Chapter 411: Chapter 405: Prodigal or Making Money?

Translator: 549690339

Although the costs of maintaining servers are quite high, the net profit each month is about 2.6 billion Flame Nation coins, which is over 400 million federal coins. The annual revenue has already exceeded 4 billion federal coins. A profit like this isn't just impressive for a gaming company, many Fortune 500 companies don't see these kinds of numbers in a year, especially considering this is just the revenue from Flame Nation.

If you also consider the upcoming federal server, the yearly net income of the game may reach near 10 billion federal coins. Remember, the game does not merely charge for playtime, it also has some in-game purchases. Even though these purchases are optional, mostly for costumes, don't underestimate the spending power of current gamers.

Even regular players who can't afford the most expensive costumes can probably afford one that costs a few to a few dozen yuan monthly. If you average it out per player, this is no small amount. It's precisely because of such high revenue that Finn Lewis can afford to give back to some players. But of course, the ability to attract so many players is also because of the game's excellent quality.

Without going into too much detail, each server can accommodate almost 250,000 players. Even if the quality of the game was slightly lower, it would still attract many people. After all, the essence of gaming, when it comes down to it, involves people playing with each other. Besides, the quality of the game is not bad at all.

"Scammed? Although our videos might not be professionally produced, they are the fruits of many players. They may be rough around the edges, but you certainly can't call it scamming. Furthermore, if you don't want to watch, you can choose not to. As for you, a clown like you, I would simply reply that you're just jealous because other people have too much money, and can earn money. Ha, ha." Finn Lewis didn't pull any punches, responding directly on his micro research account.

However, Finn Lewis didn't realize that many players of his game had seen Jay Summer's rant, which made them furious. Many players immediately rallied their friends. Now, information is disseminated extremely easily. Whether through message groups, Flying Bird groups, or via Dream voice channels, it often takes just one shout to notify dozens or hundreds of people.

The massive player base of the game ensured that news of this conflict spread at an astonishing speed. In less than ten minutes, Yuri Johnson, sitting on the sofa, lifted his head with a look of surprise. He said, "Director Lewis, are you having an argument with Jay Summer?"

"Yes, what about it?" Finn Lewis didn't even lift his head, his hands were still typing.

"Why do you bother with a lunatic like him? Didn't you handle it well earlier? He's been slandering you, but if you don't respond, he can't make a case by himself. Now you've responded, he's caught onto the topic. I think he plans on taking it to the media next," Yuri Johnson said, rather helplessly.

"So what? Am I supposed to be afraid of him?" Finn Lewis scoffed coldly.

"It's not that. Engaging in a war of words with such people is beneath you. As for this kind of mad dog, it's best to ignore him," Yuri Johnson said, shaking his head in resignation.

"You're wrong. For this kind of person, he needs a slap straight in the face," Finn responded crisply. To outsiders, it might look like Finn's quarrel with Jay is unnecessary, given their unequal social standing. This is Finn bringing trouble upon himself.

To the average person, Finn, being wealthy, must also wield power and influence, while Jay is just an ordinary person. If Jay wins, people will clap; if Jay loses, aside from Finn's fans, no one will side with Finn. Most neutrals will feel that Finn is a bully. That's why even though Jay has slandered many celebrities, very few have responded.

Even the famous Mr. Steve King was targeted by Jay, but he didn't really respond, and the matter seemed to die down. To put it bluntly, there are many people like Jay, who operate by the principle 'I'm a mad dog; you're afraid when I bite you, but I dare you to bite me back!'. In the end, who will lose out if things escalate? Finn couldn't care less about this and continued his war of words with Jay on micro research.

"Finn Lewis, jealous and resentful? Haha, indeed, you are quite rich, even the richest man in the world! I'm so scared! So what? I'm not worried about food or clothing, I have a happy family, healthy kids; what do I have to be envious of you for? Mr. Lewis, Mr. Richest, I have only one thing to say, I simply can't condone capitalists like you exploiting ordinary people. As for money? While it's a good thing, and I can't say I don't love it, but I'm not so desperate that I would be jealous and resentful," Jay quickly responded on his micro research account. Having finished reading Jay's post, Finn couldn't help but curse aloud, "Damn it, this son of a bitch is so shameless! But his pose is indeed a successful portrayal of shamelessness." Moreover, many people in his comment section praised and shared his post.

Seeing that Finn didn't respond immediately on message, Jay seized the opportunity and launched another attack: "I won't say much more. Just look at how many young people your company has led into gaming. Your company's profits are high, yes, but what about these young people's futures? What about the nation's future? I sincerely pity them. What can gaming bring them in the end?"

"That's better than being like you, all talk no action. As for what gaming can bring, it's not up to you. How much money do you make from ranting on micro research for a year? I can tell you categorically, the ordinary players who make these game videos – today they're ordinary people, tomorrow they might earn a lot more than you. Wait and see," Finn responded decisively.

"Haha, you're referring to your WY operations for the production of gaming videos? Are you expecting box office explosions? Frankly, if you spend a dozen billion federal coins of your own money, you might be able to pull off a blockbuster. After all, you're rich, aren't you?" The last sentence from Jay was written in sarcasm, "You're fond of squandering money? Prove it with more squandering?"

"Forget it, Director Lewis. Don't bother with a mad dog like this. He exists just to bite," Yuri Johnson said with a bitter smile.

"Don't worry, this mad dog will definitely not be hurting anyone in the future. I'm going to find a distribution company and then operate their video on the market. I've watched their video already, it's very talented and it definitely has the potential to become a blockbuster in Floral Village." Finn Lewis said clearly.

Finn Lewis wasn't exaggerating. Yesterday evening, Finn Lewis obtained the feature-length, 100-minute game video that won the top prize in the competition from Yuri Johnson.

You have to admit, there are skilled people among the common folks. The whole story is set against the grand background of a game world, yet it doesn't feel out of place even for those who aren't familiar with this game and its background. The story is lively, the characters fully fleshed and relatable.

The highlight of the video is undoubtedly the large-scale scenes, similar to some magical films from Floral Village.

However, these videos created by the player are different. The effects of the spells are absolutely gorgeous! Particularly some of the large-scale spells, which are absolutely earth-shattering, especially after all the special effects are turned on. Most importantly, these players have captured some essentials. Although the spell effects are flashy, they do not overshadow the performances of the characters in the middle.

All it needs is some minor optimization from Olivia Thatcher, there is even no need for massive adaptations.

"Also, contact Activision Blizzard, ask them to find a distribution company in the Federation to help us get to the market." Finn Lewis said. search the * website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"Okay, I will contact them immediately. However, without passing the factory electricity review in the Flame Nation, is it really good to release in the Federation?" Yuri Johnson hesitated for a moment. He couldn't change what Finn Lewis had already decided, but he had to ask questions that needed to be asked.

"The Federation's review isn't so strict." Finn said bluntly.

The dispute with Jay Summer was just a sidetrack. Anyway, the guy attacked him first. To deal with such clowns, Finn wasn't the kind to turn a blind eye. However, since he promised to bring the video to the market, he naturally would do it.

Having been advised by Finn, Yuri went to operate immediately. The other preliminary matters had been completed already, such as the contract for copyright of the entire video, and other agreements. If it were to be screened, all the original creators of the video will share 13% of the box office earnings. This number suggests that WY earned barely any money.

You'd know that even if WY wasn't a distribution company. For instance, even the investors of many blockbuster films cannot get up to half of the box office earnings. The investors, distributors, and cinemas all share the proceeds of the whole film. Cinemas get the biggest piece, taking over 30% of the box office share, even for global blockbusters like the Avengers series.

Yuri went to find a distribution company and initially contacted the domestic distribution companies. However, to Finn's surprise, a distribution company from the North Federation found them before the domestic distribution company was confirmed.

"Nice to meet you, Mr. Roberts Damian Bryan." Finn Lewis shook hands with the well-built old man who was well over six feet tall. Calling him an old man doesn't do him justice as Bryan wasn't that old, only around sixty years old, balding slightly and most of his hair was gray.

"Hello, Mr. Lewis." Damian Bryan greeted Finn with a handshake and a smile, then said: "I heard you just produced a film that's set to be released?". Finn was taken aback by Damian's words. Although the incident had created a stir, he did not expect it to spread overseas so quickly.

The most important point was that Bryan came to the Flame Nation so quickly. Who is Roberts Damian Bryan? He is one of the oldest in Concaster's board of directors, as well as the executive and administrative CEOs. Concaster may not be known by many, but it has 24.6 million cable TV users, 14.4 million broadband users, and 5.6 million IP telephone users, making it the largest cable TV company in the North Federation.

Concaster is also the second-largest internet service provider in the North Federation. Not only has Concaster acquired NBC Television, but it has also acquired Time Warner Cable. From this, you can judge how powerful Concaster is in the North Federation. Simply put, Concaster's influence in the North Federation is almost equivalent to CCTV's Influence in the Flame Nation.

Moreover, Concaster doesn't just influence cable TV. It also owns one of the world's most famous entertainment companies, Global Studios! The largest of the eight major film giants in Floral Village! This was why Finn Lewis was so surprised when Damian Bryan wanted to see him.

"Yes, we are looking for overseas distribution channels. The North Federation, being the largest movie box office market in the world, is naturally not overlooked by us." Finn Lewis said, unsure why Bryan had taken the initiative to approach him. Bryan hadn't seen the movie that Finn had in his possession. Moreover, to most people, particularly filmmakers, this whole deal would seem like a joke, almost completely unacceptable.

Because this is a game video filmed by a game player using in-game resources! What does this have to do with making a movie? This is why Jay Summer was so confident, and why he completely dismissed this video. In his opinion, even films made by professional filmmakers don't necessarily sell well, let alone a video made by a bunch of gamers who aren't professionals? Are you joking?

Moreover, this was filmed using game resources. How do you plan on adapting this for the big screen? You can add voice overs, but what about when a character is speaking on the big screen and their mouth isn't moving? You've got to be joking!

But Bryan had taken the initiative to come, and his tone suggested that, no matter how bad the film is, Global Studios would still screen it for him!

“That’s great. I wonder if Mr. Lewis would consider Global Studios? As the largest film producer, distributor, and cinema alliance in Floral Village, I believe Mr. Lewis should be aware of Global Studios’ capabilities. And we can guarantee that if you sign a contract with us, we will premiere your film in no less than 800 cinemas!” Damian Bryan quickly said.

Chapter 413 - 407: Harvest

Chapter 413: Chapter 407: Harvest

Translator: 549690339

Finn Lewis was genuinely surprised this time. No fewer than 800 theaters! And don’t mistake this as a small number; it’s a substantial one. You need to know that many big-budget films from Floral Village; if the movie theater chains and distributors lack confidence in the film, it might only premiere in several tens of theaters. Such as in media reports, when it talks about a film being screened in over two or three thousand theaters, those are just for Floral Village blockbusters or those super-hero movies!

As for other movies, they should step aside!

Damian Bryan has given out this number even without watching the movie; he’s implying he has no request. Who would believe that! Finn took a look at Damian and then asked, “Mr. Damian Bryan, may I know what are your requirements? I don’t believe that Global Studios would offer such a high price without even watching the movie. Or, should I say, Mr. Damian Bryan, you are not the president of Global Studios, although you are a middle-aged member of the Concaster board of directors.”

“I have only one request.” Damian Bryan paused for a moment before speaking directly.

“Go on,” Finn raised his eyebrows; Damian’s attitude made him feel that this matter seemed to be somewhat out of his expectations.

“I’ve heard that Mr. Lewis owns a club called Moon of West Lake. It’s an exclusive club where only the crème de la crème can join, and it’s by invitation only. I wonder if Mr. Lewis could issue an invitation as soon as possible. I’d like to join that club.” Damian hesitated for a moment before speaking directly.

Moon of West Lake? Finn was really surprised this time. He had imagined that one day Moon of West Lake would have such a reputation, that billionaires from all over the world would consider membership as a badge of their identity. But right now, Moon of West Lake doesn't have that kind of capital. And how did Damian find out? Even though there are foreigners in Moon of West Lake, it definitely doesn't have much reputation in overseas circles.

“Mr. Bryan, where did you hear about Moon of West Lake? Even though it was established by me and is indeed somewhat influential now, Moon of West Lake's reputation can't possibly be that big, can it?” Finn asked, looking quizzically at Damian.

Damian looked at Finn in surprise. He had a reason for wanting to join the Moon of West Lake, but he didn't expect Finn would respond like this. However, Finn was the founder of the Moon of West Lake, and although it went by invitation now, who sent the invitations and who was qualified to be invited was not known to the outside world. Wouldn't all this still depend on Finn?

Though somewhat surprised, Damian still replied, “Mr. Lewis, you're being too modest. The reputation of Moon of West Lake is not as unrecognized as you say. Mr. Lewis, the circle of tycoons is only so big, and the reputation of Moon of West Lake is indeed not insignificant.”

Although Damian's words had the suspicion of flattery, they were not entirely groundless since in the circle of top tycoons in the federation, Moon of West Lake was indeed famous. You must know, not every restaurant in the world can serve single-head abalones, double-head abalones, and all other top ingredients. Such things, in any federal restaurant, would almost always be auctioned off.

As he himself said, this circle is not as big as imagined. Before coming to Flame Nation, Damian had already known about Moon of West Lake. And he also knew that the members in the Moon of West Lake club were almost all the top and wealthiest tycoons in the whole of Flame Nation. If before, Damian had just a slight inkling about it, then after Linda King, the boss of Flytech Group, invited him to have a meal in Moon of West Lake, Damian realized that the so-called single-head abalones were not the most precious thing in the club.

Neither were they the things that truly drove these tycoons crazy. What really drove them insane was the miraculous oriental tea! Damian had tried tea before, but none had such effects. He didn't know what kind of tea it was, but the most important thing was, it was effective for his daughter's illness!

Damian's daughter was only 22 years old and his only child. Damian loved her dearly, but unfortunately, she had contracted an incurable disease worldwide – AIDS. To cure his daughter, Damian was willing to pay any price. Assisting Finn Lewis's movie premiere? That's nothing!

“Can I know why Mr. Bryan wants to join Moon of West Lake?” Finn thought for a while and asked anyway.

After a pause, Damian didn’t beat around the bush, but told Finn directly about the situation he was facing. After hearing his story, Finn was slightly stunned. To be honest, he had absolutely no idea that Yunwu tea had such an effect. Although Finn wasn’t a doctor, he knew the pathogenesis of AIDS. It was also known as Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome and was caused by the HIV virus attacking the immune system cells of the human body. This destroys the body’s most important lymphocytes, leading to a weakened immune system, followed by countless diseases and eventually death.

Strictly speaking, patients infected with AIDS do not die directly from the HIV virus, but as a result of weakened immunity, other cancers, herpes zoster, tuberculosis, pneumonia, encephalitis, enteritis, and other diseases coexist, eventually leading to death.

What does Yunwu tea do? It adjusts the internal balance of the human body, modulates genes, and enhances the immunity of the body’s organs! Although it changes slowly, the onset of AIDS is very slow.

Can Yunwu tea cure AIDS? Finn didn’t know if it could, but it should be able to delay the time of death of AIDS patients. search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

“Olivia, do a calculation.” Finn took out his phone and issued a command to Olivia.

“Can you tell me about your daughter’s situation?” Finn asked curiously.

Frankly speaking, Damian was truly lucky. His visit to Flame Nation was not because of work but to cheer up his daughter. His daughter was infected with HIV about eight years ago due to a large-scale car accident, and contaminated blood was transferred to her in the hospital. They didn’t know where the problem had occurred and didn’t notice. When they did, it was already too late.

Eight years ago, his daughter was not even 14 years old, so naturally, she could not have been infected with AIDS by the usual routes of transmission.

After hearing Damian’s story, Finn was also quite moved. One could only say that Damian’s daughter Vivian was lucky. Because the Yida Group had cooperation with Global Studios, the management of Yida invited Damian here in an act of basic courtesy and knew about Damian’s daughter, Vivian’s situation. When Tyler King joined Moon of West Lake and began drinking Yunwu tea, he felt his own body rejuvenating. Upon going to the hospital for a checkup, all the data was that of a man in his thirties, even though he was actually in his fifties.

Chapter 414 - 408 What is Efficiency (Part 1)

Chapter 414: Chapter 408 What is Efficiency (Part 1)

Translator: 549690339

So, Tyler King thought of Cloud Mist Tea and straightforwardly brought Damian Bryan to experience it. On the first day of his daughter's results, it was naturally similar to the effects of every first-time drinker, even more serious because Vivian's body was filled with toxins from years of medication.

Although he was informed by Tyler King ahead of time, Damian Bryan was still frightened. However, after his wife finished bathing their daughter, she was full of energy throughout the day and even ate several more bowls of rice than usual. Subsequently, Tyler King played the good man to the end, bringing Damian Bryan and his family to dine and drink Cloud Mist Tea at the Moon of West Lake for a week.

A week later, to Damian Bryan's surprise, his daughter's mouth ulcer and some complicated infectious diseases had significantly improved! His daughter had been ill for almost a year, her body was extremely weak, and she was vulnerable to viral infections, such as the common mouth ulcers, which were almost impossible to completely cure.

Despite continuous medication, fungal infections like these typically recurred soon after a couple of days of treatment due to her low immunity. And now they had healed? This came as a surprise to Damian Bryan, who had to plead with Tyler King to continue helping. Meanwhile, he sought out Finn Lewis. Coincidentally, when he arrived here, due to Finn Lewis and Jay Summer's quarrel, the Flame Nation media was boiled over.

Of course, Damian Bryan also heard about this. A movie premiere, something like this? For him, a middle-aged member of the Concaster board and CEO, isn't it something that can be resolved with a word?

Thus, resulted in this scene. To be honest, Finn Lewis also found it quite a coincidence after hearing it. But after some thought, he naturally would not refuse such a win-win situation. So, Finn Lewis promptly said, "Of course, there's no problem, Mr. Damian Bryan. Your status naturally allows you to join the Moon of West Lake. At present, the reason why Moon of West Lake has not invited people is due to its low-profile reputation. Even if we extended an invite, the other part might not necessarily accept."

"But Mr. Damian Bryan, your situation is unique. I will let the manager of the Moon of West Lake send you the Purple Crystal Card in a while. As for other procedures, they can also be handled later." Saving a life is better than building a seven-tiered pagoda.

Before, Finn Lewis didn't know that Cloud Mist Tea had this effect. Now, even though he doesn't know whether it can actually cure, even if it doesn't cure, if it can prolong someone's life for more than ten years, isn't that a good thing?

Finn Lewis didn't mention the cooperation matter at all and simply agreed to it. Hearing this, Damian Bryan was taken aback for a moment, and then quickly said, "Thank you, thank you, Mr. Lewis."

"Mr. Damian Bryan, you don't have to thank me. As for the film release matter, you can give Global Studios a heads up. Let the distribution department and the film selection manager of Global Studios come directly. We will follow the normal procedure, I have watched the video they made, and I believe it qualifies for cinema screening," said Finn Lewis straightforwardly.

"Can. I will call them right now. They should be able to arrive tomorrow or the day after," Damian Bryan said straightforwardly. Although Finn Lewis said the normal way, Damian Bryan didn't say much, but he had already made up his mind. Even if he has to make Global Studios lose money to distribute, he has to help in this matter. Although he is not a controlling shareholder of Concaster, he is also one of the major shareholders, and he does have some influence.

Moreover, there are countless films that Global Studios loses money on each year, so they don't care about one more.

Finn Lewis didn't hesitate either. Those distribution companies in Floral Village, let alone the small companies, Finn's personality is to do the best is possible. The Big Eight distribution companies are condescending, and a video produced by gamers wants to be distributed and screened, especially in the North Federation market...even if you are the world's richest man, they will probably refuse, and they may not even agree to watch the film.

Now with Damian Bryan's words, it's much easier. At least we can have the distribution manager and purchasing manager of Global Studios come. At least we have an opportunity. Once they come, Finn Lewis believes that the video slightly optimized by Olivia Thatcher is indeed better than many special effects in Floral Village's big films. Finn Lewis has strong self-confidence in this!

As the president of Global Studios, Donna Rayne is a genuine strong woman. Donna Rayne, who has previously worked in the Global Studios distribution department, views film with an almost accurate eye, and she has confidence in her own method. But after receiving a call from the parent company, Donna Rayne looked unhappy.

Unlike domestic companies, although Global Studios is a subsidiary of Concaster, it has its own operating rights. Concaster can influence Global Studios, but it can't significantly affect it. If Donna Rayne firmly opposes it, even Damian Bryan would find it difficult to make her obey unless Donna Rayne is dismissed. But to sit in this position, it's not easy to dismiss someone just like that. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

But Donna Rayne is not an ignorant novice. Never think that foreigners are straightforward. People's emotions in the workplace are not much different from those in Flame Nation's companies. Therefore, Damian Bryan's words are essential, and she has to take them into account. Although she firmly opposed it at the beginning, are you joking? A game video wants to premiere? Is this a joke?

Okay, there are many game adaptation movies! Including those specifically shot for games! Such as Blizzard's "Monster World"! But these are adaptations and filming! It's professional, rigorous movie shooting! Not some junk that a group of players fiddled with using the inbuilt video filming function of a game! Yes, it's junk!

What can a game video do? Isn't this a joke? Despite the stunning in-game special effects of that game, can it compare with professional movie special effects? If it can, what do those special effects companies in Floral Village need to do? You might as well just throw it all away.

But to Donna Rayne's surprise, Damian Bryan's attitude was determined, and he even resorted to threats in his words, which made her have to consider this. In the end, she did not agree immediately after hanging up the phone, but Donna Rayne knew that the fact that she did not refuse at that moment was already a compromise. However, this feeling made her feel very uncomfortable!

But she had no choice. After all, she was just a professional manager. Although she held an incentive share of Global Studios, the difference between her and Damian Bryan lay here. Damian Bryan was one of the major shareholders of Concaster, while she was just a manager. Although she received the incentive shares of Global Studios, these shares did not have the right to free trading. If she didn't want them, she had to sell them back to Global Studios.

Chapter 415 - 409 What is Efficiency

Chapter 415: Chapter 409 What is Efficiency

Translator: 549690339

So, in the end, Thorne Greer decided to make a trip to Flame Nation with the current distribution department manager and two assistants. They would work out the distribution plan, and then at least identify some cinemas for showing the movie. If it performed poorly or nobody came to watch, they could just pull it from the theaters, safe in the knowledge that the other party would have little say in the matter.

Having made the decision, Thorne Greer quickly called Damian Bryan, then informed the distribution manager and those who were to go with her to Flame Nation. She booked the earliest flight available and decided to resolve the matter as quickly as possible. She didn't want it hanging over her any longer, wishing she could distance herself from the disgusting affair.

She didn't care what kind of deal Damian Bryan and Finn Lewis had made, but she was resolved to quash any grand plans for a wide release of such a terrible movie! Landing in Celeston City as night fell, Thorne Greer was taken aback when Bryan appeared at her hotel immediately after she checked in.

Upon seeing Thorne Greer, Damian Bryan bluntly stated, "If the quality of the film is good tomorrow, we won't need to discuss it – it must be screened in no fewer than 2000 cinemas! If the film quality is poor, we still need to guarantee more than 600 screenings."

"Impossible! Mr. Damian Bryan! You are committing a crime!" Thorne Greer exclaimed, "Mr. Damian Bryan, you are abusing your authority! Film quality? Can that thing even be called a movie?! It's just a video taken within a game. Even those videos made with a DV camera on platforms are ten thousand times better than it! You want to screen such garbage in 600 cinemas?!"

Thorne Greer's voice was loud, her face flushed with anger, while Bryan's face darkened. His gaze, akin to a hawk's, was firmly fixed on Thorne Greer, like a ferocious lion eyeing its prey. Not until Thorne Greer finally sat down somewhat timidly did Damian Bryan speak in measured, ominous tones. "I can let things slide today, but if you hold this attitude tomorrow, you will regret it for the rest of your life. I promise, the consequences will be more than you can bear."

The words of Damian Bryan startled Thorne Greer. She wanted to retort but, in the end, she only moved her lips, without uttering a word.

Damian Bryan was resolved and it was clear that "for him, his daughter was everything. Before, there had been no hope, but now that there was, he wouldn't tolerate anyone threatening it. If Thorne Greer opposing the movie's release, Bryan wouldn't hesitate to replace the CEO of Global Studios.

Despite her reluctance, she was taken aback by Bryan's attitude. After all, Concaster was the parent company of Global Studios, and the two often interacted. Thorne Greer thought she knew Damian Bryan very well, but at this moment, she suddenly realized that she didn't really know him at all. Regardless, she consoled herself reasoning that since she had come all this way, she would have to put up with him for now. Other issues could wait until tomorrow.

Even though she didn't voice her objections, Thorne Greer had always looked down on the film industry in Flame Nation. In her view, even though Global Studios had cooperated with Flame Nation's film companies for a long time, it was only for the sake of the Flame Nation market and to reduce investment risks. This was the strategy that big companies in Floral Village adopted in Flame Nation, rather than buying films from there.

Even now, there were not many films from Flame Nation that had been screened at Floral Village. After Damien Bryan left, Thorne Greer reluctantly conceded – the release of 600 theaters was the standard. Regardless of how things turned out, once the film was screened, if it performed poorly, it could be quickly withdrawn, and not much would be lost with 600 cinemas showing it.

The next morning, Finn Lewis received a notice from Damian Bryan telling him that representatives of Global Studios had arrived, comprising the Head of Distribution and the CEO of Global Studios. Finn was surprised by Bryan's efficiency, but upon recalling that Bryan was concerned for his daughter, Finn understood. If he were in Bryan's shoes, he would probably be even faster.

Finn had already given Bryan the Purple Crystal Card, and one had been issued to Bryan's wife too, considering that Bryan wouldn't be able to spend every day with his daughter at the Moon of West Lake.

"Welcome, Ms. Thorne Greer." Finn, unaware of what had occurred the previous night, extended his hand with a smile.

Thorne Greer also shook Finn's hand with a smile. "Mr. Lewis, while we are here, whether we can strike a deal depends on the quality of your film." Although she looked down on the film, Thorne Greer could not disrespect Finn. As she was in the capitalistic North Federation, she was acutely aware of the power of capital.

For someone like Finn Lewis, regardless of his nationality, he would have tremendous power in the North Federation if he were willing. Therefore, Thorne Greer definitely would not foolishly offend Finn. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

"Of course, I have great confidence in our film." Finn nodded and replied with a smile. Thorne Greer did not respond. The screening room was ready. Bryan arrived, along with Yuri Johnson, Finn, and several deputy directors of WY company. They all attached great importance to this matter. They had seen the award-winning video and thought highly of its quality.

If it could be released, and that too in the Federation, it would be pioneering for WY Company.

The screening room was located in WY headquarters. It was initially constructed as a welfare theater for WY employees to watch movies. Now, it served as the perfect place for a screening. As everyone took their seats, Finn instructed Jim Lewis to prepare for the screening.

Soon, the lights in the screening room dimmed. When the screen lit up, all the people in the room quietened down. Although Thorne Greer had contempt for this kind of game video, she took her work very seriously. As the screen lit up, Thorne Greer straightened up in her chair, her eyes fixed on the screen.

As the screen brightened, a large tree appeared. Seeing this, Thorne Greer was slightly taken aback. Before coming here, she knew that the whole video was made from in-game footage, and not by professional video makers, but by players themselves. She knew what to expect from game videos, and was mentally prepared for it.

Even though the rendered scenes in games can be good, they are still game graphics. But when this tree popped up, Rhea Donna had an instant thought, this is the result of game rendering? This is too unbelievable! To a layman, it's just a spectacle, but to a professional, it's a craft. As a film distributor, Rhea Donna has seen at least a few thousand films.

She has seen various types of movies, but a tree like this can only be so realistic either by directly shooting it with a camera or DV in reality. But now, this effect hardly seems like it was rendered by a game engine.

As parts of this big tree appeared on the screen, the frames started to zoom out. Quickly, a panoramic view of a huge tree appeared on the screen. Then the frames swiftly moved upwards, a panoramic view appeared on the screen. Suddenly, an earsplitting, protracted howl rang out, followed by a long divine dragon appearing in the frame.

The enormous dragon's claw appeared directly on the screen, the green scales, coupled with the sturdy and sharp claws. Just by looking at the dragon's claws, one could tell that this dragon is no doubt a representation of formidable power! As the frame ascended, this beast flew straight across the screen, its front wasn't seen, but you could tell how powerful this beast was just by looking at its silhouette.

Looking at this scene, Rhea Donna's mouth hung open in surprise. She was completely flabbergasted. Were these scenes really from a game video? Forget about game video, even the scene quality from some mainstream films can't match these! Especially the rendering of some small details! It was perplexing. Damian Bryan, who was sitting on the other side of Finn Lewis, was also in shock.

Though Damian Bryan never said it, from start to end Damian Bryan didn't have a vastly different opinion about WY company's game video from Rhea Donna's. That's because, in Damian Bryan's view, a game video is just that no matter how rich its content is. At most, you can elevate the graphics to the level of the Final Fantasy series, but even if you do that, it's still incomparable to film footage.

But at this moment, Damian Bryan realized how big an error he has committed! Final Fantasy? Forget about it! Although Final Fantasy is indeed a big-budget CG film, the video in front of him isn't on the same level.

That itself can be thrown into the trash. The storyline that followed completely confirmed Damian Bryan's thoughts. Must say, the makers of this video, perhaps due to exposure to so many films from Floral Village, have borrowed some storylines from those films for their script. But they have merely borrowed it, which is not an issue. search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

The whole storyline seemed easy to understand for people like Damian Bryan and Rhea Donna. Also, since the translation was done by Olivia Thatcher, there weren't any problems with that either.

As the scenes and plots progressed, although some transitions were a bit rigid due to the inherent limitations of in-game perspectives in the early versions, there weren't any significant issues after Olivia Thatcher made adjustments.

When the video was nearing its end, Damian Bryan and Rhea Donna had completely recovered from their initial shock. This video could no longer be just described as a game video. Moreover, if such grand scenes in the film had to be produced using VFX, even obtaining the quality that they had now would cost hundreds of millions in production costs in Federal coins!

This was because the VFX and scenes in the film were nothing like they were shot on Earth.

If they had to be shot in the conventional way, even if they did not cost as much as Avatar, the price difference wouldn't be far off. But now, was this incredibly a game video? A video made by an ordinary gamer using the game? If game videos could reach such quality, then what is the use of those VFX companies from Floral Village?

Can't blame Damian Bryan and Rhea Donna for their astonishment, because what this video depicted was truly astonishing, especially considering the fact that it was made by an ordinary gamer. This extremely low entry requirement could blow up all the film production companies in the world. More importantly, the quality of the production!

Not only was the entry requirement low, but it could also create such high-quality scenes. This could completely upturn the world view of all film producers globally! Can you imagine this situation? Every year, countless sci-fi and fantasy movies with terrible visual effects are screened in Floral Village. Even these films cost at least several millions to make.

But now, how much does it cost to make this film? Damn, the game charge is six cents per hour? Damian Bryan was not feeling good at all.

“Mr. Lewis, I remember that there should be many excellent videos in your video competition, right? Is this the first place? I wonder if I can watch the other two in the top three?” Rhea Donna quickly turned her head and asked Finn Lewis.

Damian Bryan was no longer worried about Rhea Donna’s attitude now. The reason why Rhea had issues previously was due to her prejudice against game videos, but after seeing the quality of this video, Damian Bryan believed in Rhea Donna’s professional integrity.

“Of course.” Finn Lewis nodded and spoke with a smile. He quickly directed Jim Lewis to play the second and third place videos. The second and third place videos are not very long; one is over fifty minutes, and the other is over an hour. After watching these two videos, Rhea Donna nodded and asked in surprise looking at Finn Lewis, “Mr. Lewis, are you sure that the makers of these videos are amateur gamers?”

“Of course, as we stated up front for the video contest, professionals are not allowed to participate, as it was meant to benefit regular players. By professionals, we mean those who are in the field of film and video production. However, some of the participants were video production and filmmaking students, which doesn’t violate our rules.” Finn Lewis explained with a smile.
