

Chapter 139 Just Give Birth To The Baby And I'll Take Care...

"I've always had impeccable taste," Eliam declared. "Do you understand the meaning behind this bracelet?"

Rhonda examined the bracelet more closely and noticed it featured a large heart encircling a smaller one.

"This represents your heart intertwined with mine." Eliam suddenly grasped Rhonda's hand, his expression solemn.

"Grandpa is pressing us to have a child again. He likely has about three months left. I don't want him to leave with any regrets."

"Are you suggesting we have a baby just for Grandpa's sake?" Rhonda couldn't understand the reason. "I believe that no matter one's age, there will always be people and things they miss. So, regret is unavoidable."

"Do you mean to make me watch my grandfather pass away with regret? Isn't that excessively harsh?"

Eliam's eyes welled up. His grandfather meant the world to him, and he couldn't dismiss his final wish.

"But isn't it cruel to bring a baby into the world solely for Grandpa's sake?" Rhonda might have appeared easy-going, but she was steadfast in her principles.

"All you have to do is give birth, and I'll take care of the baby," Eliam offered.

"Having a child isn't part of our agreement." Rhonda declined resolutely.

Eliam was taken aback momentarily.

"Do you mean you need extra money to have a baby, right? Alright, name your price, and I'll pay it."

"It's not about the money." Rhonda's anger grew, prompting her to laugh. "Do you see me as someone who would sell anything for money?"

"Isn't that the truth? You were even willing to sell your marriage, so what wouldn't you sell?" Eliam's anger escalated as he spoke. Despite his words, this woman still didn't seem to understand.

Was he short of women to give birth to his children?

He just wanted a child born by her.

Rhonda went angry about Eliam. "You're right. I sold my marriage, and now I regret it. I'll repay the debt I owe you tomorrow, and then we can initiate the divorce proceedings. I won't stand in the way of you having a child with another woman."

As Rhonda spoke, she pushed Eliam out the door. Before shutting it, she removed the bracelet and handed it back to him.

She had thought he was there to show her genuine care. But it turned out he had an ulterior motive.

She shouldn't have held any illusions about him.

Eliam was equally upset. He had been swamped all day and hadn't eaten. The moment he found time, he immediately bought her a gift and delivered it. He didn't expect her to be so unappreciative.

All he wanted was a child with her. Was that so wrong?

When Eliam went downstairs to his car, he saw Michelle entering the apartment complex.

Another man accompanied her. The man escorted Michelle to the building before leaving.

Sitting in his car, Eliam watched Michelle head upstairs, wondering if she planned to visit Rhonda.

She had ended things with Leonard. Why was she back here?

When it concerned Rhonda, Eliam was extremely vigilant. He immediately phoned David and instructed him to look into who Michelle had been associating with lately.

Then he returned to the Sloan family's residence. With a mountain of work still awaiting him, he went back to his study to get started.

Hearing the commotion, Diana came out. She hadn't seen Eliam in quite some time. In fact, ever since she had moved in, Eliam had not stayed at home with her.

She was aware that Eliam would rather reside in a hotel than return home. He had even taken his grandfather to live at Heyday Mansion.

She had never been there herself. It was said that only the mistress of the Sloan family was permitted to reside there.

But to her relief, Rhonda had never been there either. So did that mean Diana still had a shot?
