Cristina swung the door open and left. As she descended the stairs, she encountered Eliam on his way up.

From a nurse, Cristina had learned that Rhonda was the only patient on this floor.

Eliam passed by Cristina.

Cristina abruptly stopped him.

"Hi, are you here to visit Rhonda too?" Cristina asked.

Eliam turned around and glanced at Cristina coldly. "Who might you be?"

"I work with Rhonda. I'm Cristina Grey. Are you her friend?" Cristina asked cautiously.

"Cristina?" Eliam pondered for a moment before asking, "Did you want to discuss something with me?"

"No, nothing." Cristina thought that Eliam was handsome and cold. He appeared wealthy, so she was curious about his connection to Rhonda.

Naturally, Eliam knew who Cristina was. He suspected her visit to Rhonda wasn't for a good reason.

He quickly made his way to Rhonda's room, relieved to find her safe and unharmed.

"Did Cristina stop by?" Eliam asked.

"You ran into her?" Rhonda frowned. "What did she say to you?"

"She asked me about our relationship." Eliam handed Rhonda the sandwiches. "Eat first. I've arranged a caregiver for you. She'll be here soon. I need to return to the company for a meeting later."

Feeling something was amiss with Eliam's expression, Rhonda quickly replied, "Go ahead with your work. I'll call you if I need anything."

When Cristina walked out of the gate of the hospital, she saw Malcolm and Fiona get out of the car.

Malcolm politely opened the car door for Fiona and took her bag, which irritated Cristina.

The night Cristina encountered Malcolm at the private club, they had sex in the car before making it to the hotel.

Cristina believed she had snagged a wealthy heir, but the next morning, Malcolm had no recollection of her. He had not only slept with her without commitment but also blocked her number, which made her very angry.

At this moment, she was pissed off when she saw Malcolm walk around Fiona like a flatterer.

"Hey, isn't this Fiona? What a coincidence! You're here to see Rhonda too?" Although Cristina addressed Fiona, her gaze was fixed on Malcolm.

Fiona didn't have a good impression of Cristina, but now Cristina kept staring at Malcolm, which made Fiona more disgusted.

"You can visit her, but I can't, is that it?" Fiona retorted.

"Why are you so irritable this morning?" Cristina rolled her eyes at Fiona, then walked up to Malcolm and patted his shoulder. "This handsome man seems familiar."

Malcolm hesitated, then smiled. "I'm just an ordinary-looking guy. It's not surprising I might resemble someone you know."

"You're far from ordinary. You're more like a big shot who conveniently forgets." Cristina's seductive eyes made Malcolm get excited.

But he didn't dare to show his excitement in front of Fiona.

He had to pretend to be calm and said, "Beautiful, I genuinely can't recall where we've met. Perhaps you're confusing me with someone else?"

"It's possible." At that moment, Cristina pulled out her phone. "I'll call him and find out if I've confused you with him."

Relieved he had blocked irrelevant contacts, Malcolm touched his phone.

"Miss, please take your time. We have other matters to attend to. Goodbye."

With that, Malcolm confidently strode into the hospital with Fiona.

Cristina had intended to scare Malcolm, but she didn't anticipate his fearlessness. She was so angry she wanted to throw her phone at his head.

In the ward, after Rhonda finished the sandwiches, the caregiver arrived with Fiona.
