

Snatched 351

Chapter 351 An Terrible Idea

Cora asked, "Did she force my mom to eat the mango cupcakes?"

When she heard the nurse's words, she almost lost her temper.

She even rushed to Jane's office angrily to argue with her.

She thought that it was impossible for Flora to take the initiative to eat mango cupcakes. Jane must transfer her hatred for Cora towards Flora, so she harmed Flora on purpose.

The nurse stopped Cora and said, "Dr. Yoris didn't force her. I reminded Mrs. Flora Lane not to eat it, but she told me to mind my own business."

When Jane went to visit Flora, the nurse was also in the ward.

Seeing that Jane invited Flora to eat the mango cupcakes, the nurse wanted to stop her, but she was scolded by Flora and then kicked out of the ward.

"Dr. Lane, I'm not a nosy person, but I think Mrs. Flora Lane seems to like Dr. Yoris very much," the nurse said.

The nurse also wanted to say that Flora liked Jane far more than Cora.

However, she thought that since Cora was able to become a doctor, she must be a smart person.

Cora must have thought of the things that she could think of, so there was no need to say those harsh words directly.

The nurse paused, and Cora understood what she meant. She said, "I know. It's not your fault. You can take two days off, and I'll call you over when my mother comes out of the ICU."

"Thank you, Dr. Lane," the nurse said.

After the nurse left, Cora didn't go to find Jane. She leaned against the wall outside the ICU and closed her eyes sadly.

She thought of Flora's preference for Jane.

Even if Jane was the daughter of her rival and former lover, she didn't hold any grudges against her.

Even though the thing Jane gave her contained mango ingredients that would cause her severe allergies, she still ate it.

But what did Flora do to Cora, who was her biological daughter?

She didn't even consider Cora's happiness but forcibly asked her to break up with Byron.

At this moment, something flashed through Cora's mind.

A nurse saw her and greeted her. "Dr. Lane, why are you here?"

Cora opened her eyes and saw that Hazel, a nurse whom she had known in the cardiac surgery department, had changed into her daily clothes and was about to get off the elevator.

Cora said, "My mom is in the ICU again, so I came here."

Cora greeted her, and Hazel comforted her.

Cora said, "It's okay. You are going to get off work, right? Go back quickly, or you will fail to catch the last bus."

Hazel said, "Okay, you should go back to rest early. There are doctors on duty in the ICU all the time.

Your mother will be fine. Take care of yourself, and have a good rest."

"Okay, thanks," Cora said.

When she waved her hand to Hazel, she saw a small ornament on her bag.

"Hazel, where did you get this pendant?" Cora hurriedly called out to her.

Hazel smiled and said, "Dr. Yoris gave it to me. I think it looks pretty, so I hung it on the bag."

Hazel didn't know if it was her illusion, but she thought that Cora's eyes dimmed a lot after hearing her words.

That pendant was the one Flora had knitted before.

Cora thought that the pendant was knitted for her, so every time she saw it, she would hold it in her hand and observe carefully. She had seen every detail clearly, and it was impossible to mistake it.

She had been waiting for Flora to finish it and give it to her, but Flora said that she threw it away because it wasn't good. Cora even rummaged through the trash can to look for it.

Now Cora knew that Flora didn't throw it away but gave it to Jane.

However, Jane didn't like it, and she gave it to Hazel.

Suddenly, a terrible idea popped into Cora's mind. "Jane was Flora's biological daughter!"

Chapter 352 Ask Her Out

Cora also admitted that this idea was a bit ridiculous.

But the fact was that Flora treated Jane, the child of her romantic rival and ex, very well and even sacrificed her daughter's happiness to fulfill her.

However, she treated Cora, her daughter, more like treating the child of her romantic rival.

Cora aspired to be a doctor who cured diseases and saved lives, but Flora would enroll her in different after-school classes and do everything possible to stop her. She and Byron would finally get married, but Flora forced them to break up and even frightened Cora with death.

Furthermore, Flora had always been indifferent to Cora, but she was so gentle with Jane, who she had met several times, and even made seafood porridge and knitted a scarf for her.

Today, to please Jane, Flora even ate the mango pastry she was allergic to. And finally, she was sent to the ICU.

Another point was that Cora and Jane had the same birthday.

Just when Cora fell into a terrible thought and dazed, Hazel asked her nervously, "Dr. Lane, what's wrong?"

"Nothing." Cora came back to her senses and quickly comforted Hazel.

"You look terrible. Why don't I send you home to rest?" Hazel thought Cora had taken a hit by the news that Flora had entered the ICU again and wanted to settle her down and send her home.

But Cora rejected her, saying, "No, thanks. I still have some things to deal with here, and I will come home after I finish."

"Then I'll go back. If you need any help, call me anytime."

When Cora was transferred to the cardiac surgery department, Hazel was around Cora to help her.

She had a good impression of Cora and felt her life was tough, so she always helped Cora as much as possible.

"Okay. Thank you," said Cora.

After Cora watched Hazel leave, her smile disappeared without a trace.

Then, she called Jane to ask her out for a meal.

Jane was quite surprised to learn that Cora would invite her to a meal.

She also wanted to know Cora's motive for the sudden invitation, so she agreed.

The two agreed to meet at a restaurant near the hospital. When Jane arrived, Cora was already eating steak.

"Dr. Lane, what can I do for you?"

Cora asked the waiter to come and said to her, "Order first. We'll chat while eating. It's been a long day.

I'm starving."

Jane actually wanted to end their conversation quickly. But seeing Cora eating with gusto, she finally ordered a steak.

The steakhouse near the hospital was not high-end, but it served the food fast.

Less than ten minutes after Jane had ordered, her steak was served.

Cora even told her enthusiastically, "This mushroom soup is also good. Try it."

Jane ordered the food after arriving, so she didn't feel Cora could do anything and started eating.

But the delicious mushroom soup Cora had recommended tasted like essence to her. It was processed from instant food and couldn't compare with the one her chef made at home at all.

After one bite, Jane lost her appetite and threw the spoon aside.

"What do you want from me? Just tell me," Jane asked.

Cora glanced at the spoon Jane threw aside, which still had her lipstick marks on it, and then took a tissue to wipe her mouth.

"I just want to tell you that my mom was sent to the ICU today because of the mango pastries you gave her."

Chapter 353 Twin Sisters?

Jane frowned. She thought Cora wanted to put the blame on her, so she said unhappily, "She contacts many people and is exposed to many things every day in the hospital. Why do you just conclude that the mango pastries I sent made her allergic?"

"She has always been allergic to mangoes and can't eat a bit." Cora looked at Jane coldly.

"She ate it, and I didn't know she was allergic to mangoes! That's your return to kindness!"

Jane admitted that she had other motives for visiting Flora, but she really didn't expect Flora to be sent to the ICU because of the pastries she had sent.

She felt like Cora found fault with her and felt upset.

Hearing her almost cursing tone, Cora was sure what the nurse had said before was almost true.

Seeing Cora's cold stare, Jane became even more annoyed. "You don't really think that I put it into her mouth, do you? It is a public place. Do you think I would risk my career and future to kill an old, sick woman?"

Cora still remained silent. Jane even wanted to settle the problem with money. "Okay. How much do you want?"

While taking out the checkbook and about to write the numbers, she cursed unwillingly, "What the hell? I'm being blackmailed for sending pastries!"

But at this time, Cora told her, "I don't want to blackmail you, nor do I want your money."

"Then what do you want?" Jane felt wronged, so she almost exploded.

"I just want to tell you, don't send her mangoes or anything in mango flavor."

"That's it?"

"Yeah! Do you think I will ask you to take care of her with me? Are you willing?"

Cora's half-joking tone made Jane heave a sigh of relief.

But Jane still said, "I always feel you are weird today."

"Why? I'm not weird but pretty, right? That's why you copy my style!"

Cora's almost joking smile embarrassed Jane.

"I didn't copy!"

She finally understood that Cora asked her not to remind her not to send mangoes to Flora but to humiliate her.

"If you didn't, tell me what's with your hairstyle and clothes."

With Cora's reminder, Jane found that she wore a dress similar to the purple slim-fitting dress worn by Cora today.

But hers was mint green.

Moreover, she also had a perm on her hair end, almost exactly the same as Cora's.

"Others may be thinking you wanted to act my twin sister!"

"I didn't!" Even though Cora exposed her, Jane could only deny it.

It was too degrading for her to admit she copied Cora's style.

"Then don't dress like this anymore. I feel disgusted, even if it doesn't matter to you!"

Cora was almost merciless, making Jane very angry.

"The law doesn't stipulate only you can wear this kind of clothes and have this hairstyle."

"You're right. But don't you think it's ridiculous that you can only get Mr. Hansen's pity only by doing this?"

Cora spoke what was on Jane's mind, making her ashamed.

Under such circumstances, Jane couldn't continue having the meal with Cora.

"It's a waste of time and energy arguing with people like you," Jane said.

Then she took her bag and left.

After watching her leave, Cora paid the bill. Then she wrapped the spoon Jane had used in a tissue and took it away...

Chapter 354 Go for a Paternity Test

Early the next morning, Cora sent the fork, a toothbrush, and a hair to the paternity test center.

"Test the fork, the hair, and the toothbrush separately. When will I get the results?"

Cora's colleague said, "Dr. Lane, the results will be available in the afternoon the day after tomorrow at the earliest."

"Okay. Thank you."

Then, Cora left the hospital.

She was in a bad mood and didn't know how to face Flora.

The next day, Flora was out of danger and returned to her ward.

Cora hesitated momentarily but still went to see Flora.

Although Flora was out of danger, she still had many tubes in her.

Flora looked obviously much worse than the past two days. Her eye circles were obviously sunken, and even her hair was graying a lot.

After all, Flora had been her mother for more than 20 years. So when Cora saw her suddenly look a few years older, her heart relented.

Therefore, besides calling the nurse and asking her to come over, she asked the nurse to cook some vegetables and oatmeal that were easier to digest.

Probably hearing Cora's voice, Flora woke up.

"Are you all right? How do you feel?" Cora asked.

The moment Cora saw that Flora had woken up, she temporarily forgot Flora's preference for Jane.

However, after seeing Cora, Flora looked unhappy, and even her words were harsh.

"Don't worry. I won't die for the time being."

Her unkind tone made Cora uncomfortable. "What are you talking about? You were allergic because you ate the mango pastries Jane gave you, and I didn't force you to eat it."

"Yes. I was willing to eat what she gave and make myself like this!"

Flora refused to stop. She would have jumped high if it wasn't for the tubes on her body. "You think I don't know your plan because you get back together with Byron behind me?"

Cora's worry suddenly faded to nothing because of Flora's bad attitude.

"So you committed suicide again? Then why are you still cooperating with the treatment?"

Flora obviously didn't expect Cora to ask her that. She was taken aback for a second and said, "I can't die and let you be with him as you wish, can I?"

Cora found it ridiculous. She smiled, "You have done a lot to prevent me from being with Mr. Hansen and fulfill Dr. Yoris's wish. Who is your daughter, me or Dr. Yoris?"

Cora gave a strange half laugh, but her stare was cold.

She was observing Flora's expression, trying to get the answer from her face.

But Flora's expression remained unchanged. She just said, "What are you talking about? I won't let you be with him because I don't like seeing you steal someone else's boyfriend. After all, even though you get him, your relationship won't last long. Sooner or later, there will be retribution."

Cora wasn't sure whether Flora's psychological quality was excellent or whether there was no problem with her and Jane's backgrounds. She acted so calmly, and Cora couldn't catch anything wrong.

But once the seeds of doubt were planted, everything would be difficult to return to what it was before.

So regarding Flora's uprightness, she said, "You just need to pray that Dr. Yoris will not suffer retribution."

Byron had nothing to do with Jane from the beginning to the end, and she had explained it to Flora countless times.

But Flora refused to believe it and insisted on letting them break up.

So if there were retribution for someone who stole someone else's boyfriend, it should be Jane who would suffer it.

But when Flora heard this, she looked unhappy. "Why do you always involve Dr. Yoris? Nothing here is personal."

"Think and do whatever you want. I'm going to the emergency room."

Cora was still angry, so she left the ward without even looking at Flora.

Unexpectedly, she ran into Byron in the elevator...

Chapter 355 Never Appear Again!

Byron stood in the elevator, his tall figure blocking most of the light from the top. Cora had an unnatural look at the sight of him.

This was the first time they met after having sex on Breezy Tides Island.

She didn't know how to face Byron and was also worried that Flora would find out that they met in the hospital so blatantly.

Although they met by chance, Flora could be unreasonable and would condemn her.

Cora turned her face away to avoid looking at Byron, who always made her heartthrob, and she didn't want to take the elevator with him.

But at this time, a medical staff member in the elevator saw that Cora hadn't entered for a long time and said, "Dr. Lane, come in."

"Well..." Cora wanted to find an excuse not to leave, but she found Byron didn't even look at her.

Byron, who initiated the sex, wasn't guilty at all. So she had nothing to be guilty of.

So Cora ended up on the same elevator.

As the elevator went up, Cora tried not to pay attention to Byron beside her.

The elevator stopped after one floor up, and the medical staff left.

As a result, only Byron and Cora were left in the small and confined elevator.

Cora wanted to escape from the weird confined space. Unexpectedly, Byron suddenly pounced on her and trapped her in his arms like a beast ambushing in the dark.

"What are you doing? Don't touch me!"

Cora struggled desperately. But she had to admit that as the two got closer, the smell of aftershave and tobacco smell on Byron rushed into her nose, and it was so familiar that her heart trembled.

"You exhausted me that day, and I need to rest for a few days. Don't worry. I won't do anything to you. I just wanted to hug you."

Even though Byron said so, he still hugged Cora around her waist tightly.

Cora knew Byron was talking nonsense in a serious manner.

It was another story of who exhausted whom that day. Cora didn't believe he needed to rest for a few days because she had felt his erection.

"We have broken up. Stay away from me!"

She struggled harder.

Byron whispered in her ear, "I'm very sorry for what happened that day, so I will be responsible for you."

After thinking about it for a long time, he still felt he couldn't move on, even though she dumped him several times, which made him feel quite humiliated.

So he found himself an out, trying to trick her back with the excuse of being responsible for her.

But Cora slapped him during the struggle.

The moment he was slapped, both of them were a little stunned, especially Cora.

She never expected that she would slap Byron again.

And Byron looked scarier than the beast about to swallow her.

"Well... I didn't mean it." Looking at him for a while, Cora felt much sweat on her back.

But she could only stammer, "I think it's pointless to keep badgering each other. We have broken up, and we will be in the same situation even if we get back together. There is nothing new except wasting each other's time of time."

"So this is your answer?" Byron's eyes were still as sharp as a knife.

Cora drooped her eyes, avoiding his scary look. "Yes."

Before the paternity test results came out, she didn't quite believe Jane was Flora's biological daughter.

So she could only firmly reject Byron to prevent Flora from committing suicide in despair.

"Then never appear in front of me again!" Every cell in Byron's body seemed to be shouting.

After he shouted, the elevator door just opened, and he left quickly.

Seeing Byron drifting away, Cora had mixed feelings in her heart.

It was the sternest attitude Byron had been towards her since they met.

He should have been completely disappointed in her.

But what could she do?

She couldn't disregard Flora's life.

Cora closed her eyes and opened them after a while.

At this time, there was no sadness in her eyes, and she was full of energy and devoted herself to her busy work.

Chapter 356 The Paternity Test Result Is Out!

While working, Cora had been waiting for the paternity test results.

Unexpectedly, before the results came out, she received bad news about Gabe.

"What? Gabe was arrested again? What's going on?"

The person who called Cora was Thea Lyons, Gabe's personal assistant during this time.

Cora heard that they were together after sharing hard times and moved in together.

When Gabe called Cora two days ago, he said he would propose to Thea at the end of the year.

Cora was looking forward to their wedding. Unexpectedly, the bad news came first.

"He called me the day before yesterday and said the financial situation of the Lane family would be better after the big order was finalized. What happened?"

Thea was as anxious as Cora.

"There was a problem with the big order. Someone reported that there was something in it. Then people from the authority took Gabe away."

Thea continued saying in a voice choked with tears, "I've asked everyone I know for help, but I still couldn't meet Gabe. Cora, I wouldn't have found you unless I had to, and Gabe wouldn't allow me to find you, either. But I really can't think of a way."

"I see. Thea, I'll see if I can contact anyone, and I'll talk to you later."

After hanging up the phone, Cora thought about the only few people she knew.

The only one who could help seemed to be Byron.

But she couldn't find Byron directly...

At this time, Sally saw that Cora was hesitantly looking at the phone with red eyes, so she asked about the situation.

Cora explained everything, and Sally immediately took out her phone.

"Sally, will this implicate your family?"

"Don't worry. I just let them check."

The situation of Sally's family was a bit special because of their status. Even though they had money, they couldn't spend it, or some people would catch their impropriety.

And they had a strong social network. They just needed to say something and could settle everything they wanted, but some people would easily get their impropriety.

But an investigation wouldn't cause a problem.

Sally got a reply after only more than ten minutes she made the call.

"Cora, there is nothing wrong with your brother's goods. It's just that someone wants to make a fuss about it."

"Who is it?"

"The Yoris family."

Then Sally scolded, "Does the Yoris family have a death wish? They never stop messing around!

Believe it or not, I'll tell my grandpa and ruin them."

"Forget it. Don't make things difficult for your grandpa."

"I even found out that they were making messes. Don't you want to do something? Are you going to let them continue belittling you?"

Sally was very annoyed and wanted to bring the Yoris family down.

But Cora pondered momentarily and said, "I just need to know the source. You'll be wasted in dealing with such a small matter. I can handle it myself."

Cora thought about it for a while, realizing it was probably because Cora suddenly asked Jane out to make her undefended and scolded her, so Jane was resentful, which implicated Gabe.

Since she had made it happen, Cora would find a way to settle it and wouldn't implicate Sally and her family.

She was going to go to Jane to explain when her phone rang.

As soon as Cora answered the phone, the person over the phone informed, "Dr. Lane, the paternity test result is out."

Chapter 357 Not Her Biological Mother!

Cora felt her heart jump up and down on the way to the identification center.

She hoped for a certain result and was afraid of that result because she didn't want human nature to be so bad and complicated.

When she took the kraft paper bag from the colleague in the identification center, she was really anxious.

But when she opened it and saw the results, she calmed down a lot.

It turned out that Jane was Flora's biological daughter, and Cora and Flora were only close relatives.

In other words, Cora was the daughter of Sara and William.

Actually, thinking of the difference Flora treated her and Jane, she had already guessed the answer, but she didn't expect Flora to be so daring...

"Dr. Lane, is there something wrong with you?" Her colleague was a little worried because Cora hadn't responded after seeing the result, and her face was pale.

"I'm fine. I just haven't had a good rest these days."

She was afraid of causing trouble, so she didn't write her real name on the things she had sent for the paternity test. The hospital belonged to the Yoris family. If she hadn't done that, the Yoris family would get the results soon.

Honestly, she thought about sending the result to William to see if the Yoris family would regret what they had done to her.

But on second thought, she found the idea crazy because she hated the Yoris family from the bottom of her heart.

If they knew about this truth, it would be troublesome if they found her.

So after thanking her colleague with a smile, she went to Flora.

Flora recovered very well, and the tubes had been removed.

But when she saw Cora, she still had a poor attitude toward her.

She said harshly, "What are you doing here again? Are you trying to piss me off? I've told you not to come to me unless you make a clean break with Byron."

Cora looked at Flora's vicious look, wondering how she had said those words against her conscience.

After looking at Flora for a while, she suddenly sneered and said, "You've always wanted me to break up with Mr. Hansen because you want Dr. Yoris to get him, right? Don't put on such a dignified look.

That's disgusting!"

"What's with your attitude? I'm your mom. I did everything for your own good."

Seeing that Cora didn't speak, Flora became unreasonable, saying, "You dared to talk to me like that.

Are you planning to continue your relationship with Byron? As I said, if you dare to have any connection with Byron, you'll watch me die."

She thought Cora would only compromise desperately and powerlessly and promised not to have any contact with Byron in the future.

However, Cora sneered and said, "Then go and get yourself killed!"

Flora was soundless.novelbin

It was too much for her to handle.

She didn't want to die!

If she died, she couldn't get rid of Cora, who was an obstacle on the way leading to Jane's happy life.

Flora got angry. She immediately padded the bed and sat up, asking Cora, "Cora, what did you say? Do you still see me as your mom?"

"You're not my biological mother. So what if I don't care about you?"

Cora didn't want to turn against Flora.

Even if she switched her and Jane out of bad motives, at least Flora watched her grow up.

But Flora repeatedly wiped away Cora's last trace of kindness towards her.

"You..." Flora wanted to refute it, but after thinking about it, she realized what Cora had said. Her eyes widened, and she stared at Cora in a panic.

"Why are you talking about? How could I not be your biological mother? I..."

Cora didn't know if she was confusing Cora or herself. Anyway, Cora didn't want to hear those words anymore.

Before she could finish speaking, Cora threw the paternity test result on her hospital bed, "Here is the DNA result. Do you want to see it? It's new."

Chapter 358 Deserve to Get Hurt?

When Flora hurriedly flipped through the paternity tests, Cora stared blankly at a point, mocking herself, "I always thought it was because you were sick that you radiated your love for me to Jane.

Even though many of your actions seemed unreasonable, I have always been looking for reasons and excuses for you, thinking that you love me, but your mental instability made you become like this.

"Do you believe it? If you had given me the scarf knitted for Jane, I might not have taken the paternity test because of the scarf. But you insisted on giving her the scarf. However, she didn't cherish it and gave it to someone else."

Flora looked at the paternity test but actually knew the result very clearly.

It was just that when Cora said that Jane gave the scarf to someone else, she looked at Cora in astonishment.

But Cora didn't even look at her. She continued mocking herself, "But it's good. It's like a slap that woke me up. In this way, I don't have to continue being emotionally self-moved and waiting foolishly for my mom's love that never belongs to me. And I don't have to be so miserable because of my mom, who never belongs to me, and be trapped by her."

Flora watched Cora grow up and understood her.

Hearing her words, Flora guessed Cora would make a move next. She asked her angrily, "What are you trying to do? I warn you, don't try to steal Jane's fiancé!"

Seeing Flora suddenly regain her aggressive tone, she laughed, "Did I expose your secret so you don't even pretend?"

"What do you care?" said Flora.

"I don't care, but I'm going to steal her fiancé!"

Now that she had been free from the ridiculous mother-daughter relationship, Cora would naturally do whatever she wanted.

"Don't you dare! Believe me or not, I..."

Cora assumed she would threaten her with suicide. But she didn't want to hear those words anymore.

She said, "You want to threaten me with suicide again? Go ahead. You are not my mother. Why should I worry about your life?"

"But you can't steal Jane's fiancé. If you feel angry, do anything you want to me. Jane is innocent."

Flora's words only disappointed Cora. "Jane, Jane, Jane. You only care about her. When you were seriously ill, I was the only one who paid for your medicine, hospitalization, and recuperation expenses.

What was Jane doing at that time?"

"It's not Jane's fault. She doesn't know about this at all." Flora's eyes were red with anxiety.

"Yes, she didn't know this. So she didn't take responsibility for this part. Why don't I tell her now and see if she can work as hard for you as I did?"

Cora wouldn't have felt so wronged if Flora hadn't kept favoring Jane.

But Cora mentally broke down when hearing her say how innocent Jane was and that she couldn't be hurt.

Jane was innocent. Was Cora guilty?

Jane couldn't be hurt. Did she deserve to get hurt?

At that moment, she really wanted to take Jane before Flora and let her see what choice Jane would make after knowing her identity!

Actually, Cora was indeed about to do that.

However, as soon as she ran to the ward door, Flora quickly grabbed her. "You can't go to Jane, and you can't let her know about this!"

Chapter 359 Set Yourself Against

Cora suddenly turned to look at Flora with a sneer.

"You are afraid that Jane will think you are psychologically distorted and stay away from you after she knows the truth. You are also afraid that the current situation of the Lane family will ruin her bright future."

Flora froze. Obviously, what Cora said revealed her real thoughts.

"I was not reconciled to the result in those years. I stayed with William first, and he also said he would marry me. But he went on a blind date, and the woman was Sara!"

Probably it was because Flora was still afraid that Cora would expose everything regardless. She changed the subject and talked about her past, which she least wanted to be known.

"Sara and I are half-sisters, but our situation is quite different. She is the child of the legal wife and the eldest daughter of the Moore family. Wherever she goes, she is the focus of others' attention. But I am the illegitimate daughter. The Moore family refused to recognize me. My father also didn't allow me to call him Dad in front of outsiders. Everyone looked down upon me and laughed at me.

"Sara and I are the same age and were still in the same class. Others flattered her but despised me. I swallowed all insults to keep what I wanted. But she still snatched William away from me and made me bear the infamy of a mistress. She ruined my reputation. I couldn't even have a normal marriage. In the end, I could only marry a widower of the Lane family."

Cora had learned about this story from William.

But the grief in Flora's tone made her know that she still hated William. She didn't agree with what Flora had done.

"No matter how unwilling you are, you shouldn't have chosen this method. You could snatch William back from Sara and break up with him to vent your anger! But you chose the most stupid way. You exchanged the children of the two families. Are you sure you have punished them?"

Cora raised her voice hysterically because she was the only victim of the revenge.

The Yoris family was very kind to Jane.

But Cora's life was miserable.

Perhaps from the very beginning, Flora had no good intentions and even wanted to kill her.

It was a miracle for Cora to survive till now.

Compared to this, the obstacles she met in her studies at that time were nothing.

"I regret it too. But what else can I do?"

Flora covered her face and wept.

In fact, after she exchanged Jane and Cora, she missed her own daughter every day.

For a time, she always sneaked around Jane's school to catch a glimpse of her from a distance.

To this day, she was not sure now whether she was punishing Sara and William or punishing herself by exchanging children.

But even though Flora said so much, Cora was not moved. She said calmly, "Now, there is a chance to get everything back on track."

Flora looked up at her in astonishment. "Get everything back on track?"

Then, Jane will become the poor daughter of the bankrupt Lane family from the rich young lady of the Yoris family!

"No!

"No!

"I can't let it happen!"

With this in mind, Flora fell to her knees.

"Cora, please don't expose these things. Please! I beg you to have pity on me."

Jane's fate would be ruined once the paternity test report was exposed.

Flora didn't want to see such a result, so she could only plead with Cora.

"Why don't you have pity on me?" Cora roared desperately.

"I know I was wrong. Cora, you are a good girl, and you won't care about it."

Flora knelt on the ground, hugged Cora's legs, and cried bitterly.

She knew Cora was sharp-tongued but tender-hearted. So she knew how to make Cora compromise.

But this time, Cora's reaction surprised Flora. Even though she banged her head on the ground, Cora looked at her indifferently and did not stop her crazy action.

The key was that when her knees were hurt, Cora still had no intention of pulling her up.

"I'm sorry, I'm afraid I have to let you down this time. The more you try to stop me, the more I have to set yourself against!"

Chapter 360 I Don't Need Your Consent

Flora looked up at Cora in astonishment. There was already a bloodstain on her forehead, and the swollen part looked scary.

In the past, Cora would be extremely anxious when she knew Flora was injured and would immediately put down what she was doing to help her treat the wounds.

But at this moment, she glanced at her forehead coldly and said, "I want to be with Byron."

Neither the Yoris family nor Flora wanted Cora to be with Byron.

But Cora would not let things go as they expected.

In addition, as long as she was with Byron, Gabe's affairs could be solved easily.

But she didn't know if Byron would reject her.

"No. You can't do that!" Flora was angry when she heard this.

She had been in contact with Byron, thinking his character was quite good.

If Jane and Byron could get married, then she would have no regrets.

"Humph! You don't allow it! So what? I don't need your consent now!"

Flora wanted to say something, but Cora said before she could speak, "If you anger me, I'll go to Sara and expose the matter. Then, you will know if Jane can still be the rich young lady of the Yoris family."

Cora didn't go to the Yoris Mansion and expose this matter. That wasn't because of Flora's begging and kneeling.

The main reason was that she didn't like the Yoris family, let alone come to get close to them.

After saying that, Cora didn't bother to glance at Flora anymore. She turned around and left the ward.

Flora wanted to chase her. But from what Cora said, she understood that she didn't plan to expose everything for the time being. So she gave up chasing her.

As for what to do next, she felt that she had to consider carefully.

As soon as Cora came out of the ward, she saw a nurse walking towards her anxiously.

"Dr. Lane, are you okay?" The sound in the ward just now was loud. The nurse was quite worried that Flora would commit suicide again.

"I'm fine. She won't make trouble again."

From Flora's desperate appearance for Jane, Cora thought her previous mental problems were caused by this.

Today, Cora had half uncovered the truth. In the following days, Flora would only worry about Jane's situation and was afraid that she could not protect Jane if she died. So she was sure that Flora would not dare to commit suicide again.

"That's good." The nurse also breathed a sigh of relief.

After all, Flora was a patient in the burns unit. If she committed suicide, every medical staff in the burns unit would be held accountable.

Seeing that Cora was about to leave, the nurse hurriedly handed over the bill. "Dr. Lane, this is the payment notice."

Flora stayed in the ICU for the past few days and spent all the money Cora had transferred into the account.

The payment notice was just handed out today.

Cora frowned and glanced at the payment notice, thinking she was not the person to bear the cost.

After thinking for a while, she took the payment notice and went to the cardiac surgery department to find Jane.

Jane had just diagnosed the last registered patient and planned to visit the inpatient department.

Cora suddenly entered her office.

"Dr. Lane, why are you in such a hurry?" Jane looked calm as if she knew Cora would come to her today.

Cora glanced at Jane's calm appearance. Then, she slapped the payment notice on the desk. "You are responsible for her medical expenses in the future."

Jane picked up the payment notice and looked at it. She pushed it back when she saw the patient's name was Flora.

"Dr. Lane, maybe you got dizzy in a hurry. It is your mother's payment notice. What am I responsible for her medical expenses?"

Cora didn't answer her question. "You don't seem surprised that I came to you. So you also know about my brother's matter, right?"