Chapter 482 Prepare for Pregnancy

Both Osborn and Nora were perceptive, so they were aware that Sara was praising Jane to make them realize that Byron not marrying her was a huge loss for the Hansen family.

In fact, Osborn and Nora did regret allowing Cora and Byron to be together, as it almost led to a tragic separation of the couple.

But despite their regrets, they didn't want to let Sara in on it lest it would boost her arrogance.

"Is that so? Jane is such an outstanding woman!"

Nora merely gave an off-handed remark.

However, Sara said, "Jane doesn't only demonstrate exceptional talent in medicine. Recently, she'll also be representing New York in the Continental Crafts Competition."

She added, "Her opponents are nothing special, just those who have been defeated by Jane in the past two years..."

In other words, the gold prize for the Continental Crafts Competition would soon be Jane's.

Yet, Nora wasn't interested in that.

Since Jane had already married Harry, her excellence no longer had anything to do with Byron or the Hansen family.

So, she quickly pretended to be tired and asked Osborn to send the guests away.

Sara hadn't finished bragging about Jane, so she felt unhappy upon being dismissed like that.

"That old lady is definitely in denial of her regrets. That's why she doesn't want to see us."

Jane held Sara's hand. "Mom, you should stop bragging about me so much in front of others. I feel embarrassed."

"What's there to be embarrassed about? You are truly outstanding. You deserve all the praise in the world," Sara said.

She then had a question for Jane.

"By the way, I met Harry's mother the day before yesterday, and she made mention of the family needing an heir again. How about you start preparations for pregnancy after the competition next year?"

In her eyes, Jane was great in every way.

However, the Cross family had been somewhat dissatisfied with the fact that Jane hadn't gotten pregnant.

However, Jane's reply was the same as ever. "Let me think about it."

In fact, she still couldn't fully accept Harry, especially now she knew Byron was still alive...

Up until then, she continued taking contraceptives without her family's knowledge.

"You and Harry are getting older, so have a child. With the financial resources of both families, you won't need to take care of the child yourself. All you need to do is bear us a child," Sara said.

From Jane's perspective, it wasn't about the efforts needed to raise a child.

So, she quickly changed the subject. "Mom, weren't you going to go shopping? Let's go. It's been a long time since we shopped together."

Sara's attention was quickly diverted. "Right, it's been a long time since we went shopping together.

How about we have some food after shopping?"

"Sure, I think some alcohol would be nice too..."

They chattered as they quickly walked away.

After they left, Osborn intended to throw away the solution Jane brought them.

During that period, many people had taken the initiative to send medical supplements to Nora.

She had tried a few but found no effect. She even ended up in the emergency room a few times because of some of them.

Since then, whenever someone brought her supplements, she wouldn't even spare them a glance and would ask Osborn to discard them right away.

Thus, Osborn thought she would do the same to Jane's solution.

Unexpectedly, Nora spoke up as soon as he picked up the bag of items.

"Hang on, Osborn."
