Chapter 620 Not Quite Love

At that moment, Jerry felt as if his heart had sunk into the bottomless deep sea and kept falling.

"So you started over with him?"

Although he already knew the answer, he still asked Cora.

As long as she said that she was not with him, even if she lied to him, he would still choose to believe her.

But Cora said, "Yes, we are together again."

In an instant, Jerry felt as if his heart was sliced open.

Then, the rest of it also began to shatter and finally scattered all over the place.

He had been in countless relationships and had countless breakups.

But never before had he felt heartbroken like today.

"Then what are your plans for the future? Go back to New York, or stay in Leucrest Town? Also, what about Martin?"

He felt that his eye sockets were getting hotter.

"We have to discuss things in the future. But I think I should go back to New York. You know, my biological parents are also there."

Cora actually liked Leucrest Town very much, but she was afraid that Jerry would be sad to see her and Martin.

Therefore, she might as well not prolong the pain.

Seeing Jerry lowering his eyes, Cora could not help but pat him on the shoulder, comforting.

"Jerry, you are so handsome, gentle, and considerate. You should soon meet a woman who loves you wholeheartedly..."

Four years.

For more than a thousand days and nights, it was Jerry's company that allowed her to gain a foothold in this strange city.

It was also his company that allowed her to give birth to Martin safely.

It was not that she had no feelings for Jerry.

However, it was just beyond friendship, but not quite love.

However, Cora was surprised to see that when she comforted Jerry in such a soft voice, Jerry suddenly raised his head, and his eyes looked like he had successfully pulled a prank.

"Are you comforting me? Do you think I'm sad? Stupid, I've been in so many relationships. If I had to be sad every time, I would have died young."

Jerry successfully pranked Cora, and she looked at him in a daze.

Jerry laughed and said, "But, although I've been in so many relationships, I've always been the one who dumped others. You're the first who dared to dump me. Since you're the first, you have to promise me three things. Only then I'll break up with you peacefully."

Because in the matter of breaking up, Cora always felt that she owed Jerry, so she agreed straight away. "Okay, tell me what you want."

"First, you will attend Grandpa's birthday banquet with me today. No matter what I say, you can't refuse me."

"Second, before you leave Leucrest Town, accompany me to the dentist and have this decayed tooth pulled out."

"Third, you and Martin eat fried chicken with me one more time..."

When Jerry raised his eyebrows and said this with a smile, Cora also felt a little better.

"These are all fine. But didn't you say that lying down and letting the dentist pull out your teeth is like a pig waiting to get slaughtered? Are you sure you want me to watch when you get slaughtered?"

"Well, I'm just worried you might realize too late that I'm the most handsome man and best boyfriend for you. So, I'm just helping you to eliminate that possibility, okay?"

Jerry blew upwards to raise his bangs and, at the same time, showed a handsome and charming smile to Cora.

"Why? Do you regret breaking up with me more now? If you regret it now, I can treat it like you never said anything."

Cora was amused and raised her hand to beat him. "Aren't you going to attend the birthday banquet?

Aren't we leaving?"

Jerry followed. Under his bright and flamboyant smile, sadness was hidden in his eyes.

Just like that, the two arrived at John's birthday banquet.

Seeing a lot of young women at the birthday banquet, Cora wanted to leave.

So Jerry reminded her.

Cora said, "I'm just worried that I might hinder your luck with the ladies."

"Before you fulfill my three requests, you are my luck. And tonight, you have to be my companion and help me drive away those ladies."

Jerry's words gave Cora a headache.

But when she raised her head to meet the sinister gaze not far away, her head ached even more...
