

Snatched 421

Chapter 421 Feel Pity for Him

As soon as Byron finished speaking, everyone in the conference room was dumbfounded, including Cora.

She didn't expect that Byron would let her stay by his side all day long in order to fulfill his promise to her today.

She started to hesitate again, and she was not sure whether to continue with her plan.

Elena was also stunned.

She had been following Byron since the branch company of Sunda Group in Kinton was established.

When Sunda Group established a branch in New York, Byron personally appointed her to come here as the general manager.

Moreover, she was also appointed by Byron as the general manager of Phoenix Project.

Her ability had always been recognized by Byron, and she had always been proud of it.

However, today, Byron wanted to drive her away just to keep another woman in the conference room.

Elena was heartbroken, but she didn't want to give up her years of hard work, let alone the opportunity to stand by Byron's side.

In the end, she sat back in her seat, but she secretly cast a vicious gaze on Cora.

In her opinion, it was all Cora's fault.

Cora must be dissatisfied that such an outstanding woman around Byron, so she tried every means to get Byron to drive Elena away.

Elena thought, "Let's wait and see!"

They got married, so what?

One day, she would replace Cora and stand beside Byron.

Byron looked at the other executives and asked, "Do you have any objections?"

There was no sound in the conference room.

In order to let his wife stay with him, Byron even wanted to kick out Elena, who had been around him for many years, so how dare other people have objections?

They still wanted to stay in this lucrative project.

Seeing that no one had any objections, Byron announced, "Let's start the meeting."

The meeting went on for over an hour.

While Elena and the other executives were talking, Byron was worried that Cora would feel bored, so he asked Carter to send her some snacks and magazines.

The treatment Cora got made people envious!

After the meeting, Byron took Cora back to his office.

He asked, "Are you bored?"

Byron held Cora in his arms, and they stood in front of the floor-to-ceiling window where they could have a view of the scenery in New York.

"No," Cora said.

Actually, she wanted to say that it was very boring.

Cora tried hard to analyze the numbers they mentioned.

But she didn't study finance, so she couldn't figure out what those numbers meant.

She admired Byron very much. He looked distracted, but he was able to accurately capture the problems of the numbers reported by those people every time.

Byron said, "There will be a meeting later on about other projects."

Hearing Byron's words, Cora was surprised.

She didn't know if it was her illusion, but she felt that Byron seemed to be reminding her.

It shouldn't be possible, right?

No one was willing to give up the benefits that he had got, especially a capitalist like Byron.

Therefore, it was impossible for him to blatantly tell her everything after knowing her motives.

"What's wrong?" Byron asked.

Aware of Cora's abnormality, he straightened her body and made her face him.

Cora said, "Nothing. Do you have so many meetings every day?"

She hastily hid her expression and even reached out to fiddle with Byron's tie.

"So many? When I'm busy, there are even more," Byron said.

His words made Cora feel pity for him.

No one could gain achievements and wealth easily.

However, she was going to destroy what Byron finally got after hard work.

Chapter 422 Are You Pregnant?

When Cora started to hesitate again, Carter came in and informed Byron to go to another meeting.

Cora said, "I won't participate in this meeting so as not to make everyone unhappy."

She proposed not to participate in the meeting because this meeting had nothing to do with Phoenix Project, and it didn't matter whether she attended or not.

Besides, at the end of the meeting about Phoenix Project just now, Byron ordered someone to sort out the meeting materials and send them later.

Cora wanted to wait for the materials in the office.

Byron said, "If someone is unhappy, I'll kick him out. Don't worry."

Carter couldn't help but look at Byron. He didn't expect that Byron to do such a thing.

Cora persuaded him, "No need. I'm bored, so I want to stay here."

In the end, Byron was convinced and took Carter to the meeting.

Cora stayed alone in Byron's office.

About an hour later, the secretary sent the meeting materials for Phoenix Project.

The secretary said, "Mrs. Hansen, I'll put the materials here first. Would you like juice, coffee, or milk?

Just tell me."

The secretary was very considerate, and she asked Cora what she liked to drink.

However, Cora wanted to finish her task quickly, so she refused. "Thank you. I don't want to drink. You can go do your work."

She had to take pictures of the meeting materials as soon as possible because she didn't know when Byron would come back.

The secretary said, "If you have anything to do, just call me."

"Okay, thank you," Cora said.

After Cora sent the secretary away, she started flipping through the materials and took photos.

About ten minutes later, Byron returned to the office.

After he came in, he glanced at the meeting materials on the table before walking toward Cora.

Cora felt like her heart was about to stop at that moment.

Fortunately, when Byron came to her, he didn't talk about the meeting materials but asked her, "What do you want to eat at noon? I'll take you out to eat."

"No," Cora said.

She had a poor appetite for the past few days, and occasionally she would retch.

She thought it was because she worried too much in her heart.

Byron said, "Let's go eat your favorite pizza."

He didn't want Cora to eat too much unhealthy food, but seeing her bad appetite recently, he reluctantly decided to let her eat something she liked.

Hearing Byron's words, Cora didn't refuse.

During this meal, she only ate two slices of pizza because she felt that they had a strange taste.

However, the next day, when she went to work, the sandwich Sally gave her also had the same smell that made her sick.

After eating it, Cora ran into the bathroom.

"Cora, what's wrong with you?" Sally asked.

She was very anxious. Cora finally returned to work with her, but she went to the bathroom after eating a sandwich.

Cora said, "I'm fine. There seems to be a strange smell in your sandwich."

"A strange smell?" Sally was confused, and she picked up the sandwich and sniffed it again and again.

She said, "I bought the ingredient early in the morning, and the recipe is the same as before."

Sally paused and suddenly thought of something. Grasping Cora's hand, she said with excitement,

"Cora, are you pregnant?"

Chapter 423 Feel Sad

"Pregnant?" Cora asked.

She was dazed for a while before coming back to her senses.

"No way!" She said.

It was only this month that she and Byron had sex.

Although they hadn't done contraception recently, she wouldn't be pregnant so soon, right?

Looking at Cora's expression, Sally knew that she was also suspicious, so she suggested, "Let's buy a test stick after getting off work."

Cora nodded. She couldn't wait to know if she was pregnant.

If she was not pregnant, it was fine.

But if she was, what should she do?

Because she was hesitating whether she should break up with Byron if she was pregnant, she was in a trance state this day.

In the evening, she had a faint abdominal pain and hurried to the bathroom, only to find blood on her underwear.

She was in her period.

Therefore, she was not pregnant.

While she breathed a sigh of relief, she felt disappointed.

Since she wasn't pregnant, she had no reason to continue to stay with Byron.

Fearing that she would hesitate again, she sent the photo of the document of the Phoenix Project that she took yesterday to Gabe after coming out of the bathroom.

Receiving those photos, Gabe was shocked and called Cora.

He asked, "Cora, how did you get this?"

Cora said, "A friend of mine works in Sunda Group's branch in New York, and I asked for her help."

Cora paused and asked, "Gabe, are these materials useful?"

Gabe said, "Yes. But as I told you last time, with the current situation of our group, it is impossible to do it alone."

In other words, if they wanted to fight against Byron, they must find a company that they knew well and that shared the same goals with them.

There was an answer in Cora's heart.

She said, "Gabe, I know a company, and they will cooperate with us..."

When the phone call with Gabe ended, Cora was in a daze.

She never thought that she and Byron would turn against each other.

When she was in a daze, Sally was carrying her bag and pulling her hand to go out.

Sally said, "Why are you still here? We have to buy a pregnancy test stick."

When Sally thought that Cora was going to be a mother, she was very excited this afternoon and even went to the pediatrician's side to help. She said she wanted to practice so that she would know how to take care of the child in the future.

Cora said, "Sally, no need. I'm in my period."

"What?" Sally was surprised.

She suddenly felt disappointed.

Hearing Cora's weak voice, she knew that Cora must feel sad.

She quickly comforted her, "It's okay. You and Byron have just got married, and there will be many chances in the future. Don't worry..."

She hoped to mobilize Cora's emotions and cheer her up.

When Cora heard Sally's words, she thought about sending the contents of the Phoenix Project to Gabe, and she smiled bitterly. "There will be no chance anymore."

Byron was such a proud person, and he defended Cora in front of his subordinates so much. If he knew that Cora had destroyed the project they had worked hard for a long time, he would never forgive her.

At that time, he would divorce her.

That was fine. Cora wanted to sever her relationship with Byron now.

Without children, they would have no burden.

Everything was as she wished.

However, why would she feel so sad?

Chapter 424 Evil Intention

In a café, William looked at Cora with complicated eyes.

He asked, "Aren't you with Byron? Why do you do this?"

William didn't know how to describe his feelings when he learned that Cora wanted to cooperate with him and take away the Phoenix Project from Byron.

He said, "If you tell Byron that your family wants this project, I believe he will give it up."

Besides, he thought that with Byron's love for Cora, he would even send his team to help the Lane family return to its peak.

Obviously, Cora didn't want to tell him the truth. She just sneered and said, "You don't have to worry about these things. Tell me, do you want this project? Do you want to help the Yoris family get back into the circle of the four major families in New York again?"

"Yes." William did not hesitate long.

The successive scandals caused by his wife and daughter caused the Yoris family to be kicked out of the four major families.

But even so, the Hansen family still did not let them go but continued to suppress them.

If Harry hadn't tried to help them, the Yoris family would be worse than it was now.

William felt very guilty.

When he saw that Arnold, who was old, was still worried about the affairs of the family, he blamed himself even more.

He thought that if he could bring the Yoris family back to its previous state, no matter what price he had to pay, he would do it.

Right now, Cora provided him with this opportunity, and of course, William was tempted.

"Since you want to do it, why are you asking so many questions?" Cora showed no expression, and her attitude was not kind.

But seeing that Cora had lost a lot of weight recently, William felt sad in his heart.

He blurted out unconsciously. "I don't want you to do things that you will regret."

Cora said, "Come on. You are afraid that I have bad intentions, right?"

William said, "Not really, but I don't want you to regret it."

Cora took a sip of the coffee indifferently, but she felt that the taste was weird. "It's disgusting."

Then, she put down the coffee.

William knew that Cora was not talking about the coffee, but implying that his words made her sick.

Cora said, "In short, there is only one chance. If you believe me, contact this person."

She pushed Gabe's business card to William and left.

Holding the business card given by Cora, William hesitated.

When he came home, he was still lost in thought.

"Who are you thinking about? Flora?" Sara asked.

Her lesion had been removed, and the test results were promising.

However, after the fall of the Yoris family, those rich ladies who used to befriend her didn't contact her anymore.

Besides, many people had seen that she had pushed Cora downstairs before. Now she had been isolated in the social circle, and no one wanted to get close to her.

She could only stay at home all day long, and she became more irritated.

Seeing that William was still thinking about something, she was even more annoyed.

Fortunately, William didn't want to argue with her after the fall of the Yoris family.

Even though her words were mean, William didn't quarrel with her. He just scolded, "Don't talk nonsense. I was wondering why Cora would help us."

"Does that bitch want to help us? Are you stupid? She hates us so much. It's fine if she doesn't harm us. How could she help us?" Sara said.

Every time Cora was mentioned, Sara's tone was always bad.

"It's true. Today, she..." William said.

He had been worrying too much recently and had nowhere to vent it out, so he could only tell Sara the purpose of Cora's visit to him today.

He was a little hesitant, so he asked Sara to help him analyze it.

"She suddenly came to you and said he would help us. I don't think she has good intentions!" Sara said.

William thought it made sense.

However, that evening, he still contacted Gabe.

Chapter 425 Bidding Result

William changed his mind because he saw such a scene.

When he was attending a business dinner, he happened to see that Harry's sister Evelyn was making things difficult for Jane.

Evelyn said, "You are a bitch who has slept with many men. Harry is blind to continue staying with you."

Evelyn came back from the international shooting competition with a gold medal, and now she was very arrogant.

However, at today's family banquet, she and Jane had an argument, but Harry actually favored Jane completely, which made her very angry.

Seeing Jane go to the bathroom, Evelyn quickly followed her out to teach her a lesson.

Jane had always been a proud person, and how could she endure Evelyn scolding herself so much?

She immediately scolded back, "Evelyn, watch your mouth!"

Evelyn said, "Bitch, do you want to beat me? Your medical qualification certificate has been revoked.

How dare you still be so arrogant?"

Seeing Evelyn trampling on Jane's self-esteem relentlessly, William rushed forward.

He said, "Miss Evelyn Cross, please behave yourself. Jane is your brother's fiancée now!"

Evelyn sneered, "Is she worthy of Harry's fiancée?"

She looked at William, her eyes filled with disdain. "Harry is stupid, so he still stays with this bitch!"

Evelyn took her bag and left.

Facing Jane's face, she didn't want to eat anything.

William was so angry that he wanted to argue with Evelyn, but Jane dragged him and said, "Dad, forget it. Our family is declining now. It's fine to be laughed at."

Jane didn't let William argue with Evelyn because she started the battle between them today.

She couldn't bear Evelyn's arrogant posture after winning the gold medal.

Therefore, she created a scene that made Harry think Evelyn was bullying her.

As expected, Harry became angry and scolded Evelyn, so Evelyn angrily scolded Jane.

Jane's pitiful expression not only convinced William that she was bullied by Evelyn but also made him blame himself.

If their family didn't become like this, Jane would dare to fight back when she was bullied.

William thought of Cora's proposal again.

After leaving Jane, he called Gabe.

In the blink of an eye, it was the day when the result of the bidding of the Phoenix Project would be announced.

Early this morning, Byron dressed neatly and went out in high spirits.

As a gentle and virtuous wife, Cora sent him to the door.

Byron said, "Let's go out for dinner tonight. I'll leave work early."

Before parting, he put his arms around Cora's waist and kissed her on the forehead.

"Okay, be careful..." Cora said.

She watched Byron leave with a smile.

But the moment she returned to the room, the smile on her face disappeared completely.

She knew that Byron would not have dinner with her tonight.

As long as the bid for the Phoenix Project failed, Byron would investigate.

At that time, the leakage of the project plan and price would be exposed.

Cora didn't dare to imagine how angry he would be then.

Maybe he would come to her with a hideous face.

However, this was also what she wanted.

Chapter 426 Have You Calmed Down?

Because Cora had been concerned about the bidding result of the Phoenix Project and the showdown with Byron, her heart was very heavy.

Perhaps affected by her emotions, when she was about to get off work, she had her period again.

When she came out of the bathroom irritably, the phone rang.

It was Gabe.

Looking at the caller ID on the screen of the phone, Cora felt very nervous.

She didn't want to know the result of the bidding at all.

If she never knew the answer, would she be able to stay with Byron forever?

However, she knew that escaping was never the solution.

In the end, she answered the phone.

On the other side of the phone, Gabe's excited voice soon came.

He said, "Cora, it's done! We got Phoenix Project!"

When Cora heard the result, she felt her heart was dead.

Her voice became hoarse. "Really? That's great."

Gabe said, "Let's go out to celebrate tonight..."

Gabe was too excited, and he didn't notice that Cora was in a bad mood.

Cora said, "I have something tonight, so I won't go. Go celebrate and have fun."

She had already been ready for a showdown with Byron at night.

Gabe said, "Okay, I'll take you to celebrate another day."

He reminded Cora, "Tell your friend who works in Sunda Group to be careful. When the result was announced today, the person in charge of Sunda Group was furious. I think he will investigate this matter."

Cora said, "Don't worry, my friend resigned a long time ago and went abroad."

She didn't tell Gabe that she lied to him, so she could only continue to talk nonsense.

Gabe said, "That's good. I'll hang up. I need to go through some procedures."

"Okay," Nora said.

After finishing the phone call with Gabe, Cora's stomach hurt so much that she was sweating.

However, she still finished her work calmly, and then went home, waiting for Byron to come back.

She thought that after such a serious accident, Byron would stay in the company to deal with it, and he couldn't come back to have dinner with her as promised.

Unexpectedly, not long after she arrived home, Byron also came back.

What surprised her the most was that Byron gently rubbed her hair.

He said, "Why don't you change your clothes? We are going out to eat."

His tone was as gentle as ever.

It seemed that the affairs of the company did not affect his interest at all.

Cora was slightly stunned, and she thought that he didn't take his anger out on her because he hadn't found out what she had done yet.

But this nervous feeling made her uncomfortable.

She couldn't bear it, and she didn't dare to shamelessly enjoy the tenderness he gave her, who was a betrayed.

Therefore, she took the initiative to admit what she had done.

She said, "It's me. I'm the one who leaked the price and plan of the Phoenix Project. You can call the police now and arrest me."

As she spoke, she kept looking at her shoes, as if there was something reassuring.

After explaining the truth, she was waiting for Byron's trial.

But after a long time, she didn't hear his response.

It was so long that she wondered if he was still standing by her side.

When she looked up, she saw that Byron had been staring at her all the time.

However, there was no surprise on his face, let alone any anger.

It was as if there was a mask on his face.

Cora opened her mouth but didn't know what to say.

Byron broke the silence and said, "I knew. So, have you calmed down?"

Chapter 427 Let's Divorce

Byron still had a gentle look. He didn't even raise his voice, and he treated Cora gently as always.

His words made Cora push him away, and she asked, "You knew? You always knew?"

Cora suddenly recalled that day when she begged him to take her to the company. She participated in the meeting related to Phoenix Project and secretly took pictures of the meeting materials. She felt nervous and hesitating all day.

But Byron had figured out her thoughts long ago.

He didn't stop her but tried to help her so that she could help Gabe take the project away from him more smoothly.

In contrast, she had been nervous all the time, worried and afraid of the day when the truth would be revealed. She was like a joke.

Byron was pushed away, but he took the initiative to put his arms around her waist and pat her back to comfort her.

He said, "Well, don't be angry anymore. Let's go to dinner. You have lost weight recently."

He could see that she was very conflicted after learning the truth, so he tried to calm her down.

However, he didn't know that his light reaction made Cora feel more guilty.

"Don't touch me," Cora said.

She waved away Byron's hand on her waist and asked him, "Why did you ruin the Lane Group? My family has been doing business honestly. Why did you do that?"

Cora hoped that Byron would deny it.

As long as he said that the people who ruined the Lane Group were not ordered by him, Cora could find a reason to continue staying with him.

But Byron didn't say what she wanted. He said, "There are not so many reasons. Since it has happened, what do you want me to do? You caused me to lose money, and I don't blame you."

Worried that he would hurt her by talking too much, he changed his words. "Let this matter go. I'll settle the matter in New York first, and we will travel abroad after the wedding."

To make her happy, he added, "Don't you want to go to Moratoy? We will go there for our honeymoon.

You can stay there as long as you want, and I will always be with you."

However, Cora felt more disappointed as she listened to his coaxing.

She said, "How can I let it go? Because you shorted the Lane Group, my family went bankrupt, my father died, and Gabe went to jail..."

Cora could feel that Byron was trying his best to remedy all this.

He helped Gabe out and treated Cora meticulously.

But what about her father?

He would never come back!

Cora smiled coldly and said, "Byron, let's get a divorce."

Although Byron didn't personally kill her father, to Cora, he was no different from a murderer.

She couldn't continue to live with the murderer who killed her father.

Obviously, Byron did not expect that Cora would file for divorce.

His handsome face looked ugly.

He asked, "Do you want to do this for their family?"

His voice was so cold that it made one's scalp numb.

"It's true that they have no blood relationship with me, but I only have them." Cora's eyes were red.

Except for Flora, both Cora's father and Gabe treated her very well.

It was impossible for her to continue living with Byron shamelessly because they had no blood relationship with her.

Byron told her coldly, "Even so, I won't divorce you. Give up this idea."

Chapter 428 Be Followed?

Byron firmly disagreed with the divorce and left angrily.

When he slammed the door loudly, Cora quickly stepped into the bathroom.

She was on her period now and had cramps. Maybe it was because of the quarrel. The pain worsened and almost killed her.

The failure of their conversation caused Byron to not go back home for several days.

Cora wanted to find Byron to divorce but couldn't find him.

As life went on, a week passed soon.

On this day, Cora went to the food court alone after getting off work from the hospital.

For some reason, she had lost more and more appetite recently and smelt everything strange.

But today, the tacos ordered by her colleague whetted her appetite inexplicably.

So after getting off work, she headed straight to buy tacos in the food court.

She spent ten dollars buying four tacos. Standing beside the food truck, she started to eat them.

It might be that the fast food pleased her tongue, or it might be that the people coming and going in the food court made her forget the loneliness of being alone. She enjoyed the tacos with relish.

This was the most she had eaten in a while.

Just when she was about to go home, she found she was being followed.

Cora had noticed that man in the food court, who wore a black suit, looking at her fiercely.

At that time, she thought she was blocking his way, so she moved to the side.

But now, she was almost sure the man was coming for her.

If she walked fast, that person would walk fast.

When she stopped, the man found a place to hide.

Cora became increasingly restless as she walked, and she even started running.

But when she ran, her stomach hurt.

When she had no choice but to stop, she saw two people beside her, and they quickly rushed toward the vicious man.

When Cora was wondering what was going on, a man hurried up and asked, "Mrs. Hansen, are you okay?"

Cora vaguely remembered he was one of Byron's bodyguards.

"I'm fine. That person has been following me!" Cora said hastily.

"Don't worry, Mrs. Hansen. He's under control. Let me take you back."

Cora didn't dare refuse because the experience just now was too terrifying.

Along the way, she heard the bodyguard call and report the situation to Byron.

As expected, when Cora returned, Byron was already at home.

As soon as she entered the room, Byron immediately stepped forward and took her into his arms, looking her up and down.

"Are you okay?" He asked.

"I'm fine."

Cora remembered they were going to divorce.

After calming down for a moment, she voluntarily withdrew from Byron's embrace.

Byron said nothing. He asked the bodyguard, "Has the person been caught?"

"Yes. He's being held in Perpetual Daylight," the bodyguard replied.

"Okay. You take others there first, and I'll come later."

After Byron gave his order, the bodyguard left.

Then he went to Cora and said, "You must ask me to go with you in the future if you want to eat out."

"Why do I need your company? I'm already drafting a divorce petition."

Cora had a cold face.

But Byron grabbed her hand brazenly and said, "As I said, I won't divorce. Don't mess around. That's never going to happen."

Cora abruptly withdrew her hand. "Then we'll just wait."

"Fine by me," said Byron, but he kissed her on the cheek.

"Stay at home. I've left a few bodyguards outside for you. No one dares to come in and hurt you. I'll come back after finishing my work."

Cora wiped her face in disgust.

As soon as Byron left, she was suddenly disheartened.

She wanted a divorce, yet Byron wouldn't leave her alone.

Cora felt both upset and inexplicably grateful but more sad and self-blaming.

Chapter 429 In Critical Condition

Byron had fewer thoughts than Cora. After he left, he went straight to Perpetual Daylight and interrogated the man who followed Cora.

But the man had obviously been trained. He wasn't afraid of any torture instruments, nor did he say anything.

Fortunately, Carter found something.

"He entered the country half a month ago and currently works at Lionel's security company."

In other words, Lionel planned to attack Cora.

This discovery made Byron's expression extremely icy.

"Check the source of Lionel's funds and cut it off at the source."

Even though Lionel asked those killers to work for him, he had to have money.

Therefore, only by cutting Lionel's funds off at the source could the hidden danger be eliminated.

Seeing that Byron was about to leave, Carter asked, "What do you want to do with this man?"

"Isn't the biology laboratory short of lab rats? Send him there," said Byron.

Then, he went back to Cora.

When he returned, Cora had already fallen asleep.

Byron knew she couldn't sleep well and thought she would take the initiative to make peace with him after he came home.

But now, he realized he had overestimated himself.

She had fallen into deep sleep before he came back.

Byron laughed at himself.

But in the end, he lay beside Cora after washing up.

Actually, while he was away in the past few days, he only slept for three hours a day because he couldn't hug her and smell her body fragrance to sleep.

Now, with the familiar body temperature and fragrance in his arms, he didn't want to do anything but have a good sleep.

Within a few minutes, he entered a sweet dreamland with her.

In the dream, Cora said to him, "I want to give birth to your children."

His lips couldn't help but curve upwards in a smile.

However, the dream seemed to be always the opposite of reality.

As soon as he woke up the next morning, Cora drew boundaries with him again.

"If you want to live here, I'll move out."

Cora said what Byron hated to hear the most on such a beautiful morning.

Byron stretched out his long arms, bringing Cora, who was about to get out of bed, back.

He trapped her in his arms and whispered in her ear, "Okay. Remember to tell me where you will move to."

"Why do I need to tell you?"

Cora hurriedly pushed him away because she heard the hoarseness unique to the early morning from his voice and his longing for her.

But he was stronger than she. Instead of letting her push away, he hugged her tighter.

Meanwhile, he continued whispering in her ear, "Tell me, and I will move there."

"I moved out because I don't want to live under the same roof with you anymore."

Cora learned the divorce laws in the past two days.

A divorce required two-party consent.

If she still wanted to divorce, the two parties had to be legally separated for six months or one year.

She planned to do it.

But if Byron wanted to move in with her, it wouldn't be a separation.

Her cheeks were flushed with anger, but Byron still pecked at the tip of her ear lightly.

"You don't want to, but I want. You are my wife. I will follow you wherever you go!"

He disagreed with the divorce and even said sweet words.

Cora was so angry that she pushed Byron away hard.

Maybe Byron was afraid of hurting her, so he didn't force her to make out.

When the two were going to work, Byron said, "I'll pick you up after work."

Cora knew he was afraid she would be followed again. But she was mad now and deliberately said something to anger him.

"No. I'm going to find other men!"

"I'll break the legs of any man you'll find. If there are too many broken legs, let's see who dares to make a pass at you."

Cora was speechless.

She knew Byron was hard to argue with, so she just shut up.

But she had to think of a way to anger Byron after getting off work.

Cora was so focused on how to anger Byron and divorce. She never thought she would be brought to the emergency room before leaving work.

Chapter 430 She's Pregnant!

It happened very suddenly.

At that time, Cora was still in the emergency room, giving CPR to a patient in cardiac arrest.

As a result, as soon as the patient was rescued, she felt dizzy and fainted completely.

"Dr. Lane?"

"What's wrong, Dr. Lane?"

"Wake up. Dr. Lane?"

Before falling completely into unconsciousness, Cora heard the cries of her colleagues and patients.

But her heavy eyelids drooped, and she couldn't open her eyes no matter what.

Byron got off work on time, left the company, and headed to the hospital to pick up Cora.

But he received a call from Sally on the way. "Is this Mr. Hansen?"

"Yes! Did something happen to Cora?"

Byron knew Sally would not have taken the initiative to contact him if something had not happened to Cora.

Reminiscent of her being followed by the killer yesterday, he still had lingering fears.

"Yes. Cora fainted and was rescued. Please come here quickly."

Byron immediately put his phone aside upon hearing that. He pressed down the accelerator pedal and even ran through a few red lights.

When he rushed to the hospital, Sally was pacing back and forth outside the emergency room.

Byron quickly stepped forward and asked, "How is Cora?"

"I have no idea. She's still inside."

Sally was also anxious.

She just went upstairs to the andrology department to help.

Unexpectedly, as soon as she came back, she learned that Cora had fainted and been sent to the emergency room.

Sally was almost out of mind with anxiety and worries.

But she couldn't make decisions about Cora's affairs on her own. So she found the phone number she and Byron exchanged when Cora officially introduced him as her boyfriend and called him.

Byron turned his head to look at the emergency room, where the lights were still on, and his heart sank continuously.

Fortunately, the emergency room lights went out more than ten minutes later, and the door opened soon.

Byron rushed to the doctor almost immediately. "How is she?"

To Byron, the more than ten minutes that had just passed seemed as long as more than a dozen centuries.

During this period, he kept blaming himself.

Lately, Cora had no appetite, her face was pale, and she had obviously lost a lot of weight.

He always thought it was because she was angry that he had shorted the Lane Group.

But now he realized she had a physical problem.

Byron blamed himself!

It was all because of him not taking good care of her that made her sick.

He was even thinking that no matter what kind of illness Cora had, he would do whatever it took to cure her.

But at this time, the doctor told him, "She is pregnant. There is no physical problem, but the mental pressure leads to..."

The doctor was still talking about other things.

But at this moment, Byron couldn't listen to anything else, and there seemed to be countless fireworks blooming in his brain.

He already felt he had gotten her back when learning there was no problem with Cora's body.

To his surprise, the doctor brought him such exciting news.

Cora was pregnant!

She was pregnant with his child.

They finally had the fruit of their love.

Byron felt this was the happiest moment of his life.

But at this time, the medical staff pushed Cora out of the emergency room.

She was already awake and had heard what the doctor had said just now.

But she couldn't sympathize with Byron's happiness, and her mind was only in chaos.

"How could I be pregnant? That's impossible. I had the period a few days ago."

She seemed to be mumbling.

But when the doctor heard it, he smiled and asked, "Is it light?"

Cora thought about it and nodded.

"That's right. It's a threatened abortion. So during this period, you have to stay in bed."

The doctor's words completely plunged Cora into despair.

She was about to divorce, but she was pregnant.

How could she face Gabe and her dead father?