

Snatched 481

Chapter 481 Probably a Genius

After leaving Nora's room, Cora went to Sadie McLean, the head nurse of the hospital, after much deliberation...

"You need to figure out a way to get Madam Hansen to take these pills."

Sadie frowned as she looked at those unremarkable little pills.

"Will these pills have any negative effects on Madam Hansen?"

Sadie was also afraid of any consequences, especially considering Nora's high status.

If the Hansen family really took legal action, she could end up in prison for the rest of her life.

"No worries. These pills can treat cancer. I've been compiling the research data about them, and they will be available for sale soon."

In the four years since Cora left the First Hospital, she had been doing research on traditional medicine. The hospital's higher-ups were aware of that.

So, when Sadie heard Cora say that, she felt much more at ease.

The key was that she trusted Cora's character and medical skills.

Back when she had a cerebral hemorrhage, despite being taken to the doctor relatively quickly, she still ended up with partial paralysis.

At that time, she felt truly desperate, thinking she would never have the chance to return to her favorite job.

Coincidentally, Cora returned to New York to pay homage to Byron and was summoned to the hospital to sign some documents. She happened to see Sadie being pushed in a wheelchair by her family, which led her to inquire about Sadie's situation.

Then, Cora gave Sadie a few pills and asked her to try them.

At that time, Sadie had to rely on the care of her underage children.

Those days left her feeling that she might be better off dead so as not to burden her children.

Thus, when Cora gave her those pills, she thought of it as a last-ditch effort.

Unexpectedly, it was those pills that allowed her to stand up again in just a few days and return to normal.

Even her attending doctor was amazed and kept asking her how she did it.

Sadie asked for Cora's opinion. Cora didn't want to be credited for her recovery, so she told the attending doctor that her exceptional recovery had to do with her being in good health.

However, because of that experience, Sadie was confident when she heard Cora claim that the medicine could cure cancer.

"Can we mix these with Madam Hansen's other medicine? If I hand these to her separately, she might get suspicious."

"Yes, you can," Cora replied.

So, Sadie mixed the pills among the other medicine prescribed by the doctor.

However, on the same day, Jane and Sara also came to visit Nora.

After Byron left, the Yoris family maintained a neutral relationship with the Hansen family.

Given the families' past friendship, a visit from the members of the Yoris family was only natural.

"Madam Hansen, here's an anti-cancer medicine that I've been researching lately. I've tried it on several patients, and the results are promising."

Jane presented to Nora an anti-cancer solution she made herself.

Nora smiled and asked Osborn to accept it. "I appreciate it."

"Jane has been busy working with patients recently, and many cancer patients have sought her out specifically. After taking the solution she developed, they are feeling much better."

Sara had a tendency to brag about Jane while in Nora and Osborn's presence, as if trying to show them what they had missed out on.

"You wouldn't believe it, but regular patients would have to wait for several days just to get an appointment with Jane. Also, this solution is not available to the general public."

Listening to Sara's enthusiastic praises, Nora and Osborn exchanged glances...