

Chapter 152 A Piece Of Cake

Rhonda was aware that Tamara was flaunting her superiority in front of her. She had previously heard about Tamara. Possessing exceptional skills and a remarkable track record, she was thought to be the prime candidate for the regional general manager position.

But Rhonda couldn't understand why the company had promoted her to such a significant role. Rumor had it that Eden personally issued the directive.

Rhonda waited patiently, but some grew restless. "Perhaps we should cancel the meeting since Tamara hasn't arrived yet. I have a lot of pressing tasks to handle."

"Right, her child appears to be sick. She might not make it today. I think it's best to call off the meeting."

"Let's leave!" someone yelled.

"Ms. Horton, what do you say? Will the meeting proceed or not? If not, I'm out of here."

She remained silent in response.

Observing that everyone in the room seemed to be loyal to Tamara, Rhonda couldn't help but silently clench her fists. This time, she refused to back down.

At that moment, she heard someone shouting in the hallway, "Tamara, come out. I won't leave until you provide me an explanation today!"

The voice was familiar to everyone in the meeting room.

He had recently caused quite a stir.

"Who's out there?" Rhonda asked.

"It's Mr. Dooley Quimby from Techtronic Industries. We screwed up the contract with him last time, so he constantly shows up and stirs up trouble," someone explained.

Mentioning Dooley, everyone found him to be a headache.

"Who managed the contract? Go outside and greet him," Rhonda instructed.

Everyone exchanged glances.

"Well, Tamara was the one handling the task. It was already quite challenging. Their company has exceptionally high standards. It's impressive that she managed to accommodate them to this extent."

"Indeed, it's not her fault. The client is just too demanding."

"Really? Then I'll go and meet him myself," Rhonda stood up.

"Ms. Horton, I suggest you reconsider. If Tamara can't handle it, there's not much you can do. It would be better to wait for her arrival," Tamara's staunch supporter, Harlow Bowman, chimed in.

"What if she doesn't show up today?" Rhonda held back her anger and strode out of the conference room.

As soon as she left, the room erupted in chatter. They mocked Rhonda for overreaching herself.

They believed she was quite unlucky to encounter such a tough situation right after taking office.

"Let's bet on how long it'll take for her to fail."

"Alright. I bet she'll come back in tears. Hahaha..."

"Hey, Roderick, why are you so quiet?"

In one corner, a young man in his early twenties remained silent.

Roderick Collins scoffed, "At least she has the courage to face it, which makes her a hundred times better than you gossipers."

He then spat out his gum and confidently strutted out of the room.

He came across Rhonda and Dooley just outside.

"Ms. Horton, you're truly talented and full of potential. You resolved such a complex issue as soon as you took action. I look forward to working with you in the future." Dooley smiled as he spoke.

"You're welcome, Mr. Quimby. I hope we can cooperate again."

Roderick remained silent upon hearing this.

Witnessing the scene, he went back to the room.

"I have some unfortunate news for you all. Rhonda has just won over Mr. Quimby." Roderick checked his watch, adding, "It took her less than ten minutes to resolve Mr. Quimby's issue."

"That can't be." Harlow was the first to express disbelief.

"True, their company's investment structure can't be enhanced any further. No matter how hard we try, we can't increase their returns beyond five percent."

The group engaged in animated discussions.

At that moment, Rhonda entered the room.

Everyone fell silent, their eyes on her.

"Harlow, please provide me with the information on Mr. Quimby's company. I want to create a new investment plan for him."

"I don't think that's a wise decision. This is the contract Tamara is responsible for," Harlow retorted.

"I've already spoken with her, and she has agreed." Rhonda replied, "By the way, Mr. Quimby's project isn't that difficult at all. With a few minor adjustments, the return on investment can be increased by two percentage points. I've deduced this after analyzing thousands of top-tier global enterprise investment cases. If you're interested in learning, feel free to approach me privately."