

Chapter 41 Sacrifice This Opportunity To Diana

That afternoon, Rhonda received a notice from the financial service company asking her to go to the headquarters in three days to finish the entry formalities.

She was thrilled to hear the news but was worried at the same time. The training would be conducted online. But Rhonda didn't know where she could attend the live stream.

Rhonda didn't want the Sloan family to know about it for the time being. Besides, there were too many people in the Sloan family's residence. It wouldn't be an ideal place for the live stream.

However, it was also not worthwhile to rent a room for it.

After thinking about it for a while, Rhonda decided not to sell her apartment for the time being. She could do the live stream in her bedroom and rent the spare room to someone else.

Rhonda felt it was a perfect idea. Therefore, she called the agency to change the ad from 'apartment for sale' to 'apartment for rent'.

By the time she returned to the Sloan family's residence, it was already evening.

As soon as she stepped into the house, Ingrid ran toward her in excitement.

"Rhonda, you are awesome!" She showed her phone to Rhonda. "See this! You are way ahead of the other

"Don't get too excited. It's just an endorsement," Rhonda responded calmly.

"What do you mean? How could it be an ordinary endorsement? Do you have any idea how popular this game is? Well, I'm sure you can decide for yourself by looking at the number of voters."

Ingrid looked at Rhonda in awe. "Rhonda, you are one lucky woman! You married Eliam and are going to endorse such an amazing game. I feel your life is about to change for the best."

Ingrid's dramatic reaction amused Rhonda.

"Didn't your mother ask you to accompany Diana? What are you doing here?"

"Oh, don't talk about it anymore. She only wants to be with Eliam. She probably thinks I'm an eyesore," Ingrid mumbled unhappily. "Well, I'm glad. I like my freedom."

Rhonda became upset when she heard that.

Ingrid realized she had said something she shouldn't have but didn't know how to comfort Rhonda.

After all, Eliam had been staying at Diana's place every night since he came back. She couldn't hide it.

Moreover, she felt Diana had solely returned for Eliam this time. Considering their previous relationship, she believed their love for each other would reignite.

Or perhaps they had already rekindled their romance and started their relationship anew.

Seeing the dejected look on Rhonda's face, Ingrid worriedly asked, "Rhonda, have you really fallen in love with Eliam? If so, please get over him. His relationship with Diana is beyond your imagination. He won't leave her for any other woman."

Rhonda smiled bitterly. She wondered if her feelings were so apparent.

"I know what to do. Thank you."

Miranda didn't return home for dinner. Richard, Ingrid, and Rhonda had dinner together.

While they were eating, Eliam came back.

Maggie set plates and bowls for him.

Soon, Richard finished eating and returned to his room.

Rhonda and Eliam ignored each other and focused on the food.

Ingrid felt a little embarrassed.

She tried breaking the awkward silence. "Eliam, did you see the votes of the game endorsement? Rhonda and Diana have the highest votes."

"I don't have the time for that," Eliam mumbled unhappily.

But Ingrid was too excited.

"Whom do you support?" she asked, eyeing him with curiosity.

Eliam put down his fork and knocked on Ingrid's head. "Can't you keep quiet while eating? What happened to your table manners?"

"Ouch! No. Tell me. Rhonda or Diana?"

"Who did you vote for?" Eliam asked her instead of answering. He obviously didn't want to answer the question in front of Rhonda.

"I... I..." Ingrid was a little nervous. "If I tell you that I voted for Rhonda, will you be mad at me?"

Rhonda was surprised. She didn't expect Ingrid to vote for her.

"Do you think I'm so narrow-minded?" Eliam raised his hand again. Ingrid protectively covered her head.

Realizing that he was just trying to frighten her, she breathed a sigh of relief.

"But will Diana be mad at me?" Ingrid squirmed in her seat.

"If you are afraid that she will be mad at you, why did you vote for Rhonda?" Eliam rolled his eyes.

"Because I feel Rhonda will be more apt to endorse the game."

"You are just a kid. What do you know?" With that, Eliam stood up and looked at Rhonda. "I'll wait for you in our room. I need to talk to you about something."

"Rhonda, what do you think Eliam is going to tell you?" Ingrid asked curiously after he left.

Rhonda shook her head.

"I guess it's probably something about Diana." Ingrid sounded certain.

"How about we make a bet? If my guess is right, you should come shopping with me tomorrow."

"But I want to go and see my grandma tomorrow." Rhonda scratched her head in embarrassment.

"What about the day after tomorrow?"

Rhonda nodded. "Okay. I'll come with you if I'm free."

After dinner, Rhonda returned to the master bedroom. As expected, Eiam was waiting for her.

"Thank you for all that you've done lately," said Eiam.

Rhonda fought a smile as her heart swelled with happiness.

She had also assumed Eiam would talk about Diana just as Ingrid had predicted.

However, her happiness didn't last long.

Eiam continued, "I want to discuss something about Diana with you."

"Okay. What is it?"

Eiam ran a hand through his hair and looked visibly distressed. "Diana is suffering from severe depression. So..."

"So you are going to look after her, right? That's your personal choice. You don't have to tell me."

Rhonda looked away to hide her displeasure.

"That's not what I want to say."

"Then? What is it?"

"Can you please give this endorsement to Diana?" Eiam

Rhonda felt like someone had hit her heart with a sledgehammer. For a moment, she thought she had misheard him.

Finally, she licked her lips and asked, "Why?"

"Because this opportunity is very important for her."

A lump formed in Rhonda's throat.

"I know I am asking for too much, but I beg you to give this opportunity to her. I will compensate you for all the losses."

"Compensate me? How?"

"I heard the endorsement fee is one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. If you give this opportunity to Diana, you don't have to repay the money you owe me."

She couldn't believe Eliam was willing to give up five hundred thousand dollars for Diana.

Rhonda's lungs constricted. She couldn't contain her disappointment.

Ingrid was right. Eliam was willing to do anything for Diana.

"Okay, I promise to do that for you, but on one condition..."

"Sure. Anything you ask." Eliam was a little excited.

"I want a divorce."

The smile on Eliam's face vanished in an instant.

"You want to divorce me?"

Rhonda choked with sobs. "I don't want to be a hindrance in your relationship with Diana."

"So, you've already made up your mind?" Eliam stood up and walked toward Rhonda. The intensity of his gaze frightened her.

"Are you so eager to divorce me that you can't wait for six months?"

"No. I'm afraid you and Diana can't wait any longer." Rhonda's hands on the windowsill trembled. She thrust them into her pockets, trying to seem calm and composed.

Eliam hooked his finger under Rhonda's chin and lifted her face. He looked into her eyes with disappointment. "Fine. Since you are firm with your decision, I'll grant your wish."

"Great," Rhonda croaked as her heart broke into a thousand pieces. As Ingrid said, Diana was the only woman in Eliam's heart.
