Chapter 1061 The Final Moments

Six weeks...

So, Freya got pregnant on the day Hayden begged her to have a baby with him.

Freya gently caressed her belly, feeling inexplicably melancholic.

Georgia looked at the sadness hidden in Freya's eyes and didn't know how to break the news about the escalating rumors.

Just then, Freya's phone rang.

It was Maeve calling.

Georgia didn't expect the situation to have spun out of control, so she handed the phone to Freya.

Freya thought her mother was just worried about her being alone in New York and wanted to ask about her progress with Hayden.

Freya even planned to tell Maeve that she would be going back tonight.

As for breaking up with Hayden, she would find an appropriate time to explain everything to her parents.

And as for the baby in her belly, Freya planned to wait for the right opportunity to secretly give birth in New York, pretending to be pursuing her career there.

After making all the necessary preparations, Freya answered the phone. However, as soon as the call connected, Maeve's voice came through in a tearful tone, "Freya, you need to rush to the county hospital! Your father's condition is critical, and he might not make it."

Freya completely lost her composure. "What do you mean? What happened to my dad?"

Maeve sobbed uncontrollably and told Freya, "Those people online are spreading terrible rumors about you. They are saying that you are promiscuous, that you break up other people's families. They even came to our house and vandalized it. When your father argued with them, they pushed him down, causing a severe brain hemorrhage..."

Hearing that, Freya felt her mind went blank, and she couldn't even hold onto her phone.

"I want to leave the hospital. I need to see my dad."

Georgia was bewildered. "Why so hurry? The doctor said you need rest."

The doctor said Freya had a fever due to catching a cold, so there was no need to worry excessively.

But Freya also showed signs of a miscarriage and needed to rest well for the next few days.

Georgia even planned to hire a caregiver for Freya to take good care of her and go back to have the servants make nutritious soups and drinks for Freya to replenish her body.

After all, she really liked Freya.

Before Georgia could inform Freya of her plan, Freya said she wanted to leave the hospital, leaving Georgia at a loss.

Freya cried as she told Georgia about what she had just learned from Maeve. "My father was fine when I left home yesterday. No... I can't accept this!"

Freya was on the verge of collapse, and Georgia was also shocked.

Georgia never imagined that online violence could so easily destroy a person's life.

Seeing Freya about to rush out of the ward in her hospital gown, Georgia hurriedly put a coat on her and said, "Let's go. I'll drive you to see your father."

Then, Georgia personally drove Freya to the county hospital.

When Freya arrived, her relatives were all waiting at the entrance to the emergency room. When they saw Freya, they all shouted for her to hurry inside.

Freya didn't dare to imagine what she would find inside the ward, but her desperation drove her to rush inside without hesitation.

At this moment, Duncan was already on his deathbed.

"Dad, I'm here." Hearing Freya's voice, Duncan struggled to open his eyes.

"Freya..." Duncan whispered weakly, extending his trembling hand toward her face. He tried his best to touch her, but his hand fell short due to his lack of strength.

Freya quickly grasped his hand and placed it on her face.

"Don't cry. I know you're not like what they say online. My daughter is definitely not that kind of person."

Duncan gently wiped away the tears on Freya's face and spoke in fragments.

Upon hearing those words, Freya's tears streamed down uncontrollably.

Chapter 1062 The Departed

"Dad, I know I was wrong. If I knew that falling in love with him would hurt you like this, I would never have started with him."

Freya thought that she could live without Hayden, but she couldn't live without her father, who cared for her the most.

Why did fate punish her like this?

She had already decided to leave Hayden, so why did fate take away the person closest to her?

"Silly girl, there's no right or wrong in this matter. It's just the way things happen."

Duncan embraced this situation with more calmness than Freya.

Although Hayden bore some responsibility for this, he wasn't at fault.

Duncan wanted to tell this to Freya, but his breathing became increasingly rapid, and everything around him turned pitch black.

"Dad!" Freya was terrified, gripping Duncan's hand tightly, and cried out in anguish, "Dad, don't leave me..."

Duncan wanted to continue staying by his precious daughter's side and be her everlasting harbor, but he was so tired, in so much pain, and couldn't hold on any longer.

Tears of reluctance streamed down Duncan's face.

In his last gasp, Duncan used all his strength to say to Freya, "Freya, no matter what you do, Dad will support you..."

As his words trailed off, the instrument emitted a "beep" sound.

The medical staff quickly came forward to examine him, then announced, "The patient has passed away. I'm sorry..."

Hearing that, Freya felt her world crumble.

No matter how others tried to persuade her, Freya clung tightly to Duncan's hand and refused to let go.

"No, I won't allow you to take him away.

"He cooked food for me just yesterday. How could he possibly be dead?"

The medical staff couldn't do their work and could only ask Freya's family to help separate Freya from Duncan.

Watching her father covered in a white sheet, Freya collapsed to the ground...

After that, Freya seemed to become numb to everything around her.

Freya felt as though she and others lived in the same space, but there was a layer of film separating them. She couldn't hear the sounds of the outside world, and everything felt unreal.

In just one week, Freya lost a significant amount of weight.

Everything felt like a dream to her, and she wished to wake up from this nightmare as soon as possible...

On the other side, due to spending the entire night soaked in cold water, Hayden's arms became infected with knife wounds. Upon leaving the hotel, he developed a high fever and was subsequently admitted to the hospital.

For a week, his condition had been fluctuating, with only brief moments of clarity.

When his condition finally improved slightly, Hayden immediately searched for his phone.

"Where's my phone? Bring it to me!" Hayden commanded his assistant.

Hayden had been in the hospital for several days without any news or contact from Freya. He was worried that she would be anxious, scared, or overthinking about something.

But when the assistant brought the phone, Hayden realized that there were no missed calls or unread messages from Freya on his phone.

"Did you touch my phone?" Hayden angrily stared at his assistant.

The assistant shook his head, saying, "No, Mr. Gollust. I did charge your phone these past few days, but I didn't deal with any of the messages. Besides, I don't know your unlock code."

The assistant had been with Hayden for many years and had always been loyal to him.

Even when Hayden left the Gollust Group, the assistant gave up a high salary to continue following Hayden.

So Hayden trusted the assistant's words.

However, Hayden looked at his phone in bewilderment. "Then why hasn't Freya called me even once?"

Chapter 1063 Sudden Death!

Hayden and Freya spoke on the phone at least three times a day ever since their university days.

Sometimes, when Hayden was busy, Freya would take the initiative to call him.

It was rare for them not to talk for a whole week like this.

Even when Hayden and Maura were engaged, and Freya had intense conflicts with him, such a situation never occurred.

Hayden even went to check their last conversation record, but the result still showed it was a week ago.

Hayden decided to call Freya, but a mechanical voice told him, "Sorry, the number you dialed is unavailable!"

"Unavailable? What's going on?" Hayden became increasingly anxious.

At that moment, his assistant, who had been hesitant to speak, finally said, "Mr. Gollust, there have been escalating rumors on the internet about you and Miss Chambers rekindling your old romance. I suspect Miss Mcbride might have seen this news and got angry."

"What news? Let me see!" Hayden was furious.

In fact, Hayden had a hunch that Maura might have another move up her sleeve and had planned to deal with it after he got out.

However, Hayden fell ill right after leaving the hotel, and he was sick until now.

The assistant quickly handed his phone to Hayden and said, "Reporters captured photos of you and Miss Chambers entering the hotel together, and they also said that you two stayed there until dawn and then left separately."

The assistant added, "What's strange is that after the news broke, netizens overwhelmingly criticized Miss Mcbride as the third party. So I suspect Miss Chambers might have hired online trolls to guide public opinion."

Hayden quickly skimmed through the news and realized that the assistant's analysis was correct.

He did need to hold Maura accountable, but Hayden knew what mattered more at the moment was to meet Freya and make sure she was safe.

That was right!

Since Hayden heard that Freya's phone number had become unavailable, he felt extremely uneasy.

Hayden's intuition told him that Freya might not just be angry at him.

Therefore, unless he saw Freya standing in front of him safe and sound, Hayden couldn't calm down.

Ignoring the doctor and assistant's attempts to discourage him, Hayden insisted on checking out of the hospital and then asked his assistant to drive him directly to Freya's hometown.

When Hayden's car entered the village, everything here seemed to be the same as before, but Hayden's intuition told him otherwise.

Especially the way those villagers looked at him.

Those unfriendly looks made Hayden worried.

However, Hayden comforted himself, thinking that it was because the news had spread around the village, so the villagers must have thought he was a heartless man. Hayden didn't think it would be a big deal. He believed that as long as he explained everything to Freya and the villagers, everything would return to normal.

But when his car arrived at the front gate of the McBride House, Hayden realized that things were not as simple as he expected.

Hayden saw everyone inside the McBride House dressed in black.

This was a symbol of a funeral!

Who had passed away?

Hayden quickly pushed open the car door and rushed into the McBride House, only to see Duncan's memorial photo displayed in the main hall.

Freya was in a black dress, sitting in front of a table, crying silently.

Maeve seemed unwell, leaning against a chair with the help of relatives.

Hayden's sudden entrance startled everyone, and they all looked at him in shock.

But Hayden seemed oblivious to their gaze as he stared at Duncan's photo in disbelief.

"No..."

Hayden still remembered that on the day he left the village, Duncan had told him that he temporarily disagreed with Hayden and Freya's relationship, asking him to sort things out before making any decisions. Yet, Duncan personally saw him off at the village entrance, repeatedly reminding him to drive safely.

Hayden could tell that Duncan had already treated him like a son, genuinely caring for him!

But how could such a kind and compassionate person suddenly pass away?

Chapter 1064 Was It his fault?

As Hayden looked at the man smiling in the photo, his eyes suddenly welled up with tears.

"What happened to Mr. McBride? Wasn't he always healthy?"

Hayden couldn't accept it. Duncan had passed away so suddenly.

However, the relatives of the McBride family stared at Hayden with cold eyes as if they believed he was feigning his grief.

Since no one talked to him, Hayden rushed to Freya.

"Freya, what happened to Mr. McBride? He said that his health was fine, and he could live for another thirty or forty years. How could this happen?"

Hayden squatted in front of Freya, but she just stared blankly at him like a soulless puppet.

Seeing Freya in this state, Hayden grew even more worried about her. He wanted to reach out and grab her hand.

But Freya seemed not to recognize him, remaining motionless.

Seeing Hayden try to grab Freya's hand, Maeve suddenly lost control. She rushed up and pushed Hayden away.

"Get out! Leave the McBride House immediately."

Facing Maeve's outburst, Hayden was confused. "Mrs. Maeve McBride, these past few days..."

Hayden wanted to explain why he hadn't shown up for so many days and also wanted to explain the news.

He believed that Maeve's anger and sadness were due to his disappearance during this period and the fake news.

Hayden thought that as long as he explained clearly, they would forgive him.

But before Hayden could finish his sentence, Maeve hysterically shouted at him, "You're the one who caused all this, and you're responsible for what happened to Freya and her father. You executioner!

You have no right to enter our home again!"

Maeve not only shouted at Hayden but approached and hit him.

The people around were concerned about her reckless attitude, so they stepped in to stop and persuade Maeve.

"Things have already reached this point. Blaming him won't change anything."

Some people tried to reason with Maeve, while others tried to persuade Hayden.

"You better leave now and don't come back."

"That's right. Otherwise, not only will my aunt beat you up, but we won't be able to control ourselves either."

In the face of these well-intentioned persuasions, Hayden was still a bit unclear about the situation.

"What's happened? I haven't done anything wrong, so why can't I come here? This is Freya's home, and it's also my home."

Hayden pushed away the people trying to stop him and prepared to return to Freya's side.

Hayden had noticed earlier that Freya had obviously lost weight, and she looked not in a stable mood.

Hayden felt so sorry for Freya and desperately wanted to hold her in his arms and comfort her.

But the relatives of the McBride family continued to block Hayden's path. "You may not have hurt anyone by yourself, but what you did is just as bad."

"We beg you. You have already destroyed her family. They are now a widow and a fatherless girl and have already suffered enough. Please, just think of the kindness they used to show you. Just let Freya be. Let her have a chance to say goodbye to her father..."

Hayden originally wanted to ignore everyone's opposition and go to Freya's side to accompany her.

However, upon hearing these words, he froze.

Duncan had been really nice to Hayden. During the days Hayden worked in the village, Duncan had taught him a lot about being a decent person.

And so, in the end, Hayden didn't continue rushing toward Freya. Instead, he silently stood in front of Duncan's photograph...

Chapter 1065 What Will the Future Hold?

Hayden bowed deeply three times in front of Duncan's photo with sincere respect.

He silently told Duncan about everything that had happened in the past few days in his heart.

And in his mind, Hayden quietly told Duncan how grateful he was to him.

In Hayden's heart, he had long regarded Duncan as a respected elder to him.

It was because Hayden and Freya had not yet been married, and several obstacles remained unresolved in their path. Hayden was afraid that expressing his gratitude to Duncan would make him feel uneasy and put Duncan in a difficult position with his respect. Hence, he hesitated to demonstrate his appreciation.

However, Hayden felt that if he chose not to say that here, there might not have been another opportunity later on.

Hayden's three bows were filled with profound sadness. Seeing that, everyone present also felt sorry for him.

However, no matter what happened, Freya remained motionless.

She appeared to be absorbed in her own world, shedding tears mechanically as if everything around her had no connection to her.

Before departing from the McBride House, Hayden cast a long gaze at Freya. He observed her pale complexion. She appeared so fragile, as if a gust of wind could sweep her away at any moment.

Hayden felt deeply sorry for Freya and wanted to talk to her.

However, Freya remained immersed in her own world and showed no response to him.

In the end, Hayden could only leave the McBride House first and wait outside.

Of course, Hayden believed that Maeve and other relatives of the McBride family had such a strong opinion of him, not just because he hadn't shown up in the past few days.

While waiting outside the McBride House, Hayden asked his assistant to investigate the matter.

Before receiving any answer from his assistant, Hayden bumped into Georgia, who had come to the McBride House to attend Duncan's funeral.

After accompanying Freya to the hospital, Georgia also helped her in managing her father's post-incident affairs.

Georgia knew about Freya's pregnancy and understood that she didn't have time to take care of herself. Therefore, she insisted on coming to the McBride House every day under the pretext of helping out, but in reality, she wanted to check on Freya and the baby in her belly.

However, Georgia didn't expect to run into the missing father of the baby here!

Anger and resentment overwhelmed Georgia, and she slapped Hayden hard.

"How dare you show up here? If it weren't for you, Freya's father wouldn't be dead!"

Hayden's mouth was bleeding from Georgia's slap. However, he also got a chance to ask his lingering question, "Mrs. Serrano, since you slapped me, can you tell me how exactly I caused Mr. McBride's death?"

"If it weren't for you and your fiancée rekindling your old relationship and being caught by the reporters, causing Freya and her family to be targeted by online trolls and abused at their doorstep, how would Freya's father die while arguing with those people and getting pushed down?"

Georgia's fierce words finally made Hayden understand why everyone in the village looked at him with anger.

Hayden tried to explain, "I didn't rekindle my old relationship with Maura. She drugged me, and I've been in the hospital these past few days..."

But as he explained, Hayden suddenly realized that no matter what he said, he couldn't escape the responsibility for Duncan's death.

The explanation was useless at that moment

No explanation would bring Duncan back or repair the damage done to Freya.

Despair and helplessness overwhelmed Hayden as he closed his eyes, and tears rolled down from the corners of his eyes...

Seeing Hayden like this, Georgia lost interest in continuing to scold him and turned to enter the McBride House.

Not long after Georgia left, Hayden's assistant returned.

The results of his investigation exactly matched what Georgia had said.

At that moment, Hayden suddenly felt engulfed in darkness, unsure of what the future held for him and Freya...

Chapter 1066 Is It Fate?

Spending a week, Freya took care of Duncan's funeral.

During this week, she hardly spoke a word. It was almost like she was a puppet, doing whatever others asked of her.

After the funeral, Freya sat in Duncan's favorite recliner, blankly staring as tears fell down her cheeks.

"Freya, you need to eat something. You can't keep going like this. I am really worried," Maeve said, concerned about Freya's increasingly frail appearance.

Maeve was also heartbroken and didn't feel like living anymore.

However, her daughter was still young, and she couldn't let Freya wither away like this.

So, in order to help Freya regain her spirits, Maeve came up with the idea of moving away from this village.

That night, when Georgia came to visit Freya, Maeve brought up the idea.

Georgia immediately agreed and said, "I think it would be good for Freya to change the environment.

Plus, Auntie mentioned before that she wanted Freya to help out at the clinic. If you don't mind, you can move to New York. Auntie will definitely arrange a nice place for you."

Maeve didn't know that the "Auntie" Georgia mentioned was the famous cancer doctor Cora and thought it was just an ordinary doctor.

Nevertheless, Maeve agreed with Georgia's advice. Moving to New York would be better than staying in this old house, where Freya would constantly be reminded of her father and unable to move on.

But Georgia added, "But before we leave, let's talk to Hayden and make things clear. It's not good for him to keep waiting outside like this."

Hayden had been waiting outside these past few days, even though Maeve and other relatives of the McBride family hadn't treated him kindly. He still stayed there.

And with the sudden drop in temperature, it must have been uncomfortable for Hayden to be outside.

Furthermore, Hayden hadn't fully recovered physically and had lost a lot of weight in just a few days.

Seeing him like this, Georgia understood that he still cared about Freya deep down.

But sometimes, life could be cruel, and it was how fate worked.

Maeve learned from others that Hayden had held a live stream in front of the gate of the McBride House these past two days.

Hayden told the public that on that day, he had been drugged by Maura and hadn't done anything with her. It was Maura who had brought reporters and manipulated unfavorable comments about Freya.

Furthermore, Hayden shared screenshots of Maura's conversation, where she requested someone to provoke the incident at the McBride House, along with surveillance footage from the time of Duncan's accident through a live stream. By doing so, Hayden exposed Maura and the individuals involved in causing trouble, and he took legal action against them in court.

Maeve knew that everything Hayden had done was to clear Freya's name and bring justice to Duncan.

However, Maeve still couldn't forgive Hayden.

And she knew that Freya felt the same way.

Maeve knew that was why Freya blamed herself so much and immersed herself in her own world day after day.

But Maeve also thought Georgia had a point.

If they wanted Freya to start a new life, they had to cut ties with the past.

So, on that night, Maeve invited Hayden into the house.

At first, Hayden was somewhat happy, thinking that Maeve and Freya were going to forgive him.

But when Maeve explained that this was meant to sever ties between him and Freya, Hayden broke down completely.

"Mrs. Maeve McBride, Freya and I have a good relationship. Why do we have to break up? No... I don't want to break up!"

Chapter 1067 Break Up!

"Hayden, I understand that you have a deep affection for Freya, but her father's tragic demise has become a barrier between the two of you. Considering this, do you believe your relationship can continue unchanged?"

As soon as Maeve finished speaking, Hayden immediately replied, "Yes, I believe. I will love Freya even more and make up for everything I owe."

In order to avoid breaking up, Hayden even begged Maeve.

"Mrs. Maeve McBride, I beg you, as long as you don't let me break up with Freya, I am willing to do anything."

Maeve looked at Hayden's sad expression and felt sorry for him. "What are you doing? A man shouldn't beg anyone like that..."

Before Maeve could continue, Freya, who had been sitting quietly on the recliner, suddenly spoke up.

"Hayden, let's break up."

The hoarse, fragile, and helpless voice drew Hayden's attention, and he suddenly turned to Freya.

This was the first time in these past few days that Freya had spoken to Hayden.

However, it didn't bring any joy to Hayden, and all he felt was heart-wrenching pain.

"Freya, I don't want to break up! I know I was wrong, but I really can't be without you."

Hayden half squatted in front of the lounge chair, holding Freya's hand, almost begging, "Freya, give me one more chance, please?"

Freya didn't even look at him. "Hayden, I'm tired. Can't you let me live my life peacefully?"

Hayden desperately tried to seek Freya's gaze and noticed her hollow eyes staring blankly at the ceiling as if she were a lifeless puppet.

"No, I'm not going to break up. I love you, and you love me..."

Hayden grabbed Freya's hand and started hitting his own face, saying, "If you're angry, you can hit me however you want. But, you can't reject me..."

After staying in front of the McBride House for several days, Hayden's clothes were already wrinkled, and countless stubble appeared on his face.

Due to lack of sleep, his eyes were surrounded by deep dark circles, and his cheeks were visibly sunken.

Combined with his pleading tone, Hayden seemed utterly desperate.

However, Hayden never expected that in order to break up with him, Freya would pick up a sickle from the corner and hold it against her neck.

That not only startled Hayden but also made Maeve and Georgia panic.

"Freya, don't do something foolish."

"Freya, your father had passed away. If anything happens to you, what should I do?"

Hayden tried to approach Freya, attempting to snatch the sickle from her hand while she was distracted.

"Freya, please don't do anything foolish. Mr. McBride wouldn't want you to do such things if he were alive."

But Freya was determined. Seeing Hayden getting closer, she pressed the sickle tighter against her neck.

The sharp blade cut through her skin, and soon the blood flowed out.

"If you don't agree to break up, I will die in front of you."

Freya's determined expression frightened Hayden.

"Fine, I agree to break up with you..."

Hayden said as he tried to take the sickle away from her, but Freya moved aside. "You also have to promise never to appear in front of me again, or else I will still kill myself!"

Hayden looked at the determined expression on Freya's face and finally, in a hoarse voice, replied,

"Fine..."

Only then did Freya let go of the sickle?

Hayden immediately took the sickle away while Maeve and Georgia rushed to help treat Freya's wounds.

Once Freya's bleeding stopped, Hayden reminded Freya with tears in his eyes, "Don't do anything like this again. Remember to eat your meals properly. You have a weak respiratory system, so if it gets cold, make sure to wear an extra layer of clothing..."

Chapter 1068 A New Beginning

Hayden repeatedly reminded Freya of things she should pay attention to, and some details even made Maeve shed tears.

However, Freya remained expressionless, as if she hadn't heard his words at all.

When Hayden almost finished speaking, Freya asked him, "Are you done? If you're done, then leave."

Hayden's heart sank, but he still nodded. "Take care of yourself, I... I'm leaving."

Hayden didn't know how he managed to walk out of the McBride House that day.

All he knew was that when he walked out of the McBride House, he started running a high fever again and was taken to the hospital by his assistant.

On the other side, after ending her relationship with Hayden in a decisive manner, Freya followed Maeve and Georgia to New York.

It wasn't that Freya didn't love Hayden, nor that she didn't want to stay in the house with traces of her father, but she was worried that if she stayed any longer, not only would she collapse, but Maeve would too.

Now that Duncan was gone, Freya had to pull herself together and take care of her mother, Maeve.

Cora welcomed the arrival of Freya, and she immediately arranged a house near the clinic for her, making it convenient for Freya to commute.

To show her gratitude to Cora and Georgia, Freya put two hundred percent effort into her work.

During the day, Freya worked diligently at the medical clinic, and at night, she studied the ancient medical books Cora lent her with great seriousness.

During this time, Georgia asked her how to deal with the baby in her belly.

But Freya told Georgia, "On the day my dad passed away, I bled a lot, so I guess the baby was gone."

Georgia felt uneasy upon hearing this. "You should go to the hospital for a check-up to ensure there are no remnants of the baby and prevent any possible infections."

Freya agreed, saying, "Let's wait until this weekend. Dr. Lane's clinic has been very busy these days, and if I leave, they might not be able to handle it."

Hearing her say that, Georgia helped Freya schedule the examination for the weekend.

However, Freya didn't expect that the next day, while helping out at the clinic, she suddenly felt dizzy and then she fainted.

When she woke up, she had already been taken to the hospital by Cora,

"Why didn't you tell me you're pregnant?" Cora asked when she saw Freya wake up.

Freya felt embarrassed and said, "I thought I had already miscarried the baby before. I didn't expect it to still be there. I'm sorry if your clinic doesn't accept pregnant employees, then..."

Unexpectedly, Cora smiled at Freya's words.

"Where did you get that idea? I don't mind having pregnant employees. I just wanted to say that if you had told me earlier about your pregnancy, I would have arranged some lighter tasks for you."

Cora's words moved Freya to tears. "Dr. Lane, thank you so much."

Now Freya was alone in New York with her mother, starting everything anew.

Without a stable job, she wouldn't be able to sustain herself.

Cora smiled at Freya, saying, "No need to thank me. I've been through the same things, so I want to help people like me."

Back then, Cora was also pregnant and went to Leucrest Town in despair.

If it weren't for the help of John and Jerry, Cora and Martin wouldn't make it on their own.

Cora's experiences made her determined to extend a helping hand to those facing hardships, just as others had helped her overcome her own difficulties.

Seeing how closely Freya's circumstances resembled her own difficult past, Cora was driven to go above and beyond to help her.

Chapter 1069 His Revenge!

In order to make Freya more comfortable during her pregnancy, Cora not only gave her an extra day off every week but also secretly gave her a raise.

In addition, Freya was assigned the easiest tasks at the clinic.

Georgia was also asked to arrange for Maeve to help with cleaning at the clinic and earn an extra salary. This way, when Freya gave birth, she wouldn't have to worry too much about money.

With the help of Cora and Georgia, Freya gradually emerged from her past gloom, and her complexion became even more radiant.

As for Maeve...

At first, when she found out that Freya was carrying Hayden's child, it broke her heart.

But Freya said she didn't want to be in a relationship anymore.

If Maeve agreed to let her have the child, she would wholeheartedly raise the child herself.

If Maeve didn't agree, then she would have an abortion and dedicate herself to serving at the clinic as a way to repay Cora and Georgia's kindness.

After thinking it over, Maeve realized she couldn't accompany Freya for a lifetime. If Freya had a child, she wouldn't be too lonely after she passed away.

So later on, Maeve agreed to let Freya have the child.

Thus, in the ensuing days, Freya settled into a serene routine, juggling her pregnancy with her academic endeavors and leading a life of peace.

On the other hand, since breaking up with Freya, Hayden had become increasingly ruthless.

He used all means necessary to obtain any business opportunities he desired.

While working tirelessly for his company, he also made sure to deal with Maura.

Ever since Maura received the court summons, the Chambers family had been seeking a private settlement with the McBride family.

After all, as long as Freya and Maeve signed the letter of forgiveness, Maura could avoid going to jail.

Donny even personally came to this remote valley for Maura.

When Donny saw the situation in this poor village, he was confident that he could convince Freya and Maeve to let go of their grudges.

After all, thousands of dollars would be astronomical figures for people in such a poverty-stricken area.

However, Donny didn't expect that when he arrived at the address of the McBride House, they had already disappeared without a trace.

So, Donny had to ask around in the vicinity.

"Do you know where this family has gone?"

The neighbors knew that Duncan was killed because of the reason for a wealthy young lady, so they didn't have a good impression of these rich people now.

They even suspected that this wealthy person was the prime culprit.

Whenever Donny asked a question, everyone either shook their heads, waved their hands, or simply ignored him.

After searching fruitlessly, Donny had no choice but to reluctantly turn to Hayden.

Anyway, Freya was Hayden's ex-girlfriend, so Donny believed that Hayden must know her whereabouts.

But as soon as Donny arrived at the entrance of Hayden's new company, he was politely "escorted" out by security.

Donny was infuriated and questioned the security guard, "What does Hayden mean by this?"

The security guard replied, "Mr. Gollust means that your daughter caused the death of his father-in-law and the loss of his wife. He wants to destroy your entire family, so he won't bother to save the main culprit!"

Donny was furious, "They were never married, so how can they be called father-in-law and wife?"

Hayden had been engaged to Maura before, and he had never regarded them, the Chambers family, so highly.

But the security guard didn't bother to argue with him and just called a few colleagues to send Donny out together...

Chapter 1070 Sent to Prison

Standing in front of the office's floor-to-ceiling windows, Hayden saw at a glance that Donny had been embarrassingly kicked out of the company by security. Then he lit a cigarette and smoked it.

His assistant came back soon and said, "Mr. Gollust, I have invited Mr. Donny Chambers out according to your instructions."

"Okay. Next, announce the evidence we collected before. I want to watch their family fall into the abyss in the shortest possible time."

Hayden watched the evicted man, who was swearing downstairs, with a playful look on his lips.

It was a fine day, cloudless and sunny.

But no matter how bright the sunshine was, it couldn't illuminate Hayden's eyes and drive away the haze in his heart.

"Mr. Brian Gollust asks you not to be so ruthless as to make future enemies."

Brian had already sensed Hayden's intentions and tried to persuade him, but Hayden didn't listen, so he could only call Hayden's assistant.

"I currently only want to bring the Chambers family down with me. Release the evidence."

"Okay."

Under the resolution, all kinds of evidence about the Chambers family's tax evasion and bribery over the years were exposed.

Donny naturally had no time to care about Maura's affairs. He was busy dealing with contacting his connections every day, hoping to be spared.

However, the evidence was too abundant. If it was not dealt with fairly, the public would not be convinced.

As a result, Donny was sent to prison faster than Maura and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

Without Donny's help, Maura was soon sentenced to twenty years in prison.

Once Donny was imprisoned, the Chambers family was as loose as a basin of sand. All partnerships also faced high liquidated damages.

None of them were business geniuses, and they were afraid of getting themselves implicated as the investigation of the evidence went further.

So they quickly assessed a price and sold the Chambers Group.

Within a few days, Chambers Building was officially registered and renamed Freya Corporation.

The name of the company sparked associations. Many netizens began to dig deeper, and they indeed discovered that Freya Corporation was under the name of Hayden.

So did Hayden fly into a rage for avenging Freya and her father?

Many netizens even exclaimed: [I believe in love again!]

Brian found Hayden after knowing the fact discovered by netizens on the Internet.

"Now that you have avenged the humiliation inflicted upon you by Maura, it's time to seriously consider how you will lead your future days."

Brian also presented many photos of the daughters of wealthy families. "I think it would be nice to marry someone with a gentler temper, preferably someone who likes to do scientific research."

Recently, Hayden gained a reputation in the business world for his lightning-fast acquisition of the Chambers Group. Many wealthy families also took a fancy to his strength and proposed marriages one after another.

Brian also thought it was a good time for a business marriage. He could choose a daughter-in-law from a better family. Moreover, it could help Hayden get out of the shadow of his broken love as quickly as possible.

However, Hayden sneered, "Do you think I have done so much only out of my personal grudge with Maura?"

Brian was at a loss for words. Of course, he knew that Hayden targeted the Chambers family not only because of his personal grievances.

But at this moment, Brian didn't want to mention the McBride family and Freya.

He was afraid that mentioning the past would break Hayden's heart and that repeating it over and over again would make Hayden never forget her.

Just as Brian was about to change the subject, Hayden suddenly gave him a brown paper bag.

"What is it?" Brian was puzzled.

"It will make you miserable after you look at it."

After saying this, Hayden turned away.

Dubious, Brian opened the brown paper bag. "I don't believe anything can make me miserable."

He had already gained a lot of fame and wealth.

Among his children, Hayden was also very promising. He became famous by acquiring the Chambers

Group and stood out among the rich second-generations.

Therefore, Brian could not figure out anything in this world that could make him miserable.

Until then, he saw the familiar face in the photos in the brown paper bag...
