

Shota 71

Chapter 71 Last Boss (3)

Cecilia couldn't believe what she saw, but then she was pulled out of her daze by a voice.

"Grab my hand!"

This was a voice that she recognized which made her even more surprised, but she listened to this voice and reached her hand out.

There was a small hand that grabbed her hand and pulled her up onto a horse that ran right past the mass of flames that was in front of her.

Cecilia couldn't help looking at the person riding on the horse with a shocked look as she said, "Why are you here?"

The one on the horse who had grabbed her hand and saved her was none other than Zwein.

But that shouldn't be since Zwein should be safe in town.

As they were riding past the mass of flames, before I could even answer her question, there was a large hand that grabbed out at us. Even though it had been hit with a mass of flames, the Goblin General didn't seem that burnt.

It grabbed out at us even though it couldn't see us, it was just grabbing at the sound of the horse passing by it.

But its ears were sharp enough that it was able to accurately find where we were.

I tried pulling on the reins of the horse to make it go to the side, but it was already too late as the Goblin General's hand was coming towards us. This horse wasn't anywhere on the same level as Cecilia's horse, so it didn't have the same agility and ability to dodge.

It was impossible for us to dodge this slap from the Goblin General.

Before the Goblin General's hand could slap us down into a meat pancake, there was another whistling sound that cut through the air.

This whistle was then followed by a ball of flames that slammed into the Goblin General's hand, knocking it back.

Seeing this, I didn't hesitate at all to whip the reins of the horse and dash forward, moving away from the Goblin General.

Only when we were far away did I turn back to look at the mass of flames that was the Goblin General.

I also heard the sound of hooves coming over and turned to see the priest on a horse riding over.

The priest had been the one that had shot the two fireballs in the first place that had distracted the Goblin General long enough for me to save Cecilia. If it wasn't for the priest coming out with me and putting his life in danger as well, we never would have made it this far.

Seeing that I had Cecilia with me, the priest looked at me with an appreciative look before saying, "As expected of the one chosen by the gods themselves. You truly are a hero among heroes."

Ever since he had found out about the Mark of God that I had received, he had been strangely friendly with me. It reached the point where I couldn't help being creeped out by how friendly he was...

But still, there was no denying that he had been the one that had saved us.

After stalling for a second, I shouted, "Let's go! We'll head back to the town and regroup!"

The priest shook his head when he heard this and he turned to look at the mass of flames in front of us.

I turned to follow his gaze and as I looked over, I saw the flames suddenly being shot out in every direction. It was like an explosion of flames, but instead of creating more flames, it just dissipated the flames that were already there.

Once the flames had been scattered, the form of the Goblin General was revealed.

It was standing there as if nothing had happened.

There wasn't even a single burn on its hide even though it had been covered in flames just a second ago.

As soon as we saw this, I couldn't help knitting my brows.

I had thought that the flames would distract the Goblin General long enough that we would be able to escape, but it didn't seem like it had an effect on the Goblin General.

For us to escape, we needed to get past the Goblin General or face the wave of monsters with the Goblin General behind us.

I had thought that it would be possible to run through the wave with the priest providing cover, but now...it seemed very unlikely.

In the end, Cecilia was the one who spoke first, "Leave me here. I'll cover you two while you run back into the..."

Before she could finish, I hit her on the top of her head with my fist.

Cecilia looked at me in a daze as if she couldn't process what happened.

During this, I said, "Don't be a fool. If anyone's staying behind, it's me."

Cecilia then quickly said, "No, I'm the head knight! It's my job to protect everyone!"

The two of us started arguing even though we were in this dangerous situation.

The priest looked at us with a smile, letting us argue for a bit. But in the end, he cut us off when he saw that the Goblin General was about to move.

The priest said one simple word, "Stop."

Both of us were taken aback by the firm tone in his face.

He looked at the two of us with a gentle smile before saying, "It's this old man's job to pave the way for you young people. The two of you should run while you still can."

Before either of us could say a thing, the priest charged forth with two balls of flames in his hands.

He didn't even give us a choice in this matter as he took the role of being bait for the Goblin General.

I couldn't help biting my lip when I saw this.

There was still something else that I could have done, but at this moment, I was still hesitating. By hesitating like this, I had put everyone in danger...

Cecilia was about to jump off the horse to go help the priest, but I grabbed her arm and said, "Wait."

Cecilia looked at me with an anxious look and was about to say something, but I said first, "Let me give you something first and then you can go help him."

Chapter 72 Last Boss (4)

Cecilia was taken aback when she heard this, but she gave a nod in response to this.

She knew that when I said something like this, I would always take out something strange. But at the same time, the strange thing that I took out would also be very powerful.

Just like the "strange armour" that I gave her.

This time, I didn't hesitate as I put my hand behind me and pulled out the thing that I was going to give her.

As it came out, Cecilia couldn't help being surprised by the thing that I pulled out.

After all, it was just too big to miss normally.

She couldn't help being surprised and confused about where I had been keeping it the whole time.

This was a thing that looked like a sword, but there was also a strange bend to it that was out of place. It was a bend right in the middle of this thing that seemed like a sword. At the same time, she found that the overall colour of this thing was very strange, being purple in colour compared to the normal silver of a sword.

Then to top it all off, she could see that this thing wasn't made of metal, but this strange material that seemed like it was very smooth and sleek. This was a kind of material that she had never seen before.

After looking at this thing with a strange look for a bit, Cecilia couldn't help asking in a strange voice, "What is this thing?"

I couldn't help revealing a strange look when she asked me this because I really didn't know how to explain this. After all, how were you to explain something like this to someone...?

So I just gave a cough and said, "It's a weapon for you."

Cecilia looked at this thing with a very strange look. She didn't reach her hand out to take it as she just sat there on the horse with that same strange look.

But then there was an explosion that pulled them out of this strange atmosphere.

Looking over, they saw that the priest had thrown another fireball at the approaching Goblin General.

However, this fireball didn't have any effect on the Goblin General as it emerged from the flames created by the explosion.

Seeing this, the priest immediately created two more fireballs that he threw at the Goblin General.

At the same time, Cecilia no longer hesitated as she grabbed the weapon out of my hand. As she held it, she couldn't help moving it around a few times, as if she was getting used to the weapon.

As she swung it though, she couldn't help revealing a strange look.

That was because the feeling of this weapon was just too strange for her to get used to quickly. It functioned like a sword, but the weight of it was off because of how much the tip of it flopped around as she swung it.

Instead of calling it a sword, it was better to call it a flail with how much it swung around.

Still, Cecilia was the head knight, the strongest knight in this barony with plenty of combat experience. She was able to get used to using this strange sword after a few swings.

The one other thing that she had to complain about was the hilt of this sword.

This sword had a very strange hilt where there was only a hilt on one side. This hilt was very large and very round, almost throwing off her balance with how one sided it was.

At the same time, she couldn't help thinking of a certain thing when she saw this sword's hilt.

The shape of the sword and the hilt that was on it reminded her of something familiar....

She couldn't help turning to look at Zwein...particularly, she looked at his lower half.

Seeing her look at me like this with that strange look, I couldn't help asking, "What's wrong? Why are you looking at me like this?"

Being called out like this made Cecilia suddenly jump and she couldn't help revealing a blush which made me feel even more strange.

But in the end, she gave a cough to calm down before saying, "Nothing, it's nothing."

Cecilia turned her attention back to the priest who was fighting the Goblin General and then she jumped off the horse.

When she jumped off, I quickly called to her, "Where are you going? Why are you leaving the horse behind?"

Cecilia turned back to say, "Take the horse and get out of here."

Without even giving me a chance to say anything, Cecilia ran forward to face the Goblin General.

I wanted to say something, but I just closed my mouth and swallowed those words.

I knew that anything I said now would just affect her when she had to fight the Goblin General. In this situation, it was better to just silently watch over her since I had already done everything that I could.

I had to believe that the giant dildo bat that I gave her would work...

Cecilia dashed forward, running up to where the priest was before running right past the priest, charging at the Goblin General.

The priest had been in the middle of firing his spells and he was caught off guard when he saw Cecilia running past him. This caused one of his spells to stall, which gave the Goblin General space to move forward.

Seeing this, Cecilia didn't slow down and ran even faster at the Goblin General.

The priest knitted his brows for a second, before gathering two more fireballs in his hands. But this time, he didn't shoot those fireballs out right away and carefully watched the Goblin General.

When the Goblin General was close to Cecilia, that was when he threw out these fireballs.

They traveled through the air and came right up in front of the Goblin General before exploding.

This time though, the flames had been greatly weakened so that they only provided cover for Cecilia.

When the flames disappeared, Cecilia was already swinging down with the giant dildo bat in her hand.

The Goblin General raised its hand to grab it when it saw this.

Chapter 73 Last Boss (5)

With the experience of fighting Cecilia before, the Goblin General didn't think that Cecilia would be able to do anything to it even if she had a new weapon.

That was its first and final mistake.

As the giant dildo bat swung down at the hand, the floppy part at the very front of it suddenly started to glow before it swung down onto the Goblin General's hand.

As soon as it made contact, there was no hesitation at all as it...smashed the Goblin General's hand.

It cracked immediately under the pressure of the giant dildo bat and deformed under the weight of the blow. The arm only had form for a single second before it was crushed to bits by the hit of the dildo bat.

The arm itself crumpled before bits of blood and flesh started coming out from under the skin. It kept collapsing until even shattered bone came out from under the skin, splattering all over the place.

The Goblin General knew that it would be dangerous for it to continue pushing forward, so it gave up the idea of grabbing the dildo bat.

Instead, it jumped back without any hesitation, choosing to sacrifice just the arm.

When it landed, it slumped down on one knee while using the other hand to grab the stump that was left of the arm that had been shattered to pieces.

After the Goblin General jumped back, the dildo bat continued falling down until it reached the ground. Once it slammed into the ground, there wasn't a large impact as one thought, but rather a dull sound that rang out.

There wasn't a large hole that was created, there was just a single small dent around where the dildo bat had landed.

Cecilia couldn't help looking down at the dildo bat in her hand in shock because she could see the bits of blood, flesh, and bone that had scattered around her. There was even a bit of it that had landed on her face when she smashed the Goblin General's arm.

She didn't know what happened, but she could guess what had caused it.

So her gaze couldn't help turning strange as she looked at the dildo bat.

But then her attention was pulled back to the Goblin General when she heard a noise from in front of her.

The Goblin General had stood up again, even though it had a winced look of pain on its face and it was still holding its arm. It looked at Cecilia like it still hadn't given up and was planning on fighting.

Cecilia immediately focused herself as she watched the Goblin General for its next move.

She didn't know what the Goblin General could still do with one arm destroyed like that, but she didn't dare look down on it. After all, this was a powerful monster that could destroy the entire town if it wanted to.

She wouldn't give it a single inch.

The Goblin General stared at Cecilia for a bit before...suddenly turning to run.

It held its arm and ran with all of its might, without a single care about the pride that it had felt before.

Since they had changed positions when they had clashed previously, what was behind the Goblin General now was the wave of monsters that were left. There were over two hundred monsters that were still there that had been throwing stones at the walls the entire time, but that had stopped when they saw the Goblin General's hand being blown off.

Seeing the Goblin General running towards them, the monsters didn't know what to do.

That was until the Goblin General suddenly gave a roar.

The monsters were taken aback, but then they went into action.

They had divided into two different groups, one that was still throwing the rocks and one that was now charging out to cover the Goblin General.

Cecilia had been caught off guard by the Goblin General's sudden retreat, but she quickly reacted and chased after the Goblin General.

She knew that she couldn't let this powerful monster escape, or else it would mean leaving a hidden danger in the wild for them.

So she immediately charged out after the monsters.

But with the rocks coming at her and the monsters that came out to block her way, there was a distance that was slowly being created between her and the Goblin General.

As the rocks came flying towards her, Cecilia swung the dildo bat and crushed them all to pieces.

The strange thing that happened was that the rocks shattered in a very strange way. When the dildo bat hit the rocks, it seemed to cut right through before the rocks shattered to pieces.

There was even one time where she stabbed at a rock and the dildo bat pierced right through, creating a perfect hole before shattering the rock to pieces.

But she didn't have time to think about that as there were also monsters that were coming at her.

It was just too bad for the monsters that not a single one of them were able to block a single blow from her. In fact, her attacks were now so powerful that the monsters were getting blown back with every slash from her.

So they couldn't stall her at all as she made her way through.

Still, the rocks flying at her created a large problem.

That is until there was a barrier that suddenly appeared around her.

She turned back to see that the priest had his hands up and there was a al glow around them. Seeing this, she immediately knew that he was the one that cast this barrier around her.

Cecilia gave him a nod of appreciation before charging forward again.

As she ran, the barrier blocked all of the rocks flying at her.

But the problem was that the Goblin General ran faster than she did. Even when it was injured, the Goblin General was still faster than her, which created distance between them.

That is until Cecilia suddenly heard a voice once more saying, "Grab on!"

Chapter 74 Last Boss (6)

Cecilia immediately recognized the voice because it was her second time hearing this voice say this.

When she turned around, she saw that I was pushing my horse towards her.

As soon as the monsters saw my horse running over, they didn't hesitate to come and attack me.

However, I had both the priest and Cecilia covering me.

The priest shot fireballs that blasted down the monsters that were close to me while Cecilia cut her way over to me. With the two of them working together like this, it took her no time to reach where I am.

Cecilia didn't waste any time in grabbing my hand and jumping onto the back of the horse.

Once she was on, she knitted her brows and scolded in an angry voice, "What are you doing here? Didn't I tell you to go back to town? What if you get hurt?"

I just calmly said, "Is there any use in me going back if we lose? I'm here because I want to help."

Hearing the calm and firm way that I said this, Cecilia couldn't help being taken aback.

She looked at my back with a strange look before saying with a nod, "Keep it steady, I'll clear them out of the way."

I nodded in agreement to this without saying anything.

As for why I was here, I had been watching the fight the entire time.

While I knew that I would just be a distraction if I went in with Cecilia when she charged the Goblin General, I knew that I couldn't just do nothing. So I had been watching the entire time, waiting for my chance to strike.

When I saw that Goblin General turning to run away, I knew that it was my time.

That was because I had a horse with me.

Cecilia wouldn't be able to catch up to the Goblin General if she just chased it on foot, so I knew that I had to pick her up and catch it with the horse.

Of course, this was dangerous, but it was worth taking this risk if it meant ending the Goblin General once and for all. After all, it would be too dangerous if we allowed it to escape.

The Goblin General had been watching Cecilia even though it was running away.

It had learned from its mistake last time and didn't underestimate Cecilia.

So the moment that it saw that she had gotten on a horse, it immediately gave out another roar.

As soon as the monsters heard this roar, they immediately changed their attack pattern.

The monsters that had been throwing rocks at the wall still stopped and turned their attention to Cecilia. They worked with the monsters that had already been throwing rocks at Cecilia to bombard her with even more rocks.

Cecilia did what she could to knock all of the rocks down, but some of the smaller rocks started making through her swings. There were just too many rocks for her to block everything that was thrown at them.

As more and more rocks were thrown, they were slowly pushed back by the wave of rocks and the wave of monsters that were swarming them.

After all, they were two humans and one horse among hundreds of monsters.

Seeing all of this and seeing the injuries that I had suffered, Cecilia bit her lip.

She was about to open her mouth to say something, but before she could, there was another roar coming from behind us. This time, it wasn't the roar of the Goblin General.

This time, it was the roar of the priest.

Everyone couldn't help being caught off guard by this gentle looking priest who suddenly roared out like a madman.

Even the veins on his forehead bulged out when he roared out like this.

But those with sharp eyes could see the flow of mana that was swirling around him. As the priest roared out, his mana and the mana around him gathered in his body, forming a spell.

It was clear that the priest was pushing his limits with how much mana was being gathered, but he didn't back down.

After the mana had been gathered there were bright balls of light that formed in the air. These balls of light just floated there above him, not looking like anything special.

However, I immediately recognized what these were.

With how many hours I had put into this game, it would be a travesty if I couldn't see this.

All of those balls of light that had gathered were individual arrow spells.

While the arrow spell was only a low grade spell that most ians could use, it was not easy to gather this many arrows at once.

The number of balls of light around the priest numbered in the hundreds while most normal ians would only be able to cast in the tens.

This was a testament of just how powerful and skilled the priest was. But at the same time, it was also a sign that he was planning on using all of his mana for one final attack.

As for the goal of the attack...

The priest suddenly shouted, "Run!"

Both me and Cecilia were caught off guard by this at first, but then we realized what he was planning on doing.

So with a nod to each other, I pushed the horse forward while Cecilia made one big sweep to clear out all the rocks in front of us.

Then her sword came down when more rocks came at us.

However, those rocks never hit us as they were all shattered by the missiles shot by the priest.

These missiles didn't just stop at these rocks and flew right past us to hit all of the monsters in front of us.

They weren't strong enough to kill all of them, just the low class monsters. The middle class monsters were still at least knocked back and pushed out of the way by these missiles.

As he had ordered, I pushed the horse forward, getting closer and closer towards the Goblin General.

The Goblin General had also seen all of this and wanted to run even faster, but there were also a few missiles that were also aimed at it.

For this Goblin General, it wasn't as if it would be hurt by these missiles. However, the force behind them would still stagger it a bit, especially since the priest had added a bit more to the ones he shot at the Goblin General.

I made sure to follow the missile aimed at the Goblin General as closely as possible so we would be there when it hit, but I was still a bit behind since it was just too fast.

But that didn't matter since Cecilia still received the opening that she needed.

She stood up on the back of the horse and gripped the dildo bat in both hands.

When I saw this out of the corner of my eyes, I couldn't help revealing a strange look since this was a strange sight for someone like me who knew what the dildo bat was...

But still, I made sure that the horse ran steadily so that Cecilia had the foothold to jump from.

When we got close, she suddenly jumped up into the air with all her might and swung the dildo bat down at the Goblin General's head.

Chapter 75 Last Boss (7)

The Goblin General's reaction was slow since it had been staggered a bit by the missiles, but it was still able to see Cecilia's attack.

It was just too bad that it was already too late for it to dodge out of the way.

Since it had no other choice, it could only raise its final hand up to block it.

After all, the dildo bat was aimed at its head.

It was better to sacrifice an arm than to sacrifice its head. It would survive without both of its arms, but if it lost its head...

Unfortunately, this blow from Cecilia was different as well.

This was a blow that contained her very soul, plus it was swung down, adding in the power of gravity. This was a blow that was without a doubt much heavier than the blow from before.

When the dildo bat made contact with the hand of the Goblin General, there was an immediate explosion of blood, flesh, and bones.

The arm of the Goblin General was like a balloon that popped in an instant, spraying its contents all over the place.

The dildo bat didn't stop with just blowing up the arm of the Goblin General, it continued falling down towards the head of the Goblin General.

Seeing this, the Goblin General knew it was too late to dodge, so the only thing that it could do was...gather the remaining bits of that it had to create a barrier.

That was the real reason why it had been able to stop Cecilia's sword before. There was no way that natural hide could be this powerful.

As a infused monster, this was an ability that it had even though it couldn't use mana as spells.

So the Goblin General gathered every bit of power that it had into its head. As it did this, it could feel the pressure from gathering this much power in its head. It almost felt like there was something compressing its head.

But the Goblin General didn't have time to think about this.

It was now facing life and death, so it would do what it needed to do to survive.

But...that didn't matter in front of the dildo bat.

As the dildo bat came closer, the life of the Goblin General flashed in front of its eyes. This was a very short flashback since it hadn't lived that long.

Goblins had a very short growth cycle in the first place. It had only been alive for a single season.

There was no pause at all as the dildo bat fell onto the Goblin General's head, smashing it like a watermelon being crushed by a bat on the beach. There was splatter that went all over the place at the same time, just like with the splatter of the arm.

When it was over, the dildo bat didn't stop as it continued going down through the Goblin General's body. It kept crushing the body of the Goblin General until all of it was ground up into a meat paste and the body was split in half.

The two halves of the bisected body fell to the ground beside Cecilia.

The sound that the two halves made as they fell to the ground wasn't that loud, but it rang out clearly through this field. That was because it was so silent right now that even the sound of a pin dropping could be heard.

There wasn't a single person or monster that dared to make a sound.

After a long silence, there was a monster that suddenly turned to run.

As if Pandora's Box had been opened, there was no stopping the tidal wave of monsters that followed after this. Once they all saw that the Goblin General had been killed, the monsters didn't hesitate to turn and run.

After all, it had been the threat of this Goblin General that had kept this monster wave together in the first place.

Once that threat to their lives was gone, they wouldn't stay here any longer.

The knights and soldiers didn't stop the monsters as they started running away.

Even if they were now retreating, there were still over two hundred monsters that were left and among them were powerful middle class monsters. This was still a monster wave that could easily destroy their town.

If they scattered, they wouldn't pose a threat to the town, but if they were still all to charge at the town because they provoked them...

So it was better to let them all scatter and run away.

Seeing the monsters scatter, we all couldn't help letting out a sigh of relief.

There had been some fear that the monsters would still fight for their lives after the Goblin General was killed, but now it seemed that fear was unnecessary.

There was no loyalty to the Goblin General in the first place, they had only been afraid for their lives.

The most important thing to these monsters in the end was their own lives, so they wouldn't risk it fighting the humans. Especially not a terrifying human who was able to kill the Goblin General that had threatened all of their lives.

In no time at all, all of the monsters scattered from the field and disappeared into the forest in the distance.

During this time, both the priest and Cecilia had forced themselves to stand up straight and watch the monsters as they ran.

When they saw that the monsters were gone, it was only then that they allowed their bodies to go limp and fall.

After all, they had used up all of their strength in the fight just now. If it wasn't for the fact that they knew that it would be dangerous to fall earlier since the monsters still had a chance of attacking, they would have immediately fallen over after the Goblin General died.

Only the priest fell onto the ground. As for Cecilia, I immediately ran over to grab her as soon as she fell over.

Looking up at me, she had an inquisitive look in her eyes.

I looked into the distance and seeing that there was nothing there, I gave a nod and said with a smile, "It's over."

Only then did she reveal a smile before closing her eyes.

Chapter 76 It's Over

After Cecilia closed her eyes, her body went completely limp in my hands.

I was afraid that she had even stopped breathing, so I quickly put my finger under her nose.

Feeling that she was still breathing and then checking that she still had a pulse, I let out a sigh of relief. However, I didn't let myself relax just yet since I knew that she was injured.

I quickly brought Cecilia up onto the horse and turned to ride back into the town.

I had thought about getting the priest as well, but I saw that the other knights and soldiers had made their way over. When they saw me with Cecilia on my horse, they just gave a nod before turning to take care of the priest.

Since they were going to take care of the priest, there was no need for me to care.

Instead, that meant that I could completely focus on Cecilia instead.

So without hesitation, I rode back into the town with Cecilia on the back of my horse.

As soon as we arrived, the gates opened without any delay. The gatekeepers had even been waiting for us to come up to open the gate.

They could have opened the gate before we came up, but they chose to follow orders and not do so. That was the kind of professionalism that they chose, even though it didn't make sense to me.

When we came in, everyone immediately surrounded us...or rather, everyone suddenly surrounded Cecilia to make sure that she was alright.

I was thrown aside like chopped liver.

But I didn't mind since I was worried about her as well. Though I did at least keep certain people away at first. These were the ones that wanted to take advantage of the situation to let their hands wander a bit.

When they tried to bring their hands forward, I firmly grabbed it and glared at them.

When I was protecting her, the strength that erupted from my hand was much greater than normal. At the same time, the people whose hands I grabbed couldn't help shrinking back in front of my glare.

Eventually a doctor came over and everyone backed away to give the doctor space. With the doctor here, there was no one that had any excuse to do anything.

The doctor quickly looked over her and found that other than a few bruises, she was fine. The only reason that she had fainted in the first place was that she was exhausted and the line of her tension was cut.

All she needed was to be patched up and she would be fine.

The doctor suggested getting one of the clerics healing her, but I stopped them. The doctor looked at me with a strange look when I said this, but I still insisted.

After all, all she had were minor injuries and there were still many others that needed healing from the cleric. There had been many casualties from the rock bombardment of the monsters...

If it meant that even a single life couldn't be saved because a cleric was healing her, I'm sure that she wouldn't want that.

I also wouldn't let her bear that cross.

So the doctor just wrapped a few bandages on her.

As the doctor was doing this, Baroness Rose came over.

She had been busy with managing the rest of this town and dealing with the citizens hiding, so the message of Cecilia being injured came to her late.

But as soon as she received that message, she dropped everything to run over.

When she saw Cecilia lying there, being wrapped up by the doctor, there was a mist that appeared in her eyes. She didn't care about anything as she ran over, but I quickly grabbed her before she could get too close.

Baroness Rose immediately revealed an angry look as she said, "Who dares? Let go of me this instant!"

Part of that rage was from being stopped and part of that rage came from being grabbed by an unknown man.

She didn't want just any person touching her body.

She didn't recognize me because I had come up from behind her and she had been focused on Cecilia.

So I said, "Calm down, it's me, it's me."

Baroness Rose had been struggling until she heard this voice. She then looked at me with a confused look, as if she was asking, "What are you doing?"

I calmly said, "She's fine, she's just exhausted. She has a few bruises and the doctor is wrapping her up right now. Don't distract them."

All the anger disappeared from her face and she calmed down a bit, but then she asked in a slightly hurt voice, "Why didn't you get a cleric to heal her?"

The way she said this, it almost seemed like she thought that I didn't care about Cecilia.

I didn't know how irrational she was because of her worry, so I knew that words might not work.

So instead...

I didn't answer her question and instead, I turned to look at one of the clerics that was currently healing someone on the ground.

This person had suffered much heavier injuries as they had been crushed by one of the stones that the monsters had thrown.

To his side was his wife who was in tears as she watched the cleric healing him.

Baroness Rose followed the direction that I was looking in and she also saw this scene of the cleric healing this person.

Her expression calmed down and she no longer had the same worry as before.

She immediately understood what I was implying and she no longer had that look of blame that she had.

After a long while, she couldn't help giving a sigh before turning to hold me. As she held me, she put her head into my chest and asked, "Is it all over?"

I looked at the destruction that was all over the town and there was a sad feeling that filled me.

But in the end, I patted her on the back and said, "Yes, it's over."

Chapter 77 Celebration (1)

After Cecilia's treatment was finished, the other soldiers and knights came back.

They had brought back Cecilia's horse and the priest.

The priest was just unconscious because he had overused his mana. All he needed to do was rest up and he would be fine.

As for the horse...it had a broken leg.

Anyone that took care of horses knew that this was basically a death sentence for a horse. It would be very unlikely that it would recover from this and even if it did, it wouldn't be able to run like it did before.

The smarter thing would be to put this horse down to save it from suffering.

But Baroness Rose wouldn't allow that to happen.

She had heard from the men how this horse had protected Cecilia and fought with her against the Goblin General, so she wouldn't let them repay its valor with cruelty. She made sure that the horse got the best medical care that it could get.

Over the next few days, everyone was kept busy even though the monsters had already been driven away.

That was because there was a lot of cleaning up to do.

The monsters hadn't held back at all as they threw their rocks at the town.

While the soldiers and archers had done their best to block as many rocks as they could, it wasn't as if they could stop everything. There were plenty of rocks that had gone over their heads and landed in the town.

The rocks that fell had destroyed several buildings, so they now had to clean them up and rebuild them.

Normally, this would be the collapse of one's family with the amount that it would cost to rebuild, but Baroness Rose said that all of the construction costs would be paid for by her.

This had gone a long way to increase her popularity with the people of the town, though it didn't need an increase in the first place since she was already very popular.

But that did mean that there was a lot of work that had to be done so that the town could function again.

So over the next few days, I had been running around ragged doing things for the town.

During this time, Cecilia and the priest had both woken up and were showing signs of recovering.

However, there were some people that didn't wake up and there were many funerals that were also held during this time.

The priest had wanted to get up for each and every one of those funerals, but I was able to convince him to lie down and rest in the end. I was actually the only one that was able to do so.

The clerics had tried, but they hadn't been able to stop the priest.

So they had no choice but to ask me to stop him.

If it wasn't for the Mark of God, I most likely wouldn't have been able to stop him.

But because I had this Mark of God, he listened to me and stayed in bed. Though there were many praises that he said while I was there...

It really made me wonder just what this Mark of God was...but the priest wouldn't explain when I asked him about this.

The other thing that happened during this time was that Baroness Rose held a celebration feast for everyone after the cleanup was done.

This was a feast that was hosted by Baroness Rose, so everything was paid for by her. Once again, this increased the popularity of Baroness Rose, reaching a point where the townspeople were even ready to worship her.

But this was something that the town needed since there was an air of sadness that lingered over them.

The people needed a way to grieve over the dead and a way to celebrate the fact that they had survived.

So everyone cut loose on the day of the feast and just focused on enjoying themselves.

That included Cecilia and the priest who had recovered enough to join.

The reason we had waited this long in the first place was because we wanted to wait until the people who had been injured in the fight had recovered enough to celebrate with us.

There were those that were seriously injured and would take several months to recover, so we couldn't wait for them. But we tried to wait as long as we could so that those that suffered slight injuries could join in the celebration.

The ones that were the most popular were Cecilia, the priest, and Baroness Rose.

As beautiful women, it was natural that Cecilia and Baroness Rose were popular.

However, the priest was also very popular as the one who led the clerics.

The clerics had done a lot during the monster wave to heal people, so the townspeople all had good impressions of them. Since the priest was the one that led these clerics, he was the one that everyone respected the most.

But those that tried to get close to Cecilia and Baroness Rose...had ulterior motives.

They all came over with drinks and tried to get the two of them drunk so that they could take advantage of them. Even though I was by the side of these two, they completely ignored me and still tried to take advantage of them.

So I couldn't ignore it anymore and stood up for the two of them, telling these people to back off.

These people were soldiers of the town who were still single, so they were quite strong and didn't back down from me telling them to back off. They even stepped up to me, as if they wanted to suppress me with their pressure.

One of them who was the leader came forward and said, "What are you going to do about it then? Are you going to fight us if we don't back off?"

I was about to say something, but before I could, one of the knights came forward to push this person back as he said, "This is a celebration, don't take it too far."

Chapter 78 Celebration (2)

The one that had tried to threaten me was only one of the guards, so while he was a bigger man than me, he didn't have enough in him to threaten the knights.

The knights were specially trained warriors after all.

When this guard saw that the knight was stepping up for me, he couldn't help being caught off guard. It was the same for the men who were behind him.

But at the same time, it was the same for me.

Before this, the knights and the guards had all looked down on me. None of them had any respect for me since they just thought that I was Baroness Rose's boytoy.

That wasn't completely incorrect, but still...I had become the Baron and should have commanded some respect.

Still, there was no real conflict before me and the knights and guards before this, so I hadn't really minded it.

So seeing them stand up for me now...really was something else.

After taking a moment to come back to his senses, the guard said with a careless smile, "We're just playing around, there's no need to be this serious."

The guard was just trying to play it off now.

He didn't know why the knight was acting this way, but he wasn't foolish enough to provoke someone who was stronger than him.

Unfortunately for him, the knight wasn't planning on letting this go that easily.

The knight gave a cold laugh before saying, "It was just playing around? Do you understand who you are playing around with?"

The guard couldn't help taking a step back when he heard this and he unconsciously shook his head.

The knight waved his hand and several of his followers came forward to grab the guard.

After being grabbed, the guard couldn't help saying in a panicked voice, "What are you doing? Don't touch me!"

But those followers firmly held him and didn't give him a chance to break free.

The knight said in a cold voice, "This man is the baron, the noble title holder of this land. The words that you've just said to him can be considered a threat towards a noble, which is a crime punishable by death."

The guard immediately felt a chill run down his spine after the knight said this.

He knew that this was the case, but he also knew that no one respected the new baron. They all thought that he was nothing more than the boytoy of the baroness and didn't have any power, so they were free to bully him however he wanted.

After all, he didn't command any respect from the knights or the soldiers that would back him up. So even if someone were to do something to him, no one would be held accountable for it.

But now that the knight was actually standing up for the new baron, the guard couldn't help being confused.

However, this wasn't the time to think about this.

What he needed to do now was figure out a way to get out of this mess, or else it really would be his life on the line.

The guard immediately looked to his companions, but he found that not a single person was looking in his direction. They even went out of their way to turn away from him, avoiding his gaze.

It was as if they didn't want a single part of this.

Since that was the case, the guard said, "I wasn't the only one who thought this! The others all thought the same thing!"

As soon as he said this, his companions all glared at him.

They never expected him to drag them all down with them.

The knight's eyes swept over the rest, but he didn't do anything to them as he turned his gaze back to this guard. As he looked at the guard, he said, "You're the only one that has shown disrespect to the baron and baroness today, so you will be the only one punished."

The rest couldn't help letting out a secret sigh of relief when they heard this, but then they held their breaths when they heard what the knight said next.

After a pause, the knight added, "However, if anyone were to show the same disrespect for the baron and baroness in the future, understand that you will be punished just like this dissenter."

All of them felt a chill run down their spines the moment that they heard this.

The companions of the guards lowered their heads and started moving away from this scene, as if they were trying to escape from this place as quickly as possible.

Seeing that he was left all alone, the guard revealed a look that was like dying ashes. He knew that he had been abandoned by his companions to suffer alone.

As he was being dragged away, he couldn't help glaring at me.

The way that he looked at me, it was as if he was blaming me for everything that happened. This felt like it was a flag for something that would happen in the future, but it wasn't as if there was anything that I could do now.

After the guard had been taken away, the knight came up to Baroness Rose and me and gave a slight bow as he said, "My lord, my lady, I apologize for this incident. I will make sure to personally take care of this matter."

Both me and Baroness Rose couldn't help being taken aback when we saw this.

We had both known about the disdain that the guards had towards me all along, but we weren't able to do anything about it.

Baroness Rose had just taken over her husband's title as the baroness and while she had her prestige, she didn't have full control over the knights and soldiers.

A noble's power was only stable if they could satisfy the keys to their power, which was the military and their key officials. The knights and soldiers were considered the military in this case.

She didn't have full command over them yet and they all looked down on me, so she couldn't just risk offending them by punishing those that offended me. That was why she and Cecilia had endured the advances of those men just now.

But now this knight actually stood up for me...

Just what had changed?

Chapter 79 Celebration (3)

But Baroness Rose was a graceful and smart woman, so she gave a simple nod before saying, "I'll leave this matter to you."

The knight gave another bow to accept this order.

When we thought that the knight would leave after this, he suddenly came over to me. As he stood there in front of me, I couldn't help being surprised by what was happening.

I looked at him with a strange look, but I waited for him to speak first.

Then in front of everyone, this knight gave a slight bow to me that caught everyone off guard again.

Everyone just looked at the knight with a confused look as they waited for the knight to explain what was happening.

As his head was slightly down, the knight said, "Thank you for saving the head knight. If it wasn't for you, we would have lost her and maybe the entire town."

Hearing this, I couldn't help being even more taken aback.

I never thought that anyone would mention that matter since it was the priest and Cecilia who had taken down the Goblin General together. What I had done was almost negligible.

I looked over at Cecilia who had a blush on her face seeing the knight act like this and I knew that it wasn't something that she put him up to.

While this was happening, there were several knights and soldiers that also came over to bow to me.

I just couldn't understand why they were doing this until I took a closer look at them.

I saw that there was sincerity in their stance and could hear the sincerity in their voice. They were thanking me for what they thought I did with the bottom of their hearts.

I knew that these were subordinates that had followed Cecilia for a long time and had been personally trained by her, but I never thought that their relationship would be this close.

It seemed that Cecilia was an even better commander than I thought.

At the same time, I started to understand why they had stood up for me in the first place.

I came forward and took the knight by the shoulder, helping him up before saying, "There's no need for this. If I had the chance, I would do the same."

Hearing this, all of the knights and soldiers revealed surprised looks as they looked up at me. Then after a pause, all of them suddenly revealed smiles.

These knights and soldiers were all part of the group that had been called out with Cecilia to attack the monster wave. They had been out on the field when I had gone out to save Cecilia and they had seen everything that I had done.

So it wasn't strange that they knew everything about what had happened.

The knight looked at me with a serious gaze before he gave a nod and also revealed a smile.

This was a celebration feast, so there was plenty of food and drink to go around.

The knights and soldiers picked up a few flasks and brought them over. The knight that led them also handed one of the flasks to me and raised his own towards me.

I immediately understood what he meant and we knocked our flasks together before chugging it all down. Instead of fake drinking, I actually drank this time.

That was because instead of being in a dangerous situation, this was a celebration feast for this town that I belonged to.

If I didn't take the lead to liven the festivities, then who would?

The rest of the feast went on as planned, the guard that was taken away didn't ruin anyone's mood.

But this time, no one dared to disrespect me like they had before.

The townspeople never had a deep disdain for me in the first place like the soldiers and knights had. Now that the soldiers and knights were showing that they were warming up to me, the townspeople couldn't help becoming curious about me.

After drinking together and having fun together, the bad reputation that I had in the minds of the townspeople was written over and they started warming up to me.

It wasn't enough to make them love me as much as they did Baroness Rose, but at the very least they no longer looked down on me like before.

By the end of it, I was completely drunk.

I didn't remember how much I had to drink, but it definitely wasn't a small amount.

Baroness Rose and Cecilia had been watching from the side with a smile, almost as if they were holding back. They knew that if they came out now, they would take the spotlight away from me and it would make it harder to open up the hearts of the townspeople to me.

So they decided to take the backseat this time.

At the same time though, they were happy to see that everyone was starting to open up to me.

After I passed out from being drunk, I didn't know what happened to me.

I could hear a few voices that were softly ringing out around me that sounded very familiar.

Also, I remembered being carried by a few soft hands.

When I woke up, I found that I was in complete darkness.

After taking some time for my eyes to adjust to this darkness, I found that I was back in my room. Based on how dark it was outside of the curtains, it should be the middle of the night right now.

As I laid there, I tried to remember what happened before I passed out.

But as I was thinking, there was a throbbing feeling that came from my head.

This throbbing feeling made me remember just how much I had to drink at the feast and I realized what had happened...

I couldn't help revealing a bitter smile as I remembered this.

But then I realized that something was off.

Cecilia and Baroness Rose weren't here with me.

They normally slept with me when they were free and they had more free time during this time. So the fact that they weren't here was strange.

I was about to stand up and go look for them, but when I made noise as I sat up, the door suddenly opened.

I looked over and my chin dropped when I saw what was waiting there for me.

Chapter 80 Special Celebration (1)

Standing at the door were two beautiful figures that I was very familiar with.

It was Cecilia and Baroness Rose.

But what shocked me the most was what they were wearing...since it was something that didn't exist in this world. No, it did exist in this world that was based on the H-game, but at least it didn't exist in this town.

I should know since I had made sure to check this.

They were wearing black heels with black sheer to waist pantyhose, a strapless corset, and a pair of bunny ears.

It was the infamous bunny suit!

But that wasn't right...since I had checked with all of the town's tailors in my free time.

I was a man after all, so it was my dream to experience this just once...

So where did these two get these bunny suits?

Seeing the shocked look on my face, both Cecilia and Baroness Rose revealed happy smiles. These were smiles of people who had successfully played a trick on someone.

The two of them came over and sat down on the bed, one of them on each side of me.

After sitting down, they leaned in close to me so that their chest was pressed up against me.

Just by looking down slightly, I was able to peek down into the valleys that had been presented to me. There was one that was bigger than the other, but both of them were without a doubt beautiful.

It didn't take long before there was a tent that was being pitched in the blanket on me.

Seeing this, both Cecilia and Baroness Rose revealed smiles before pressing themselves even closer to me.

But I was able to keep my rationality as I pushed them back slightly and said, "What are you two doing? Where did you get those outfits?"

The two of them pushed back against me and leaned against me again.

As I felt them pressing up against me again, I couldn't help getting even harder, causing the tent in the blanket to get even bigger.

Then Baroness Rose said, "We're celebrating, but instead of celebrating with everyone, we're having a special private celebration."

Cecilia nodded in agreement to this before saying, "We even got these special outfits for this occasion."

Since she took the initiative to bring up these outfits, I couldn't help asking, "That's right, where did you get these outfits? I could have sworn that they didn't exist...Or at least that was what the tailor told me."

Baroness Rose revealed a confident smile as she said, "They didn't exist...until now. Who do you think I am?"

Cecilia nodded in agreement to this.

I couldn't help revealing a strange smile when I heard this, but then I still had to ask, "Yes, but where did you learn about this design?"

As I said this though, I couldn't help taking a closer look at the bunny suits that they were wearing.

These bunny suits really seemed well made, down the very smallest detail. When I looked closer, I found that on their butts, there was even a small bunny tail made of cotton.

No matter how you looked at it, this was a very intricate design that shouldn't have existed in this fantasy medieval world...

Baroness Rose revealed a confident smile again before saying, "Who do you think I am? Do you really think that you could hide anything in my territory from me? As soon as you asked for something, I was immediately informed."

As soon as I heard this, I realized what had happened.

The tailor had betrayed me and told Baroness Rose about the thing that I had asked him to make...

But it wasn't strange that the tailor had betrayed me.

After all, there was no future for the tailor in this territory if he disobeyed Baroness Rose.

Before I lost myself completely, I couldn't help looking at Cecilia and saying, "Are you alright though?"

She had recovered enough from her injuries to go to the feast, but that didn't mean that she was completely healed up yet. If possible, I wanted her to stay in bed as much as possible, but I knew that it was impossible since she would almost never stay still.

Cecilia answered my question with action instead of words.

She pushed me down and then got atop of me, taking off the top part of her corset. As soon as she pulled them free, those large breasts popped out in front of me and appeared in front of my face.

I couldn't help being surprised by what I saw on them.

Cecilia's face turned red, but she still said, "I think that I need your help again."

I knew what she was referring to since they were right there in front of my face.

On her breasts, there were the same nipple covers as before.

With her tempting me like this, there was no way that I would be able to hold back anymore.

So without holding back anymore, I grabbed her breasts in my hand and brought my head forward so that my face was right in between them.

Cecilia was caught off guard by my sudden action, but then she was surprised even more by what I did next. With my face still in between her breasts, I started moving my head side to side.

This was a dream that I've had since I first played Dragon Quest...and now that it was coming true, I had no regrets.

But for Cecilia, this was something that she was unfamiliar with and was very strange for her.

At the same time though, it wasn't as if she was against this.

The feeling was strange, but it was also a feeling that she liked, especially when he was touching her.

After enjoying the pafu pafu for a bit, I brought my head back and looked at Cecilia with a wicked look.

Since she was offering herself to me, there was no reason for me to hold back anymore!
