

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1706

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1706 He Will Not Die

Just when Sebastian was getting back into the plane, the king dragged himself with his broken arm to stop the former.

“M-Mr. Jadeson, I would like to ask you if my is ever coming back?”

Standing in front of the giant aircraft which he had not seen before, the king peered inside, hoping to find his son.

Son ?

Sebastian turned around and gave him a disdainful look.

“Is he even your son?”

The king was speechless.

“When your son was ten, you had sentenced him to death. Therefore, he doesn’t exist anymore. Roppell, he is now known as Kurt, and he was rescued by me back then,” Sebastian reminded word by word.

To the king, Sebastian’s answer felt like a slap to his face. In fact, even his neck was turning red.

In response, the contempt in Sebastian’s eyes intensified along with the frosty aura he was emanating.

“Listen up, release his mother and sister in three days’ time. Or else, I will decimate your court. Roppell, I have shown you a lot of compassion by not subjecting you to the authority of the government. If you still dare to mess around, I don’t mind razing this entire place to the ground!” Sebastian gave the king his final warning.

Razed to the ground.

Roppell’s face lost all color. In the end, he no longer dared to move a muscle.

At that moment, he experienced for himself what true power was. As king of a small tribe, he was just like an insect when compared to someone who held the reins of a nation.

At the end of it, Roppell could only watch as the jet took flight.

Two days later, in Summerbank Hospital, Vivian’s parents, her brothers, and Devin had been keeping watch outside the ward for the last forty-eight hours.

That morning, the doctor approached them to tell them the results.

“Mr. Hayes, your daughter has cleared the danger zone. All she needs to do now is to take her medication and rest.”

After hearing the news, everyone was filled with ecstasy before heaving a sigh of relief.

Vivian was finally safe.

“In that case, what about the Kurt? How is he?” Sasha asked with a concerned tone.

This time, the doctor’s expression was less optimistic.

“His condition isn’t looking good. The worm in his body has formed a parasitic relationship with all his organs after living inside him for more than ten years. Its sudden death is the equivalent of him losing part of his organs at one go. Just think about it, what are the consequences of that? Mrs. Hayes, we have already done our best.”

The doctor’s solemn answer was indicative of how grim the situation was.

He wasn’t familiar with worms. Hence, he gave his analysis to them in layman’s terms.

The doctor’s words were apt in their description. The worm within Kurt had amalgamated itself with his body. The reason he didn’t deploy the worm during his first battle with Lucy was that he knew about the huge repercussion he would suffer.

Later on, Craigor, who was aware of that weakness, used the Mother Worm against him.

The matter was a testament to how he was willing to sacrifice himself in order to save Vivian back then.

“No, you can’t do this. You have to save him!”

Unable to hold back her emotions, Sasha burst out in tears upon hearing the doctor’s words.

After all, she had watched Kurt grow up.

As for Ian and Matteo, both of them were equally devastated by the news. Turning pale, they stood there listening to the doctor with reddened eyes.

Only Sebastian and Devin were relatively calmer due to the fact that they were adults.

“Doctor, is there any other way?”

“Not at my end. Mr. Hayes, if you know someone who is a better doctor, you can give it a try.”

Finally the doctor let out a sigh before leaving.

At that moment, the corridor of the intensive care unit fell silent, for everyone felt as if their hearts were weighed down by a giant boulder.

Filled with sorrow, they couldn't bring themselves to accept the reality.

After all, Kurt was only sixteen.

In the end, Sebastian pulled Sasha back into the ward, for he could see how devastated she was as she couldn't stop crying. After closing the ward's door, he poured her a glass of water.

“Don't worry. I'll contact the best doctors overseas and get them to take a look.”

“You’re right. What about Dr. Shoki ? Isn’t he an excellent doctor ? He came to check on me when I fell terribly sick the last time. You should give him a call and get him to come.”

As if she had found a sliver of hope, Sasha insisted that Sebastian call the doctor right away.

She had resolved not to give up easily, as Kurt meant everything to her daughter.

However, after the doctors sent Kurt’s medical and surgery reports to Haruto in Jetroina, he too shook his head helplessly after looking at the scans.

Consequently, Sasha was heartbroken, while everyone else lost hope.

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1707

Chapter 1707 He Told Me He Will Come For Me

“There’s no more hope, Mr. Hayes. Can one live without a heart ?”

Haruto raised a cruel example.

Just as he spoke, Sebastian’s expression darkened drastically.

“Is it really that serious ?”

“Of course. If you look at the scans, they clearly show that his organs can’t even perform basic functions once the worm has died. That’s the equivalent of losing his heart. This case is just out of this world. I have never seen something so unnatural in my entire life,” Haruto remarked in disbelief.

At that moment, everyone’s heart sank.

This time, it felt as if there was no longer any hope left.

“What should we do? Should we tell Vivian?” Sasha finally asked with sullen expression and tears in her eyes.

Everyone was equally stumped for an answer, for they didn’t know how Vivian would react upon learning of the news.

In spite of their concerns, she still found out in the end.

On the third day after Vivian awoke, her parents had gotten Xayden to give her some medication for short-term memory loss.

Three days later, due to the fact that she had the worm inside her before, her memory gradually returned. Later on, she overheard two nurses discussing something while she was taking a walk along the corridor.

“I heard the youth in the intensive care unit will be taken off the ventilator today.”

“That’s right. Actually, he’s already dead. It’s just that his family couldn’t bring themselves to do it.”

“Mmm-hmm. I heard about that too. It’s such a shame, especially for someone as good-looking as him.”

Both of them were gossiping while tidying up one of the wards.

When Vivian heard what they said, she stopped at the door at once.

A youth? One that's extremely handsome?

At that moment her eyes sparkled with intrigue. After all, the doctor had reminded her to be more active so that she could recover faster.

Hence, she headed toward the intensive care unit for a walk.

When she arrived, she saw the doctors and nurses entering the ward wearing cleanroom suits. Even though they had their masks on, she could still see the sense of pity on their faces.

Who is he to elicit such an emotional response from the doctors and nurses?

She gradually walked up to the intensive care unit and peered through the glass window.

Just as expected, there was a patient on the bed inside who was connected to tons of tubes.

Nevertheless, the ECG machine stationed beside him was still showing a pulse.

At that moment, Vivian felt a sudden squeeze in her heart when she saw the doctor who was about to disconnect the ventilator from the youth.

After looking at the sixteen-year-old youth's face, she turned her attention to his tightly closed eyes.

He's really handsome!

That was the first thought that came to mind.

Nevertheless, the thought was maintained for a fleeting moment as she subsequently saw the doctor remove the respirator from him, revealing his exquisite features.

At that moment, she felt a buzz in her head.

Standing there, her mind was suddenly filled with a blinding light before a voice began to ring out in it.

“Vivi, I'll take you home.”

“Vivi, don't cry. I'm here to save you.”

“Vivi, you have to remember that your dad sent me to your side to protect you. I'm not your sibling in any way!”

The tone of the final sentence sounded especially sharp.

After staggering backward, Vivian widened her eyes and stared inside. In a few short seconds, she felt as if her mind was in turmoil.

Vivi.

Kurt.

Vivi.

Kurt.

“No, don’t touch him! Don’t you dare touch my Kurt!” Having finally regained her memories, she lunged forward like a raving mad girl and began to bang on the glass furiously.

“No! Let go of him! Don’t remove his respirator!”

Her screaming voice was so sharp that the entire floor, including the intensive care unit, could hear her.

Hence, the nurse inside came over to open the door.

Nonetheless, she couldn’t have expected the girl in a hospital gown to dash madly in.

Looking at Kurt, Vivian put the respirator back on him without a moment’s hesitation.

When the doctors and nurses saw the terrifying look on her face, they looked at each other in confusion.

By the time Sebastian and Sasha arrived, Vivian was shielding Kurt’s bed in the intensive care unit as if she was possessed.

“Vivi...”

When Sasha saw Vivian’s reaction, she felt as if her heart was pierced by a knife.

In the ward, Vivian was threatening the doctors and nurses not to come near with a needle. The moment she saw Sasha, she finally bawled.

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1708

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1708
Entrusting To Sebastian

“Mommy, he isn’t dead. I beg of you, don’t let them take his respirator off. No, Daddy. No...” she pleaded with her parents with tears gushing out of her eyes.

Her entire body was shivering at the same time. When Sebastian and Sasha saw the desperation in Vivian, both of them were so heartbroken that they didn’t dare to do anything.

Consequently, the respirator was put back onto Kurt.

As for the doctors and nurses, none of them dared to enter the intensive care unit at all.

Meanwhile, Sasha accompanied her daughter in the ward for a long time until the latter had finally stopped crying. After that, she simply sat there and stared listlessly at Kurt, just like a puppet.

Sasha began to comfort her, “Vivi, you—”

“Mommy, I know what you want to say, but he won’t die, and neither will he leave me.”

Sasha remained silent.

“He told me that he would take me home and asked me to wait for him. He also said that we must go there and return together. Mommy, can you give him some time? He will definitely come back to us.”

This is just like when she was six.

When Sasha had just started speaking, Vivian talked over her quickly. Despite Vivian's sound presence of mind, Sasha felt as if a knife was stabbed in her old wounds upon hearing her daughter's tone.

The reason was that she was reminded of what happened to Calvin.

Back then, he had died in front of Vivian, and she was only six that year.

Sasha could still remember Vivian crying in a piercing voice when she saw Calvin die. Come to think of it, if she could communicate better back then, she would probably be begging us just like how she's pleading for more time on Kurt's behalf right now. However, will he come back just because we have granted him more time?

Sasha cried her eyes out again.

While the mother and daughter were overwhelmed by sorrow, someone suddenly entered the ward to see Sebastian.

“Mr. Hayes, Kurt's mother and sister are here and would like to see him.”

“What did you say?” Sebastian raised his gaze.

Ten minutes later, Sebastian, who was waiting outside the intensive care unit, saw a middle-aged lady with gray hair. She was dressed in Elysium traditional clothing and had a young girl in tow.

The lady was very thin and looked extremely haggard.

Even then, one could see from her features that she used to be a stunning beauty in her younger days.

Once both of them came up to Sebastian, Nina recognized him.

After blinking her eyes, which resembled Kurt's, Nina meekly introduced Sebastian to her mom, "Mom, this is the man who saved Kaiden."

The moment her mother heard it, she dropped to her knees in front of Sebastian.

"Madam, there's no need for such courtesy." Sebastian quickly helped her up.

Given how much she had suffered, she insisted on kneeling. Subsequently, she bowed to Sebastian in front of everyone.

"Mr. Hayes, I, Ruby Calyette, can never repay the debt of gratitude I owe you for saving my son. I hope that I can somehow make it up to you in my next lifetime."

"Madam, don't say that. Saving your son was a coincidence. It just wasn't his time yet. Hence, there's no need to make too much of it."

Sebastian helped her up again.

This time, Ruby didn't refuse.

After that, Sebastian turned to the intensive care unit with a darkened expression. “Do you want to go in? He’s right inside.”

From Sebastian’s grave tone, one could easily surmise what the situation inside was.

Unexpectedly, Ruby wasn’t as sad as Sebastian even though it was her son that was lying inside. In fact, her expression was a sea of calm.

“All right, Mr. Hayes. There’s something I would like to ask of you. Will you promise me to do it?”

“Go on.”

Sebastian was surprised but agreed anyway.

With that, he saw the feeble-looking Ruby push Nina forward.

Raising her head, Ruby gave Sebastian a teary-eyed look and requested, “Can you please tell her brother to take care of his sister when he awakes? Wherever he goes, he has to bring her along and not leave her anywhere, all right?”

Sebastian was stunned.

Despite how smart he was and how much he had been through, he didn’t understand the meaning behind her words.

After Ruby entered, Vivian and Sasha came out shortly.

Subsequently, they watched her through the intensive care unit’s window.

After Ruby said something to her son teary-eyed, she suddenly stabbed something into her own chest. The next instant, everyone saw blood spurt out of her body, followed by her pulling something out that was dripping with blood.

“What is she doing? Open the door!”

“Open the door at once!”

In response, Sebastian and Sasha screamed from outside the ward.

At that moment, Nina suddenly wailed, “Don’t open the door, Mom is giving her own nest to my brother!”

Nest?

What nest?

Everyone was bewildered.

In the meantime, Ruby placed the thing she was holding in her hand into her son’s chest.

A nest was actually the worm’s habitat when it was raised inside a human body.

Since Kurt’s worm was given by his mom, she was its nest. Therefore, the only way to revive the worm within Kurt’s body was to incubate the worm eggs left behind by the King Worm within the nest.

Once the worm hatched from its egg, Kurt would naturally be saved.

The gruesome scene that Sebastian witnessed would go on to haunt him for many years ahead.

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1709

Returning from the Dead His Secret Lover Chapter 1709 A Silver Lining

In the end, the intensive care unit fell silent by the time the doctor arrived.

Ruby was lying motionless on top of her son, just like a caring mother who fell asleep from exhaustion.

Unfortunately, everyone knew that wasn't the case.

After being shocked by what had unfolded, the doctor examined the noble Ruby and shook his head in tears. "Mr. Hayes, I'm sorry. She no longer has a pulse."

"Mom..."

Nina's wail echoed throughout the corridor, moving everyone present to tears. Meanwhile, Sasha knelt down and hugged her tightly.

"Be a good girl, and don't cry now. Let's stop crying."

No one could bear to watch the noble yet heartbreaking scene.

Nonetheless, the conclusion was for the best, for no mother in the world could stand idly by and watch their children die. Such was her fate.

As a result, one could understand why she took such drastic actions.

However, it was still a shame that Kurt couldn't see his mom one last time before her death. After all, he had gone through so much hardship to save her to only have her sacrifice her life to save him. Therefore, he would be utterly devastated upon learning of what happened when he woke up.

After that, Vivian kept vigil in his ward for over three days. She was worried that he wouldn't be able to accept the truth.

However, Kurt was still in a coma three days later.

Nevertheless, his condition improved, and he could now breathe independently.

After finishing the examination, the attending physician looked at Sebastian in amazement. "Mr. Hayes, this is the most unbelievable event I have seen in my entire career. As of now, all his broken organs are attaching themselves back together. But, it's still a painstaking process."

Unable to explain it in medical terms, the doctor could only describe it crudely by using the words "broken" and "attaching," for that was the phenomenon that was occurring inside Kurt.

The King Worm's death had resulted in all of his organs being destroyed. Hence, they lost their basic ability to function.

Surprisingly, after Ruby inserted a piece of flesh that contained the bacteria that could incubate worms into him, a strange organism began to amalgamate itself with his organs.

Within three days, his supposedly dead organs became active again.

“Hmm. There's no need to be surprised, as there are many unexplained phenomena in this world. It's just a matter of humans not bothered to find out more.”

Sebastian plainly advised.

The doctor nodded, “You're right. Even the medical field is still in development. Or else, we wouldn't have so many incurable diseases still.”

“Mmm-hmm.”

“Anyway, you can rest easy now, Mr. Hayes. Even though he isn't awake yet, it's just a matter of time before he does. By the time his body has repaired itself, he will naturally wake up.”

The doctor let out another long sigh after he finished.

This is way too strange.

With that, Kurt's condition stabilized.

That afternoon, Devin finally returned with the twins after tying up loose ends in Elysium.

“How is it?”

“Everything has been resolved. A total of four to five thousand people died. Half were the remnants of Eddie’s men, while the rest belonged to the tribe.

Devin handed over a name list with a grim expression.

That was the consequence of a disaster caused by a madman. In the end, thousands of innocents from the Elysium tribe lost their lives.

To a tribe that had less than twenty thousand members, it was considered a devastating blow.

Sebastian stared at the list with a sullen expression.

“Haven you found any leads from Lucy’s body?”

“I have, Daddy. It’s as you have predicted. After dissecting her brain, we found a chip. My analysis confirms that it’s the exact same chip implanted in Duncan’s brain.”

Ian walked over and took out a sealed bag that contained the chip. The moment he mentioned Duncan, his tone was tinged with anger.

So, it appears that Lucy is nothing but a puppet. From the very beginning, there has always been reason to suspect her. Even though she was only about Kurt’s age, she had the ability to wield significant influence and control many people in the tribe. That was certainly a red flag. Furthermore, this plan wasn't put in motion in just a year and a half. From the men in the forest to those in the tribe, it would have taken decades to do it. Consequently, there's no way a clueless sixteen-year-old girl is capable of something of this scale.

That was the reason why Sebastian suspected Lucy was a puppet from the start.

In the end, the results vindicated his speculation.

Meanwhile, Sebastian stared at the chip with an increasingly murderous aura.