The Secret Heir Return To Wealth And Love Chapter 1908

Chapter 1908

The next day, Rosalynn was set to see Liam off.

She initially wanted to take Ivy along, but Ivy refused.

“I’m sure I’ll bawl my eyes out!” She pouted with her eyes welling up, “Liam’s going to study abroad. It’s a happy occasion. Me going will just turn it into a sob fest, so I better not go.”

“Where did you pick up these phrases?” Rosalynn found it both amusing and helpless.

Calvin slowly opened his eyes.

Strictly speaking, he wasn’t the one who taught her these words.

This term “sob fest” was something he once mentioned, who knew this little girl would pick it up and use it so aptly?

“Alright.” Rosalynn nodded, “Then do you have any message for me to pass to Liam?”

Ivy thought for a moment, then from her drawer, she took out a very exquisite pocket watch. The watch was small, with a beautifully crafted butterfly lying on the dial. If you looked closely, the whole butterfly was made from gem stones, incredibly gorgeous.

Most importantly, the hands of the pocket watch were working fine.

“Isn’t this your precious possession?” Rosalynn leaned against the door frame.

This pocket watch was custom made two years ago by Hilaria, based on a butterfly she drew.

Ivy loved this pocket watch dearly.

“We should give our precious things to our best friends.” Ivy said, she found a box with a butterfly motif, and carefully placed the pocket watch inside. She believed that both she and Liam would become outstanding individuals.

Time would never stand in the way of their friendship!

They would definitely have a fantastic reunion!—

At the airport, Rosalynn immediately spotted Liam, who was talking with the principal’s family.

She quickly went over.

Liam saw her not long after.

After a slight surprise, he saw Wayne slowly following behind Rosalynn.

All emotions on his face disappeared in an instant.

“Ah, it’s Mr. Silverman and Mrs. Silverman, they are also here to see you off.” The principal quickly eased the atmosphere.

Liam remained silent.

Rosalynn quickly came up to him, “Liam, I’m here to deliver Ivy’s gift.”

Liam didn’t look at Rosalynn, “No need...”

“This is her carefully selected gift.” Rosalynn took out the small box from her bag, held Liam’s hand, and put the box in his palm, “This is Ivy’s treasure, she said this treasure should be given to her best friend.”

Liam still didn’t look up, his eyes fixed on the small velvet box.

“What’s wrong?” Wayne came over and asked gently.

The next second, Liam clenched the gift in his hand, “Thank Ivy for me.”

“If you have any difficulties or need any help after you go abroad, just like here, you can always come to me, got it?” Rosalynn squatted in front of Liam, adjusting his slightly messy collar, “Liam, since you’ve chosen this path, you must stick to it, I look forward to the day your name is known far and wide.”

“I will.” Liam finally looked up at Rosalynn, “I will for sure!”

“I believe you!” Rosalynn patted his head.

The principal checked the time, “Liam, it’s about time for you to go through security. The exit procedures are quite complicated, don’t miss your light.” “Right.” Rosalynn stood up, “After you arrive, remember to let us know.”

Liam answered, his hand holding the gift box firmly.

He said goodbye to everyone one by one.

He turned and walked towards the security check, and didn’t look back until he passed through it.

The principal couldn’t help but cry, tears streaming down his face.

“Ah, what a sight you are!” The principal’s wife was speechless, “Liam is going to pursue a better future, why are you crying?”

“I’ve watched him grow up, and this goodbye might be for a long time, what’s wrong with me crying?” The principal defended.
