

Snatched 621

Chapter 621 Confrontation

Byron followed William and Sara to John's birthday banquet. As soon as he arrived, he glanced around the birthday banquet hall and quickly saw Cora.

Tonight, she wore a mermaid dress in black with ruffled sleeves. The close-fitting cut made her graceful curves even more prominent.

Her long hair was tied into a tall ball head, leaving only a few strands of long hair around her ears, permed into enchanting curls, swaying in the wind.

She also put on makeup, not the type of exaggerated heavy makeup, but a very simple and elegant one, with only a little glossy lip oil on her lipstick.

However, for some reason, such light makeup looked stunning on her face.

Byron admired Cora's appearance very much. However, when his eyes fell on her hand in Jerry's arms, the light in his eyes quickly faded away.

Instead, there was a hostile look on his handsome face.

At this time, Jerry also quickly saw Byron.

Byron was tall, handsome, and personable!

Even in a crowded and noisy place like a birthday banquet, he was still the most eye-catching.

However, Jerry also quickly noticed the sharp warning in Byron's eyes. Thus, he suddenly grinned and nodded at him.

At the same time, he took the initiative to walk over with Cora. "Ladies, gentlemen, and Mr. Hansen.

Thank you for coming."

While Sara and William responded with a smile, William asked again, "Where is Old Mr. Lloyd? We want to go and congratulate him."

Meanwhile, Sara glanced at Cora frequently as if asking Cora, "Didn't you reconcile with Byron? Why are you with Jerry again?"

Cora also had a headache because she knew that someone else, like Sara, had also misunderstood her.

She could clearly tell by how cold his eyes were now.

Cora wanted to go forward and say something, but Jerry suddenly tapped the back of her hand, forcing her to look up at him.

Looking at each other, Cora saw the cunning in Jerry's eyes, which seemed to be reminding her that she was only allowed to accompany him today. She could not do anything intimate with Byron, as it would be a critical blow to someone who had just broken up.

Cora was angry and frustrated.

But when she thought of what Jerry had done for her and Martin, she did not step forward in the end.

"Grandpa is over there." When Jerry spoke, his eyes fell on Byron again.

The two men had the same outstanding temperament but clearly also were hostile to each other.

Even if one just stood near them, one could feel the inexplicable flames dancing in the air.

"Then let's celebrate the Old Mr. Lloyd's birthday first, and we'll talk later." William looked around at his daughter's ex-husband and current boyfriend and then pulled Sara away.

Sara actually did not want to leave, but she could not resist William's strength.

In the end, she could only leave with William.

But halfway through, Sara could not help complaining, "What are you doing? Didn't you see that those two were about to fight because of your daughter?"

"Anyway, they dare not beat my daughter. What am I afraid of?"

"But..."

Sara was still worried about Cora and Martin.

But before she finished speaking, William said again, "Don't worry, these two children are from famous families, and they are smart and sensible enough. They will never make trouble in public. Because it concerns your daughter's reputation!"

"What if your prediction is wrong?"

"That can only prove that neither of them is qualified to be your daughter's husband!"

Then, William brought Sara up to congratulate John.