Company of Flame Nation was here. He knew about Aeronautics Company, a state-owned enterprise established to manufacture Flame Nation's commercial aircraft. Still, they seemed not to have any mature products on the market currently. What were they doing here?

"Boss." At this time, Luca Hall respectfully greeted Finn. There was no trace of fatigue on his face and he looked invigorated.

"You've worked hard." Finn grinned.

"It's my duty." Luca Hall smiled and nodded. Finn laughed and said, "Everyone, please sit. Today, I'm the host."

"Big spender." Matthew Chan joyously gave a thumbs up to Finn immediately..

Chapter 318 - 312: Now That's What I Call Squandering Money, Part 2

Chapter 318: Chapter 312: Now That's What I Call Squandering Money, Part 2

Finn Lewis smiled without saying a word. Soon, Hannah Lincoln had tea arranged for their guests. Regardless of whether they were Michael Bolton, Gary Greer, or even Luca Hall, Lawrence Rodger, and Oscar Blair, all of them were excellent promoters. Currently, although Finn had made a name for himself in the circle of top tycoons in Flame Nation, he had not yet done so in foreign circles of wealthy elites.

Having them promote things was a good idea. Soon, Hannah Lincoln arranged a pot of tea for each person at the table. The seated guests found this somewhat strange. Even Luca Hall, who is well aware of Flame Nation's customs, found this tea serving technique unconventional. Where else would each person get their own pot of tea? Moreover, even if they were here to drink tea, tasting a bit of the brew would be more than enough, right?

"Perhaps all of you are unaware?" Matthew Chan, who was sitting nearby, couldn't resist speaking up. Once he had drawn everyone's attention to him, Matthew Chan explained the special features of this tea.

After explaining, the faces of Lawrence Rodger and the others displayed their shock. During Matthew Chan's explanation these people couldn't help but voice their surprise, they seemed to find the matter hard to believe. However, they knew Matthew Chan was not the type to bluff. Plus, upon their arrival, they had indeed seen a lot of people below, some of whom Lawrence Rodger and his crew might not recognize, as they had just arrived in Flame Nation.

However, individuals like Michael Bolton and Gary Greer recognized many of the people since they were their clients and private jet owners. So, upon hearing Matthew Chan's remarks, and then considering the people they had seen below, Gary Greer and the others could infer why this tea was served in this manner and why Matthew Chan displayed such a demeanor.

With this new underlying concept, when they tasted it, they could truly experience the unique qualities of the tea. After drinking it, they felt as though they were rejuvenated.

"Hehe, enjoy your tea. The tea's full effect will only manifest after about ten hours or so." Finn Lewis said with a smile. Search* The website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Matthew Chan sitting next to him was surprised, biting his tongue. An effect after ten hours? Was it slow? Wasn't it already quite good? Especially for those with blood diseases, the effects of this tea could practically be described as divine. More so for conditions like high blood sugar, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and those with blood that is too viscous, this tea could bring their indicators down to a healthy level within ten hours. That's basically a miracle!

“Here’s the thing everyone, and in particular, Bank President Chan, Lawrence Rodger, Mr. Blair. Actually, I am interested in purchasing a private jet.” Finn Lewis stated his intentions directly.

Upon hearing Finn’s address, everyone in the elegantly furnished room immediately became alert, knowing that the serious talk was about to begin. Of course, they were not caught by surprise since Finn had previously informed them. However, they knew that the truly important part was yet to come.

“Mr. Lewis, what kind of private jet are you interested in?” Matthew Chan asked.

“There’s no specific model I’m after. The only requirement is that it must be capable of international flights.” Finn Lewis casually responded. His request implied that the jet should have a long flight range, hence small private jets were out of the question.

However, Michael Bolton and Gary Greer perked up at Finn’s words. Private jets capable of international flights, more specifically long-haul international flights as required by Finn, were not cheap. For instance, Bombardier Global 4000, a well-known business aircraft, has a range of approximately 6000 kilometers but wasn’t produced by Wolfhawk or Sky Crane.

In fact, when it comes to private business jets, Wolfhawk and Sky Crane are not the best sellers. Companies like Gulfstream and Beechcraft specialize in private business jets. This is not to say that Sky Crane and Wolfhawk don’t produce them, just that the jets these two companies manufacture are simply too expensive for most people. For example, Bombardier Global 4000, while its passenger capacity isn’t massive, it can take around ten people (at a tight squeeze) at any given time. However, with a range of nearly 6000 kilometers, it’s priced at approximately 28 million Federal coins.

This price is relatively low, but what’s the cost of a Wolfhawk or Sky Crane jet?

For slightly larger private jets, the price can exceed 100 million Federal coins. Moreover, once you buy an aircraft, you need to maintain it, which itself is a hefty cost.

“Mr. Lewis, one of the more famous Sky Crane jets that meets your requirements is the Sky Crane A319. It can fly cuts 6500 nautical miles, or 12000 kilometers, with 25 passengers on board, essentially satisfying the demands of any route! In terms of its price, excluding interior furnishings, it only costs approximately 40 million Federal coins. There is a business aviation LTD company in Flame Country that has already purchased three units from us.” Michael Bolton was the first to speak up.

Finn Lewis did not respond, merely smiling. Gary Greer swiftly countered, “Mr. Lewis, I think the A319 is a bit too small to meet your needs.”

“What do you mean by that?!” Before Finn Lewis could respond, Michael Bolton had already snapped back at Gary Greer.

“Mr. Lewis, I believe you deserve a larger aircraft than the A319. At Wolfhawk, we have a private jet that perfectly matches your requirements: the Wolfhawk 747-8 VIP model. This aircraft can be described as top-tier luxury. It comes equipped with a spiral staircase, arched ceilings, wall-mounted TVs, wooden flooring, and so on, and it offers 4700 square feet of cabin space. You can partition the space into several separate areas for work, dining, entertainment, and sleep.” Gary Greer quickly proposed.

Luca Hall, who was sitting nearby, was getting sweaty, thinking, my god, this guy indeed dares to speak. Sure, the jet he mentioned is luxurious and extravagant, but does he know that the Wolfhawk 747-8 VIP has a base price that hovers around 300 million Federal coins?! Plus, that’s just the price for the barebones aircraft, if extras and furnishings were to be added, that would be around an extra 20 million Federal coins.

“Of course, it’s a bit pricier. Considering internal fittings and such, the price would be roughly 300 million Federal coins for you, Mr. Lewis”. Gary Greer stated directly.

“Mr. Lewis, if you find the Sky Crane A319 too small, we also have large-scale passenger planes. What do you think of the A380?” Michael Bolton quickly added.

Luca Hall was shocked and could hardly believe this. My god, are you kidding me?! The A380?! Four-engine, over 550-seat, long-haul wide-body aircraft?! Do you want to sell that to our boss as a private jet!? My god! The maximum passenger count of the A380 can hit over 800 people! You want it as a private jet!? my god!

If Finn Lewis wasn’t still sitting there silently, Luca Hall would want to rush over and spit in his face.. Such a massive aircraft would be wasted, wouldn’t it?

Listening to Gary Greer and Michael Bolton, Dim Morris, sitting there, couldn’t help but smile bitterly. The reason he showed up here was for the domestically-produced aircraft, specifically the first large aircraft from Commercial Aircraft Corporation of China (COMAC), the C919. The C919 is aimed to be a business aircraft with a 168-seat capacity. Of course, it can be modified into a private jet.

But damn it, before he even had a chance to speak, these two idiots were already discussing far more formidable aircraft. Now, how is he supposed to top that? His plane is looking second-rate right from the get-go, it's a terrible feeling. But what else can Dim Morris do other than wait?

Moreover, Finn Lewis hasn't spoken yet, he doesn't even know how to break the silence.

"...Mr. Lewis, if the number of passengers is less than 100, the Sky Crane A380 can fly over 20,000 kilometers on a single tank! You could fly around the Earth within the equatorial range without refueling! In other words, you can take off from any airport in Flame Nation, fill up on fuel, and fly to any corner of the world without landing." As Michael Bolton reached this point in his sales pitch, he couldn't help but give Gary a triumphant look.

Gary's mouth twitched slightly. Damn it, this really was an advantage. Although the feature may not be used often, but for these wealthy people, it's always good to have the option. The Wolfhawk 747 simply could not match the A380's range of over 20,000 kilometers.

Even after being converted into a private jet, this can't be achieved. However,

Gary wasn't particularly worried because the A380 has its own disadvantages. It requires at least a 4E-class airport to land, and sometimes only certain modified 4E-class airports or more commonly a 4F-class one to accommodate it. How many 4F-class airports are there in the world?

"Mr. Dim Morris?" Once Michael Bolton finished talking, Finn Lewis looked at Dim and smiled. He had promised to give Dim a chance to pitch, being a fellow Flame Nationer.

"Ah, yes, Mr. Lewis. I'm here to promote our domestically-produced, medium-widebody airliner, the C919." Dim Morris promptly responded.

"Oh? Flame Nation has started producing its own large airliners?" Finn Lewis's eyes lit up in curiosity at this news. Sitting nearby, Bolton and Greer exchanged a glance, feeling a faint sense of unease. Although Flame Nation's products were considered subpar domestically, in heavier industries, experts like Greer and Bolton weren't so quick to judge.

In fact, Flame Nation's industry already ranks at the top of the world. This isn't a boast on behalf of Flame North Federation; one only needs to see their products spread across the globe to confirm this. Even their heavy industries are making waves, increasingly taking orders from North and Southern Federation.

The negative impression domestically is mainly due to Flame Nation's rapid economic growth. It's regulatory framework isn't as stringent as that of Northern Europe

Federation, and its crackdown on counterfeit goods isn't strong enough. Due to the lack of strict laws, counterfeit goods are easily mistaken as genuine, leading to a negative impression.

Over time, this false notion has been perpetuated and been made worse by the local's lack of confidence in their products, always assuming that foreign imports are superior. Bolton and Greer knew this very well, having lived in Flame Nation, they understood the people's perceptions.

However, that doesn't mean they would trivially believe that local research and products are inferior. Flame Nation's items have similarities with those produced by the former Soviet Union high value for money, resilient, and affordable. They knew that the C919 already has over 300 tentative orders.

Although these are preliminary orders, every new product introduction process follows roughly the same path. It starts with test flights, then finalizing the design, and eventually getting the airworthiness certification from aviation authorities worldwide before secured orders are taken.

Seeing that Finn Lewis looked interested and is a Flame Nationer, there might be a chance that he supports this domestic product. However, it wouldn't be appropriate to interrupt the conversation while Finn and Dim were still conversing.

"Yes, we are just about to finalize the design. Our first flight may not take place until 2015 due to compliance checks, but we have already started production."

Given the context of the preceding conversations, Dim Morris chose not to share more detailed data. Finn's interest is not so much in the aircraft itself but the fact that this would be the first large aircraft made in Flame Nation.

"And the price?" Finn asked curiously.

"Our pricing is quite competitive, around 50 million Federal coin." Dim Morris provided a rough estimate because no definitive pricing has been established for the C919 yet. However, this price is comparable to the old versions of Sky Crane 320 or Wolfhawk 737, albeit cheaper than the latest models.

That price caused Bolton and Greer to raise their eyebrows. This price is rather low for an aircraft with over a hundred seat capacity using new technology. Their latest Sky Crane 320 costs well over a million Federal coin. However, they quickly laughed it off. After all these years, they had become used to seeing Flame Nation's products offering high value for money, taking orders away from Federation companies on the global market.

The entry into the aircraft industry is just another milestone for Flame Nation.

Finn Lewis nodded acknowledging the information and then apologized, "Sorry, since the design isn't finalized, I don't think we can collaborate at this moment."

"No problem, I'm here to make acquaintance with Mr. Lewis. We can still collaborate in the future." Dim Morris said with a smile.

"Well gentlemen, as you see, I didn't consult with Douglas, Gulfstream, Beechcraft, or other companies specializing in private aircraft. My preference is for a private aircraft that is comfortable and has an extended range." Finn Lewis turned to Bolton and Greer as he spoke.

Upon hearing this, Bolton and Greer couldn't help but be excited. They hadn't expected Finn Lewis to be serious about buying a large aircraft! It's noteworthy that a single private aircraft could cost over 300 million Federal coin. When did such a young tycoon appear in Flame Nation?

"However, gentlemen, don't get too excited just yet. I have a requirement," Finn Lewis added with a smile.

"Please go ahead, Mr. Lewis," responded Bolton and Greer simultaneously..

Chapter 320 - 314: Coming Back?

Chapter 320: Chapter 314: Coming Back?

Translator: 549690339

"Very simple, I'd like to get the plane within 10 days at best, or at latest within 20 days. I am someone who prefers to buy things swiftly. So, whoever can provide the plane within this short amount of time, I'll buy from them." Finn Lewis said with a smile.

As soon as Finn's words came out, everyone in the room was taken aback. What? We're talking about buying an aircraft here, not cabbage! 20 days? Are you kidding me? Even getting a car in 20 days can be uncertain at times!

"That's impossible! Mr. Lewis, this is an aircraft! A large aircraft! We can't just have it ready for you to choose like something off a supermarket shelf! You need to place an order first, then we can arrange the production. Otherwise, the financial pressure would be too high. We can't just manufacture a product worth several billion Federal coins and wait for someone to buy it." Gary Greer directly and simply spoke up.

Finn just laughed and neither agreed nor disagreed. He turned directly to Lawrence Rodger and co and said: "Gentlemen, it's time to test your capabilities. I don't care about anything else, I just want to buy an aircraft right now. As for the money, that's not a problem!"

After hearing what Finn said, Gary and Michael Bolton exchanged glances.

Now they understood why they were invited to Rhine Kingdom Bank, Red Flower Bank, and other banks, instead of being contacted directly by Finn. The guy clearly didn't even plan to buy an aircraft properly! Do the two aircraft companies have stock? Of course, they do! There would definitely be airplanes nearing delivery after someone else placed an order. Finn obviously wanted to buy these aircraft, more bluntly, he wanted to cut the line and buy them fresh off production. As for how to explain to the others waiting, who cares? Anyway, the companies could always use excuses like low production rates to delay order deliveries.

Once, North Federation Express had placed an order for an A380 from Sky Crane, but due to various reasons, the delivery was delayed and the Express eventually cancelled the order. Of course, in such cases, they wouldn't have to pay any deposit or breach of contract fees.

After Lawrence and Oscar Blair exchanged glances, they directly addressed Gary and Michael Bolton: "Gentlemen, I believe there are airplanes ready for delivery in your companies. Don't play dumb, we have relevant information. You definitely have such long-range planes in stock. Is there any chance you could let us buy them? As for expenses and such, you don't need to worry."

"Exactly, no need to worry about expenses. The antiques in this restaurant alone, including these chairs we're sitting on and these teacups we're using, are worth more than 10 billion Federal coins." Oscar also chimed in without hesitation.

Both Gary and Michael Bolton looked surprised, subconsciously glancing at the teacups in their hands, "Yes, the teacups you're holding are also antiques, each worth at least twenty or thirty thousand Federal coins." Lawrence shrugged.

"Cough, cough... That's none of my business." Dim Morris, sitting at the side, choked on his saliva. Although he knew the tables and other items here were antiques when he first came in, it never occurred to him that the antiques in this room were worth 10 billion Federal coins!

What does 10 billion Federal coins mean?! That's a whopping 60 billion Flame Nation coins! The registered capital of Flame Nation's commercial flight only stands at 19 billion! Damn, that's more than three times the registered capital of Flame Nation Commercial Flight! And all this for a restaurant? Dim Morris felt like he couldn't handle it anymore! Could this world let someone have some fun?

Not only was Dim Morris left speechless, but also Gary and Michael Bolton. They had seen rich dudes in the Federation, including countless other tycoons... but a restaurant with an investment of 10 billion Federal coins? They had never seen or even heard of such a thing.

Now, if you have to include those ultra-luxurious hotels as well... Alright, forget about what they said. But you can't compare the size of those hotels to this restaurant! Is there even a comparison here?!

After exchanging glances, Gary murmured, hesitating for a moment, "Mr. Lewis, we can consider your request, but currently, there aren't many aircrafts that Wolfhawk could deliver within a month. I need to discuss this with our headquarters. Besides, if it's urgent, we might need some additional fees."

Gary finished talking, Michael Bolton seemed to have thought of something, stood up, and asked, "Mr. Lewis, may I step out to make a call?"

"Of course." Finn nodded, smiling. Then Michael Bolton immediately got up and quickly walked out. Since Olivia had said so, he was certain that these two companies must have passenger planes that met his requirements and would deliver them soon. Anyway, the purpose of Finn's purchase was just to get a private plane and then establish a flight route accordingly. In this way, it would not be so easy for others to track Finn's whereabouts.

Obviously, the plane was private. Although there was a need for border inspection, it was actually very easy to hide something, especially when Finn had a god-like storage object that people could never discover.

After hesitating for a while, Gary barely stood up and said, "I also need to make a call."

When they all left, Matthew Chan shook his head helplessly, "Sorry, Mr. Lewis, our bank may not be able to help you in this regard."

"Well, not entirely, Bank President Chan. Although I will buy the plane, I may still need your help for domestic route application. Of course, I mean you and your banks. The Red Bank, as the largest commercial bank in the country, undeniably has considerable influence domestically. Therefore, I have no doubt about Red Bank's relationship with various airlines." Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"No problem, I can help Mr. Lewis get in touch with various airlines and sign relevant entrusted management agreements." Bank President Chan instantly agreed. It's rather difficult to apply for private plane routes domestically, but with Red Bank's help, there shouldn't be too many issues.

“For foreign applications, I may need to trouble the two of you.” Finn turned to Lawrence and Oscar again.

“That’s no problem, it’s easier to apply for private plane routes abroad. Whatever requirements Mr. Lewis has, we can assist in signing relevant agreements.” Oscar answered readily.

Only then did Finn nod in satisfaction. Meanwhile, Luca Hall suddenly spoke up, “Boss, before coming here, I gathered a lot of information on various airlines in the North Federation. Many airlines offer entrusted operations for private planes. I have listed for you those that are outstanding in this field. I have already consulted them about our programs. They said they could apply for a route for you in as short as three days..”
