Chapter 629 She Will Come Back?

"Mr. Hansen, these are the documents that need your review..."

As soon as he entered the office, Carter regretted it a little.

Because even if the university belle would become his wife and immediately bore him a baby, it still couldn't make up for the violent eye attack he suffered from Byron at this time.

"Why, other people have no hands or feet, and you have to deliver the documents?" Byron's voice was colder than his eyes.

Just listening to it, Carter felt he should return and add two down jackets.

"No, I was just about to come in, and they asked me to send them to you." Carter hastily put down the file and was about to turn around and leave.

But no matter how fast he was, he still couldn't avoid the reproach. "Who is paying you, and who are you working for?"

Carter felt he might have to step on the sewing machine if he stayed here.

So he quickly threw out a sentence. "I found out today that the lease of Household No. 3 on the 3rd floor of Building A2 in Shangri-La Community has expired, and they are about to move out."

Building A2 of Shangri-La Community was the apartment building where Cora lived in New York.

Household No. 2 was rented by Cora, House No. 1 was leased by the elderly couple, and House No. 3 was rented by a young woman whose rent came due and was getting ready to leave.

"It seems I have given you too little work recently, and you are so bored to inquire about these irrelevant things!" Byron glanced at him coldly.

Carter quickly moved his poker face, showing a not-so-ugly smile. "It's not an insignificant matter!"

Why did he suddenly inquire about this?

Wasn't it because after Byron returned to New York, he was like a cloud of thunderclouds daily, densely covering the Hansen Group's Building?

The executives of the Hansen Group's collectively complained, but no one suffered more than Carter.

At least other people could avoid Byron's anger far away except for submitting documents.

But he, Carter, was the assistant of Byron, and he had to report to him every day and listen to his orders, so it was impossible to avoid him no matter what.

So in the past few days, he had been struck by lightning the most times.

Now his calm facade couldn't bear to cover his disturbed heart any longer. He would be damned if he didn't save himself.

He knew that some time ago, Byron suddenly left New York for Leucrest Town because of Cora.

But this time, when Byron returned to New York, he came back alone.

It was conceivable that Byron's ferocious temper was caused by Cora's not coming back with him.

For this reason, Carter specially called Cora to say hello...

Of course, the content of the phone call was more on the sidelines. How did Cora turn Byron into a cloud of thunder so that no matter who he caught, he would hack at random?

But Cora had a very strict mouth and refused to say anything. However, Carter still got some useful information.

But before he finished speaking, Byron scolded him again, "Talk about things that have nothing to do with work during working hours, and I will inform the accounting department later that your bonus this month will be donated directly to welfare institutions..."

Not to be outdone, Carter said, "Miss Lane will return to New York in no more than two weeks!"

Byron was taken aback and then asked, "She will return to New York? How do you know?"

It had been several days since he came back from Leucrest Town.

These days, he had been waiting for her call. He only needed her one call, even one message.

It didn't matter if she didn't explain what had happened that night between her and Jerry. He would give up everything if she actively took one step toward him.

But no. No matter how long he waited, the woman seemed to want to keep out of touch with him forever. She never sent him any messages, let alone a phone call.

He was even disqualified from viewing her Instagram. This made him doubt his position in Cora's heart more and more. He felt more and more hopeless.

He even felt that Cora had already decided to stay in Leucrest Town and live with Jerry, so his temper would become increasingly irritable.

Who would have thought that Carter told him that Cora planned to return again?
